BROOKINGS, S. D.

Universal Film Exchanges, Inc.,
Minneapolis, Minn.

We played "Outside the Law" two days at the Fad and I am glad to advise that the picture pleased our people—and this is a college and strict church town—hard to suit.

Personally I considered it a fine picture, the work of Priscilla Dean standing out because of the vivid impersonation she gives to her rôles. Lon Chaney's work was very good, and Wheeler Oakman, in my opinion, did the best work of his career.

Sincerely,

It is with great pleasure that I write you regarding "Outside the Law." I consider this picture the best crook picture that I have ever seen and same played to capacity for the run here at the Sexton. "Outside the Law" has everything and will do capacity for any exhibitor that plays same. When you get another picture like this one, let me know.

Just a few words regarding the Jewel feature, "Outside the Law." We ran this feature March 17th, 18th and 19th with business conditions in general very much depressed and did a fine business the first day with more box office receipts each succeeding day. Consider "Outside the Law' one of the best pictures from a box office standpoint that we have ever run. Give us more like this one.

It gives me great pleasure to write you that "Outside the Law" which we played the week of April 18th, proved to be one of the biggest money getters we had this season. We played it the entire week, which is something unusual at the Strand Theatre, and it held up every day. On Tuesday it broke all records for any day in the history of the theatre.

Novel Stunt for "Reputation"

THE exploitation campaign for "Reputation," the latest Universal-Jewel film starring Priscilla Dean, already promises to be greater than the one being staged on "Outside the Law," which has so far proven to be the costliest and most far reaching ever put behind a Universal picture.

In the campaign press sheet which will be distributed by the Universal exchanges are a number of strong and interest compelling exploitation ideas. These are suitable to both large and small towns and many of the chief ones capitalize the title of the photoplay.

One of the best of the exploitation stunts devised for "Reputation" is the "Scandal Sheet," the tabloid newspaper prepared to be used as a throwaway. Nearly a million copies of this paper, in size 9½ by 12½ inches, have been printed to be distributed at cost by the exchanges to exhibitors booking the Dean picture.

On the first page of the paper which has a scare headline in red ink there is a dramatic account of the scene in a large New York theatre when the real Laura Figlan accuses her daughter of stealing her "reputation." The main story is supplemented with an interview granted by the woman who claims that she is the real Laura Figlan.

Stories relating to the life history of the great French actress and the life of the daughter who rose from obscurity to achieve fame on Broadway are printed on the inside pages. Other news dispatches all relating to "Reputation" are also contained on this page.

These "Scandal Sheets" were made for exhibitors to put around their towns just as newspapers are distributed. The sensational appearance of the Scandal Sheet and its novel makeup will cause people to read it from cover to cover and form the topic of conversation for your town.

In addition to the Scandal Sheets your exchange can supply you with maxims of Reputation all written by Priscilla Dean and printed on a good grade of heavy coated paper. Universal recently has enlisted the aid of many newspapers throughout the country in the movement which has for its fundamental purpose the popularization of the name of the picture and the star.

The national campaign is based on a group of maxims or "commandments" having to do with "reputation" and purposes to instill a better understanding of the importance of good reputation in business and social life.

The "commandments" originally were sent out under the name, Priscilla, with the explanation that they formed the code with which women the country over were trying to concentrate the attenion of young men and young women on the vital importance of guarding their good names.

The "code" has been printed far and wide, accompanied by requests that readers send in heir own thoughts on the subject of "reputation" in verse or essay form to the various newspapers

Putting Thrills in the Weekly News Reels

"TELL the Sultan to come back," ordered an International News photographer as the Sultan of Turkey was leaving the Imperial Palace one day, "or else I can't take his picture." No, this wasn't the last statement of an American camera man as he passed out of the Ottoman Empire, but was the edict issued by E. C. Wallen, who was sent to the Turkish Capitol to take some views of the sovereign of the Turks.

And the Sultan came back, too, and graciously allowed fifty feet of film to be ground out for the entertainment of American film fans. The next day he conferred on Wallen the order of Fine Arts. On the day the International staff man was at the Turkish palace word was received that the Sultan would passthrough one of the rooms at a certain hour.

At the appointed time Wallen was ushered into a room with closely drawn curtains and into this semi-darkness the Sultan and his staff walked from the opposite entrance. Wallen walked to a window and pulled the draperies aside, letting in a flood of sunshine. The chief, aghast at this breach of court etiquette, turned around and left —or rather started to leave the room, but then he had never met Wallen or an American camera man before. This probably was the first time he had met with such an unusual request in the safety of his own palace.

CAMERA MEN MUST HAVE STRONG HEARTS

THE work of filming the news of the day is no job for anyone with a weak heart or unsteady nerves. The pictures shown here represent some of the chances taken by the news camera men in their daily work.

During the great Bayonne, N. J., oil workers' strike several years ago, the camera man was a target for both sides.

Record Made of Important Events

THE news reel of the present has changed greatly—all the events of any importance have been filmed, and, as there is a certain similarity between events of the same sort, every attempt is made to photograph them from a different angle. Nearly everything is taken both from the ground and from the air. Films of important events are stored in vaults for historical purposes. The pictures of Harding's Inauguration, showing Wilson as he is today, are valuable as comparison with the negative taken in 1913, showing his different appearance before his stormy administration as President. These films run together would tell a story more dramatic than words.

The thing nowadays is not so much news pictures as new pictures showing the originality and the daring of the operator.

The greatest problem facing the news reel at present is an economic one. Exhibitors demand a news picture immediately. The result is that where a dramatic production will only require 100 to 125 positive prints for even a big production, a news feature will require 300 to be made. In a dramatic production the life of a print is from eight to nine months. At the end of six weeks a news reel is old, and the country is flooded with still good prints on which no more money can be collected.

Experiments are now being made on a substitute for the present raw stock, or else a cheaper stock, so that the expense of releasing a great number of positives on big news pictures may be lessened.

E. B. Hatrick, who has helped materially in making International what it is, organized the still photographic service with Hearst for all papers in 1910 and in 1911 was put in charge of the International News Films.

DURING the busy days of demobilization, when our fleet was returning the army from France, the camera-men were active filming the work of the transports and their protecting convoys. This picture shows two camera-men on the bridge of an Eagle boat.

Men Risk Lives for News

THE moving picture camera man must have good nerves. J. H. Brockhorst has made all the Jersey Ringle pictures—frequently endangering his life by doing so. In an army plane he looped the loop while making at the same time pictures of the city of Washington as it whirled around him.

Photographing current events is often more dangerous than a battle field. One of the International camera men who had been decorated for bravery during the war was sent to Bayonne to do street scenes during a strike. Bullets were ploughing up the ground from every angle, and all kinds of weapons were used from each conceivable vantage point. He reported that he preferred the battlefront, for no one knew where the enemy was in this kind of fighting.

The mob escorted the camera man twice to the station and saw them on board the train with threats and curses, for the police had secured International movies of a former riot and sent the offenders to prison by identifying them in this manner. The last time they rode the photographers in a Ford to a stopping place further down the line and waited until the train pulled out. In spite of this, excellent pictures were obtained.

Sometimes the operator has no airplane and has to walk out on the end of a girder and take pictures hundreds of feet above the ground in order to take a bird's-eye view of a city. The wind is blowing—he has nothing to hang onto and must use both his hands for the camera. He needs all of his nerve for a job of this order.

Resourceful Task of Filming Notable Men

IN 1920 the International obtained two of the biggest triumphs of the film world. Both the Pope and the Sultan of Turkey consented to pose for their pictures.

The interview with the Holy Father was arranged through John Kennedy, publicity representative of the Knights of Columbus. Pope Benedict was posed in the Vatican gardens by the best known news camera man in the world, Captain Ariel Varges, who served in a special capacity three years with the British army and performed camera feats which are without equal.

In this manner the head of one of the biggest organizations in the world—religious or otherwise—was brought before the eyes of his followers all over the globe.

Perhaps the most amusing incident connected with photographing prominent people took place during Wilson's honeymoon, when he issued a strict order that no pictures were to be taken of him at the Southern springs where he was taking his wedding trip. The President and his bride went early every morning to the golf links, on which there was a summer house. The operator entered this at midnight, lifted up the floor and burrowed under the boards, placing the camera where it would focus through the chinks in the masonry. The next morning he placed himself in position and hired an old fellow to turn a grindstone nearby and drown the sound of the camera. In due time the President and Mrs. Wilson came walking near the summer-house, and the pictures were procured.

The up-to-date camera man has to be a person of resourcefulness and diplomacy. J. Pierpont Morgan dislikes the camera almost as much as his father, who never under any circumstances allowed himself to be snapshotted. A camera man rowed for hours around a small artificial lake, hoping to get a shot at him. Finally he came to the edge of the lake while talking to another man and the wind caught his hat and blew it into the water.

"Get my hat!" he yelled to the supposed boatman, pointing to where it lay bobbing some distance off.

"Sure, if you'll let me take a movie of you," called back the International man. Morgan laughed. The joke was on him and he posed like a good sport.

DURING fleet manoeuvers the tossing deck of a scout cruiser formed the somewhat unsteady base for the camera of this photographer, who, nevertheless, returned with some excellent scenes.

My dear Mr. Skoog;

Having just completed a record run on "OUTSIDE THE LAW" at our Theatre, I feel duty bound to congratulate you on this wonderful production.

Personally I think it is one of the biggest box office attractions of the year, and am very pleased to say that it made a new house record for us (formerly held by "THE DEVIL'S PASS KEY"). Business increased with the run, which compelled us to hold the picture over an additional day.

I also want to take this opportunity to thank you for the wonderful co-operation you gave us in exploiting "OUTSIDE THE LAW", and assure you same was greatly appreciated.

Trusting that you are having the success through out the territory you are entitled to on this picture, and with kindest personal regards, I am

Very truly yours,

Kid	John Judd
Bell	Jane Talent

THE Cactus Kid, a ranger, comes to Heldville, called by those who know it, "Hellville." Momentary anxiety is caused by his advent, but it is soon learned that he is not there on business, and almost every native is relieved. Hawkins, dance hall proprietor, an evil man, has long sought the love of Mary, a young widow who lives in a poor shack with her little son. Mary's husband, who was a miner and Haskins's partner was killed two years before in a mysterious fashion and it was never learned what became of the gold he was known to have struck. The Ranger becomes acquainted with Mary when he rescues her little boy, the Kid, from a rough scene in the saloon, knocking out a man to accomplish it. The Ranger is greatly impressed with her and his calls become frequent. Haskins' jealousy is aroused.

Double-crosses Ranger

The Ranger, in order to relieve Mary's poverty, gets some old clothes from the dance hall girls and takes them to Mary, saying they belong to his wife who is too ill to sew. But Mary discovers the deception and knows the Ranger has done it from sheer kindness. When the Ranger has gone, Haskins sets upon a scheme to discredit him with Mary.

The Ranger returns at Christmas time. He takes up a collection from the boys and sends one of them to town to buy out a store for the Kid. Before many more visits on Mary, the Ranger has won her love and they become engaged. Haskins learns of this and is furious, for he wants Mary for himself. He plots against them and in this is overheard by Belle, a dance hall favorite of Haskins', who is jealous of the latter's attentions to Mary.

Belle Overhears Plot

Christmas comes and a great party is given the Kid. The rough men find their first clean joy in years in watching him go for his presents. But a cloud crosses the joy of some, when Haskins presents evidence to the effect that Mary's husband was killed by the Ranger. The latter comes to see Mary but she bars the door to him. He does not know what is wrong untill Belle seeks him and tells all through jealousy. The Ranger seeks Haskins man, who swore the Ranger was a murderer, trying to get out of town. He chases him.

Meanwhile, Haskins is again trying to win Mary. She has lost faith and seems almost ready to take him on any terms. The Kid, playing with some of his toys, loses a ball through a hole in the floor. Digging after it he unearths a cache of gold, put there by Mary's husband before his death. Haskins claims this as his, but tells Mary she can have it if she will take him. A revulsion of feeling comes over her. She refuses and they struggle for the gold. The Ranger catches the other man and forces a confession from him. He returns in time to rescue Mary from Haskins, whom he arrests for the murder of his former partner, Mary's husband. And before he takes him away to jail, the Ranger makes Mary promise that she will await his return.

"BROWNIE" THE WONDER DOG

BETTY leaves the child at the County Orphan Asylum while she delivers the weekly laundry to the batchelor's home. But the kid escapes and slides down a chute from the second story landing in the basket which Betty is dragging along behind her.

At the bachelor's the baby is turned over to Brownie, the valet, who gives the baby a bath, filling the small tub with water and placing a screen around the outdoor bathroom.

Later the baby roams out into the street where she is picked up by an officer. Brownie saves his little playmate as the baby is about to be placed in the wagon and taken to the Children's Society Home, by substituting another baby who looks like his pal.

Betty and the bachelor find Brownie coming down the street with the baby. The child says that she wants the man for a daddy, and with Brownie tugging at his trousers' leg and the baby pulling at his coat lapel, he could hardly resist, and the baby's wish is granted.

THE Spider and his gang chase after Ramsey and the bracelet while Jean and Allen face drowning in the pit at the outlaws' caves. By means of the ropes with which they are bound, they escape from the pit and leave for Allen's ranch.

In the treasure caves, Ramsey gets away from the Mummy Man who has pursued him and opening the moving cliffs, rides out. He sees and is seen by the Spider's men who start after him. He rides back into the caves and they close behind him and the gang do not know where he disappeared.

Cuevas, the Indian, left unconscious by Ramsey, comes to and joins Onava, an Indian girl confederate on the same mission handed down to them from their forefathers.

Ramsey comes out of the caves and heads for the Allen ranch. The Indians see him and follow to the ranch, where they hold him up and take the bracelet. Allen and Jean arrive and Allen in turn holds up the Indians. He demands the bracelet. Onava gives him a counterfeit and escapes with the real one.

Ramsey treacherously leads the Spider's gang to capture Allen at the ranch. He does not know Allen has left. They capture Jean and leave two men guarding her, while they hurry to the caves after Allen and the Indian. They capture them and take the bracelet. They tie them behind their horses which they herd down a precipice.

Ramsey attempts to open the cliffs with the counterfeit bracelet and when it will not work, accuses the Spider of switching them on him. The outlaws believe he is double-crossing them and they start to hang him.

At the ranch house, the two guards have fought a battle for Jean, one is knocked out and the other grabs the girl in his arms.

Featuring
BILLY FLETCHER

BILLY, on the hunt for the secret of making holes in Swiss cheese, is disguised as a yodeler in a small town in the Alps. In the same town are two foreign spies also there on the same mission.

He meets a Swiss dancer, who he learns is the daughter of the only man possessing the secret.

One day while knitting, the girl drops her ball of yarn, and Billy eagerly takes up the trail followed by the two spies. Outside her father's home Billy notices the others following him and in a short fight subdues his rivals.

He succeeds in getting inside the castle and demands the secret from the girl's father. The only information he receives, however, is that the holes are put in Swiss cheese by the same process as the holes in doughnuts. The cheese factory is blown up and Billy is left buried under the avalanche of wild cheeses.

TIME was when all that an exhibitor needed or thought he needed to make money in showing moving pictures was the film itself and a lot of lurid, blood-and-thunder posters. That time has long passed. The day of the showman has come in the moving picture business, as it came in the theatrical business. In order to make money now an exhibitor has to have not only good pictures, the kind that Universal consistently supplies, but he must have the kind of posters that attract without exciting and in addition he must have the co-operation of trained publicity and advertising experts. Why? Because every other exhibitor is doing the same thing. Your competition is now the competition of the wide-awake showman who is using showmanship methods, who is using the methods devised for him by clever advertising and publicity people who have studied the picture to be advertised from every angle, and have selected the most effective angles and have put into his hands prepared advertisements, ingeniously written newspaper stories, properly selected photographs(mats and cuts); in a word, have given him ready-made just the kind of exploitation material which he would devise himself if he had the time and the training to do it. In presenting to you this four-page Universal press sheet, a typical one, not especially selected for the purpose, but one of the regular week in and week out sheets which emanate from the publicity office of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, the

THE STORY

John Wesley Pringle, adventurer, returns to Gadsden after making his pile, to claim the love of Stella Vorhis, the daughter of his former ranch partner. He finds she is in love with Chris Foy, a younger man, and the candidate for sheriff. That night Pringle prevent a frame up in the hotel where he is stopping and trounces Mat Lissner, the present sheriff He finds he has saved the life of a stranger, who turns out to be Foy

Lissner and his gang plan a new frame-up on Foy and cause him to take to the hills, where he barricades himself on the peak of an almost inaccessible mountain. Pringle, because of his love for Stella, decides to help Foy out He carries food and water to the trapped man.

Suddenly he hits Foy a terrific wallop and knocks him out. Pringle then has a parley with the sheriff's men and delivers Foy over to them. On the way back, however, he gets the drop on the bunch and releases Foy, and causes the arrest of the sheriff's band by a troop of rurales who have ridden up.

Foy is unable to understand the rapid change of events as Pringle later explains to the assembled crowd that he hit his young rival because he knew it was the only way to get him off the top of the mountain—so treacherous was the sheriff

The sheriff is jailed for the murder of a man whose death he had tried to lay at Foy's door Pringle, after seeing that his sweetheart and her young lovers are happy again, rides away, hiding his broken heart.

CAREY'S PORTRAYALS HUMAN

STAR POPULAR BECAUSE HE NEVER STRAINS FOR EFFECT

Nearly every screen star of note has some slogan more or less descriptive of his or her qualities. In the majority of cases these words or phrases have been coined or originated by the publicity department of the producing company exploiting the star In a few cases the descriptive expression came from the critics or from the public.

The latter is the case with Harry Carey, the popular Universal star, who has been dubbed "Human" Harry Carey by so many reviewers and so many admirers that the adjective has almost become a part of his name. Hundreds of fan letters come to the star every week addressed "Human" Harry Carey, and almost every criticism of his screen work bears some reference to the human quality of his work.

In Carey's latest photodrama, "The Wallop," from a story by Eugene Manlove Rhodes, the Ace of the Saddle has an opportunity to be "humaner" than ever. Probably it is because both author and actor are so thoroughly familiar with the unfenced West of the story, with the characters that infest the desert regions far from railroads and city plumbing, that the star's portrayal of the role of John Wesley Pringle, "adventurer at large," is such a wholesome and appealing masterpiece.

Harry Carey never strains for effects. He does the things that you or your neighbor might be expected to do under the same conditions and with that understanding of human nature which marks the real artist. Carey has seen every phase of life and the atmosphere of the old west appeals to him most. He not only depicts this life on the screen, but lives it every day when not at the studio. "The Wallop" is to be seen at the .... Theatre next ....

Would you force a girl to marry you, knowing she loved another man? What does Harry Carey do in that situation in "The Wallop?"

FOR THE HERALD

John Wesley Pringle came back to his old home town with his fortune made and nothing to be filled but the void in his heart. He came back to find Stella Vorhis and to tell her that he wanted her. They met in the town's dingy little movie theatre and left in the middle of a picture to go out into the twilight. They walked down the main street, illuminated by flickering lights and turned into an ice cream parlor. They climbed aboard the whirling seats and then John Wesley Pringle knew that something had gone wrong in his absence.

Stella looked out through the window, seemed a little flustered, and said:

"I want you to meet the man I love."

Sort of a tough blow for John, eh?

Well, instead of shooting him full of holes, as he could have done blindfolded, John Wesley Pringle went out to meet the man who held Stellas heart and looked him over.

First he made sure that he was all he-man. Then he satisfied himself that he was good enough for Stella and then—he started in to help him and got into the most amazing tangle of gunfighting adventure that ever sent cold chills promenading up and down the chiropractor's delight.

Eugene Manlove Rhodes wrote the story, which was produced at Universal City under the direction of Jack Ford, and a popular cast is seen in the star's support.

This is what the Uni

editor of the Moving Picture Weekly had this in mind.

He assumes, in the first place, that every exhibitor wants to make money. In the second place, that he is anxious and ready to use up-to-date methods. In the third, that these methods consist first, second and all the time of exploitation. Exploitation is the gospel of the exhibitor of to-day. In the fourth place, that he would do his own exploitating IF HE HAD THE TIME AND TRAINING. In the fifth place, since he has not the time and training, we assume that he is willing to accept the ready-made advertising and publicity sent out by the company which distributes the pictures he shows.

Now, we know that this is assuming a whole lot. For some reason or other a great many exhibitors of moving pictures seem to think, in spite of the fact that they have great competition and that the business of exhibiting pictures is getting more and more to be a profession, that they will let well enough alone and get along without any advertising or exploitation. This is the road to ruin. Your competitor does not think so. Your competitor thinks that exploitation, advertising, publicity, ingenious stunts, etc., pay, and if he thinks so he is going to take away the business which might legitimately be yours. Bearing all these facts in mind, we have felt that it was high time we called your attention to the business-like and complete manner in which Universal press sheets are constructed. If you haven't seen one of them, take a look at the headings in this one and then ask your exchange to put you on the list for one every week. It may be, too, that they have been coming to you, but that you have thought that they are an advertisement rather than a business aid.

Just to show you wherein this press sheet will help you, consider the following facts: On the first page of this one, which is a fair sample of all of them, you find the information which you need in starting your work

Advance Notes

"The Wallop," Harry Carey's latest Universal starring vehicle, was written by Eugene Manlove Rhodes from an actual chapter in the frenzied political history of a modern western town. It will be shown locally for the first time at the . Theatre beginning

Four notable characters have interesting roles in support of Harry Carey in the star's recent Universal starring vehicle, "The Wallop," which will be the attraction at the Theatre on . . . . . . They are J. Farrell McDonald, Joseph Harris, Charles LeMoyne and Mark Fenton. Mignonne Golden, the screen's newest leading lady, plays opposite the star. The famous Harry Carey Flying Squadron will be seen in unusually fast action.

Remember the movies of ten years ago? In Harry Carey's latest Universal screen play, "The Wallop," spectators who attend the Theatre on will see a glimpse of a pioneer one-reeler. The old timer is cleverly worked into the theme of the modern story as "a play within a play," and adds a comedy touch to relieve the tense action of the drama.

A thrilling gun-battle on the towering cliffs of a mountain range, spectacular riding by Harry Carey's flying squadron of cowpunchers, and a two-fisted combat in which the hero fights against uneven odds, are a few of the pulse-quickening episodes of "The Wallop," a western photodrama coming to the Theatre next Harry Carey is the star. It is a Universal production directed by Jack Ford from a story by Eugene Manlove Rhodes.

As big as his own western country: as desolate in his heart as the desert and as fast in action as a mountain storm. That's Harry Carey in his latest Universal photodrama, "The Wallop."

GENERAL ADVANCE STORIES

General Advance Story No. 1

Harry Carey in one of his best screen characterizations. An original story by Eugene Manlove Rhodes. Humorous "cut ins" of a pioneer movie. Those are some of the things that will be seen at the Theatre on , where "The Wallop," a Universal photodrama, is to be shown with Harry Carey in the starring role.

The vigorous modern western drama is enlivened by a play within a play. The hero goes into a small nickelodeon and there on the screen sees a wild and fleecy western drama just as it was made in the Bronx in 1910. Carey is shown in the darkened movie theatre watching the screen. The west as it is depicted by a flaxen haired floor walker gets on his nerve. He walks out and steps into a series of adventures in real life which would have been far too rough for the simpering hero of the antique celluloid drama.

A furious gun fight, a battle for the girl, political intrigue, wild rides over the desert and a desperate feud between the citizens of a modern western town are some of the adventures in which Carey participates.

Mignonne Golden plays the leading feminine role. The action of the story is remarkably fast and in the exciting roles playgoers will see J. Farrell McDonald, Joe Harris, Mark Fenton, Otto Myers, Charles LeMoyne, Noble Johnson, Bill Gettinger and the famous Harry Carey Flying Squadron of cowboys.

"The Wallop" has been heralded as one of the Harry Carey's snappiest western photodramas. Jack Ford directed it at Universal City and it is said to have every attribute of good screen entertainment.

General Advance Story No. 2

"The Wallop," Eugene Manlove Rhodes' most dramatic story of the old West, will be the principal attraction at the . . Theatre on with Harry Carey in the starring role. The popular western star has done full justice to the story by his interpretation of the big dramatic moments. The production will be regarded by those who witness it as one of the star's best screen efforts.

The story shows a man who returns to the western country after making his strike in the gold fields. He finds that the girl he loves has given her heart to a younger man. Suppressing his own desires, he helps his rival in an exciting and bloody political campaign.

With spontaneous bits of humor, amazingly thrilling drama and heart interest predominating, Jack Ford directed the story at Universal City from the adaptation of George C. Hull.

Mignonne Golden, the pretty little girl who has been seen in the leading feminine role in other recent Carey successes, has the supporting role. The famous Harry Carey Flying Squadron of cowpunchers, also will be seen in action. In the cast are J. Farrell McDonald, Joe Harris, Charles LeMoyne, C. E. Anderson, Otto Myers, Noble Johnson, Mark Fenton and Bill Gettinger.

SPECIAL ADVANCE STORIES

Special Advance Story No. 1

The popularity of Harry Carey, Universal's famous western star, proves that the [illegible] type of movie star is fast going into the discard, and the success of the stories in which he has been appearing further demonstrates that it is not always necessary for the hero to clinch with the leading lady in the final fade-out.

What the public most desires in a star is that he should be human, and that is one quality Harry Carey possesses in a greater degree than any other player in the films. As for the stories the public wants them to be natural and true to life, and everyone knows only too well that the right man does not always get the right girl in real life.

In very few stories that Harry Carey has had during the past year—and he has appeared in some excellent starring vehicles—has he had as fine an opportunity to display his many sided talent that he finds in his latest Universal feature, "The Wallop," which is to be seen at the Theatre on . . . . . The story is based on one of the most successful novels by Eugene Manlove Rhodes, who knows the old west better than any contemporaneous writer. Rhodes has lived the life of the range and [illegible] for twenty years and he writes of the west as it really was during its most picturesque days.

There is no player on the screen so well qualified to portray the characters of the old west as Harry Carey. And in Carey's company are many players who divide their time between real ranch life and acting before the camera. Such men as Joe Harris, J. Farrell McDonald, Charles LeMoyne, Otto Myers and Captain Anderson are true types of the rugged frontier and their acting is true to life.

Special Advance Story No. 2

Harry Carey was one of the first prominent actors of the stage to realize the great future of the screen and he left the [illegible] drama where he appeared as a star for years to accept small parts before the camera. The promise of the future, however, was not all that induced Carey to desert the footlights for the [illegible]. He loved the life of the out of doors, and ten years ago most of the photoplays were made in the open.

Many people will wonder why a man born in New York and graduated from the Columbia Law School should have such a fondness for the open air life. Carey became enamored of ranch life when in his teens he spent three years in Montana to recuperate from an illness which threatened his life. When he came back to New York, tanned and robust, he decided that a method of living which could snatch a man from the grave and bring him back to perfect health must be the sort of life a man was intended to live.

In going into pictures Harry Carey achieved two objects at once. He started on a career which was sure to bring him success as his histrionic talents were sure to be recognized by the public and it gave him a chance to forsake the nomadic life of the stage actor and take up a permanent residence on a ranch where he could live the life he had grown to love.

Now Harry Carey is recognized as the foremost player of western roles on the screen, having been a Universal star for four years, and he is the owner of one of the finest ranches in California close enough to Universal City to permit him to motor home each evening. His latest starring vehicle, "The Wallop," will be seen at the Theatre next

READY WRITTEN REVIEWS

Review No. 1

Harry Carey won new friends at the Theatre last night when he told one of the biggest screen stories of his career with the vigorous dramatic punch and the naturalness which have won for him the title "the humanest star."

The occasion was the first local showing of "The Wallop," his most recent Universal photodrama. It was directed by Jack Ford and should prove an invigorating mental tonic to those who are beginning to feel the oppression of the hot house drama.

With the unfenced west for his stage and the scope of human emotion for his interpretation, Carey gives an excellent performance of the story as it was originally written by Eugene Manlove Rhodes.

The picture shows him returning to his home town and to "the girl." He comes back wealthy, to offer her material comforts in addition to love. At their first meeting he discovers that she has given her heart to a younger man. First he makes sure that the young fellow is worthy of her, then he starts out to help him. His efforts precipitate a political feud in the town, start a whole series of gun-battles and results in an amazing climax by which Harry Carey proves that he is not only a fearless western star but one of the foremost emotional actors of the silent drama.

Mignonne Golden plays the role of the girl effectively. Bill Gettinger appears as the younger lover and heads the famous Harry Carey Flying Squadron of cowboys in some exceptionally thrilling escapades. J. Farrell McDonald, Joe Harris, Otto Myers, Noble Johnson, Charles LeMoyne and Mark Fenton are seen in good supporting roles.

Review No. 2

Harry Carey, starring in "The Wallop," his latest Universal photodrama which opened last night at the Theatre, returned to a western town after a long absence to claim the girl he loved. He discovered that she loved a younger man, made sure that he was worthy of her according to the standards of the old west and then set out to help him through the fastest series of perilous misadventure ever filmed.

That, in brief, is the theme upon which this highly entertaining Universal picture play is based and in the telling of which the popular star rises to rare dramatic heights.

Mignonne Golden, a newcomer to the screen, plays the role of the girl. Bill Gettinger, J. Farrell McDonald, Noble Johnson, Charles LeMoyne, Joe Harris, Mark Fenton, Otto Myers and other players whose work is well known play the supporting roles.

From the ides of March when Caesar fell under the knife of Brutus, politics seemed to take a turn for the worse and history is enlivened by accounts of political rivals who knocked one another over with weapons ranging from the broad sword of ancient history to the automatic pistols now in vogue among gun-fighting gentlemen.

American politics, it would seem, is particularly apt to explode, and in the process change from an academic science of statemanship into a marksmanship contest.

Gang fights in the crowded eastern cities, sniping from behind the stately pines of the South and open pistol battles in the west are the various methods by which politicians, or their henchmen, convey annoyance at their rivals according to their geographical location.

In "The Wallop," Harry Carey's latest Universal photodrama, which is now the principal attraction at the Theatre, much of the dramatic theme hinges upon a political feud in a modern western town.

Eugene Manlove Rhodes, who wrote the story, took it, they say, from an actual chapter in the civic, if not civil, annals of the city that was only recently an armed camp and where a box of ammunition was considered a substantial campaign contribution.

Municipal politics are always more snappy than the more dignified state or national ballot barbecues and it is a local political scrap that precipitates the riot in Harry Carey's picture.

The election, it would seem, was just a matter of form—a sop to convention—and the real results were counted after the fracas.

"The Wallop" concerns itself with more than politics, however, for a love story of rare appeal is its basis and the whole is considered to be one of the famous western star's best screen efforts.

It has been some time since Harry Carey has used his famous and popular Flying Squadron of cowboy roughriders in a picture. The last two stories filmed by the Universal western star did not call for any spectacular horsemanship, even on the part of Carey himself. But in his latest production, "The Wallop," which now is to be seen at the Theatre, the Harry Carey fans will see their idol as they like him best—a hard riding adventurer, surrounded by his corps of broncho straddlers, and indulging in stunts that would seem fantastic were they not performed in that human, natural fashion typical of Harry Carey.

Carey's Flying Squadron is a movie institution. When the western actor first began to achieve fame on the screen, some Montana cowboys who knew him when he was ranching up in that country drifted down to California and applied to him for help to get in the movies. As these punchers were the real article and a great improvement over the store cowboys, Carey had no trouble placing them with the various units. The story of their achievements soon spread by way of the films and other range riders joined the group. Three years ago, when Carey settled on his ranch in the San Francisquito Canyon, he made provisions to house all his cowboys, who agreed to serve him in their original capacity whenever they were not engaged in his pictures.

Thus it happens that the Universal star has always at his command about thirty of the most skilled riders in the west, everyone an expert in all the arts and the tricks of the range and corral, and by their appearance in a score of the Universal star's pictures they are all familiar to the vast army of movie fans throughout the world.

Carey's Flying Squadron will be very much in evidence in his latest production, "The Wallop."

Harry Carey is at the Theatre in one of the best Universal photodramas of his screen career. It is called "The Wallop" and is a story from the pen of Eugene Manlove Rhodes. Jack Ford directed the production at Universal City and a popular cast headed by Mignonne Golden is seen in the star's support.

CURRENT NOTES

Motion pictures of the west frequently give real westerners a pain. Harry Carey, now staring at the Theatre in "The Wallop," knows the western country thoroughly, however, and the members of his famous Flying Squadron are all genuine rangers. The troop is seen in unusually fast action in this Universal production which perpetuates the picturesque traditions of the modern west.

"The Wallop," now attracting crowds to the Theatre, is what may be termed a typical Harry Carey picture. In his last two features the popular star deviated from his usual type of stories, but in his latest offering he gives the theatregoers the sort of entertainment which made him popular. The story breathes of the old west and is rife with thrills and excitement.

HARRY CAREY
Greatest of all Westerners

He let the light shine full in the Mexican's eyes and then—something happened

HERE is just exactly the kind of whirlwind fighting human drama of the real West that HARRY CAREY plays better than anyone in the whole wide world—a rousing, stirring, red-blooded, "he-man" picture that's up and coming every minute. Take it from us, here's something that will fill you with thrills and fill you with amusement—a picture that moves and keeps a-moving from start to finish.

for the picture. For instance, under the title "The Picture's Pedigree," you have the name of the production, of the star, the other pictures in which he has made good, the name of the director, the author, the scenario writer, full cast, the location of the action, the time, the man who photographed the picture, and a very short synopsis telling you exactly what the character of the picture is. In another column you have this story at greater length, and above it the names of the players and the characters which they play. There is also a press story on this page which can be used either as an advance story or as a Sunday story with a cut of Harry Carey, and a herald which you can use either as an advertisement or to print in the program of your previous performance.

On the second page will be found the principal publicity items for use in the daily newspapers in connection with your exploitation campaign for the picture. In the first place, there are two general stories of the proper length which can be used, and usually are, by the Sunday editor. There are also two special advance stories for use earlier, although these also can be used for Sunday stories in case there are four daily newspapers running Sunday or Saturday moving picture pages. There are also a number of advance notes for use during the week prior to the showing, or as soon as you have your date to run the picture.

On the third page is the music cue sheet. You will not need this until the time of playing the picture. When you do, you will note that it is printed in such a way that you do not damage any of the other parts of the press sheet, all of which will have been used by the time you get ready for the cue sheet. There are also two special stories for use during the showing and two ready-written reviews which can be supplied to newspapers which have no review service or whose reviewers are too busy to see this picture. There are also a number of current notes on this page.

Put Plenty of Pep Behind "The Wallop"

It Will Come Back at You With the Old Box-Office Punch

"THE WALLOP" is a red-blooded, he-man story of "human" humor, spirited western action and superb scenery. It is a typical Harry Carey vehicle, with every angle that appeals to the lovers of virile pictures of the great western out-of-doors.

The exhibitor who wants to take full advantage of every exploitation possibility in this picture, will do well to bill it as a Harry Carey Special, written by Eugene Manlove Rhodes, the dean of "western" writers. There is no better pen-portrayer of the West than Eugene Manlove Rhodes, and no better screen-portrayer of the "western" character than Harry Carey.

An unusual series of punchful posters is supplied with "The Wallop," which, if liberally used, will attract the proper attention to your showing.

Watch for "The Wallop."

"The Wallop" is a Knock Out

There's a terrific punch in "The Wallop."

"The Wallop" will jar your eye-teeth.

"The Wallop" is a short jab to your heart-strings.

Make Your Townsmen Stop, Look & Walk In

Good Showmanship Demands a Lobby That Will Stop Traffic

IMAGINE the excitement of stalking a dangerous man into the mountains—of working through a rocky pass expecting him to jump out from behind every boulder, with an automatic leveled at you! Imagine the shock and thrill when he actually pops up!

Then think of the startling effect of this idea if you could put it into your lobby, so that every passer-by would get that thrill You CAN do it It is the surest way of dressing up your front for "The Wallop."

A few Bristol board cut-outs painted to represent rocks, and a simple figure cut-out of Harry Carey's head and shoulders from the poster on the right hand side of Page 2 of this Press Sheet, will turn the trick

Mount the figure cut-out on a light up-right, hinged to a base board, so it will move a couple of feet from the erect position A narrow strip fastened with blocks to the back of one of your "rock" cut outs, will provide a slot for the movable upright, so that when it is allowed to fall or move from its upright position, it will expose itself to view from in front.

A small wire leading by eyelets or pulleys to your doorman or cashier's booth, will provide for a means by which the surprise figure may be moved occasionally

Carry out the mountain atmosphere throughout your lobby by painted flats or wall decorations. Use other cut-outs from the posters, mounting them directly upon the walls or flats. "The Wallop" is a rugged picture and admits of rugged atmosphere in its presentation

A Effective Flash Box

A novel lobby stunt also can be arranged with the three-sheet poster showing Carey standing guard in the cave entrance. Mount this poster, or part of it bearing Carey's figure, on a flash box, behind which an intermittent flashing light can be concealed The poster should be pasted on bristol board so that the light can shine through only the part of the poster which shows the actual cave entrance.

The final page is filled with exploitation suggestions, and this page should be read by your press agent or by yourself if you do this work, as soon as possible, to give you the ideas which have been collected and set forth for putting extra punch into the box-office receipts at the end of the week.

You will note that there are two single, two double and one three-column prepared advertisements which can be obtained either in mat or electro form. There are two single column and four double column mats or electros which can be used by any newspaper and which may be obtained from any Universal exchange well in advance of release date. These scene cuts are made by a new process which is used exclusively by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, which makes them far more printable than the old style of half-tone which was used for newspaper work. All our mats and cuts print beautifully in the newspapers.

Universal Players in Musical Revue

EMPLOYEES of the Fort Lee factory of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, successfully demonstrated that film folk can become stage-stars over-night just as easily as stage folk can become screen favorites, when they presented "Black and White," a musical revue, at the Hunts Point Palace, New York City, Saturday evening May 14. The show was a benefit performance held on behalf of the mutual welfare organization of the factory workers. It was followed by a dance.

"Black and White" was written, enacted and directed by a 100 per cent. Universal cast. The author is Harry Parsons, who wrote "Tank Corps Follies," a popular A. E. F. soldier talent show. Parsons staged the Universal show for his colleagues.

In the good looks and zippy costumes of its chorus, in the sparkle of its musical members and in its dialogue, the benefit revue far outclassed the usual amateur show. Perfection was attained by several months of strenuous rehearsing.

Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, occupied the honor box at the performance, with members of his family. R. H. Cochrane, vice-president, also was present, as were other Universal officials. The film executives were astounded at the finished stage presentation offered by their employees.

A significant incident of the evening was the stopping of the show to pay the respects of the cast to Edwin F. Murphy, superintendent of the Fort Lee plant, whose cooperation with his employees, under the Industrial Democracy System, has made many social, and mutually beneficial activities possible among the factory workers. The Universal plant is one of the most successful examples of employer-employee cooperation under the John Leitch plan. Mr. Laemmle says it has resulted in better prints for Universal exhibitors.

Announcement was made between the acts by E. H. Goldstein, Assistant to Mr. Laemmle that the two of the factory employees whose work showed the greatest efficiency during the next few months, would receive free vacation trips to Universal City, Cal., where Universal pictures are made. Irving Thalberg, Director General at Universal City, was present and promised the lucky employees they would literally get the keys to the city when they arrived.

How I would exploit "Rep

IF I were an Exhibitor and had "Reputation" booked for my theatre I would give it the greatest heralding and presentation ever accorded a picture by putting over a "Reputation Week" in my town.

"Reputation Week" as devised by the exploitation department is the biggest and the easiest stunt to put over ever planned for any photoplay.—It will attract more attention than a circus and you all know how much of a sensation a circus creates.

"Reputation Week" is a BIG stunt because all of the newspapers can be tied up to it,—It is a GOOD stunt because it will benefit everyone connected with it and it is an EASY stunt to put over because the Exhibitor has very little of the work to do himself.

Every advertising manager on every newspaper is up against the problem of increasing his business.—They are all on the lookout for an idea that will bring more advertising to the paper and "Reputation Week" is an idea that will bring them a lot of additional advertising from all classes of merchants in the town.

This is how I would go about the starting a "Reputation Week" in my town:—

FIRST: I would write a letter as follows, and then take the letter, personally, to each advertising manager on each newspaper in the town.

Mr. Blank,
Advertising Manager,
The Daily News.

Dear Sir:—

Here is an idea that will increase the amount of advertising, of all kinds in your paper.

I suggest that you start a "Reputation Week" during which the public's attention will be drawn to the value of doing business with merchants that have established "reputations."

During "Reputation Week" have the merchants of the town advertise their "reputations" for fair dealings, good values, high class styles, and whatever else has given them the "reputation" of reliable merchants.

Yours very truly,
(Sign here)

SECOND: After handing the letter to the advertising manager, I would tell him exactly how he is going to benefit by boosting a "Reputation Week."—I would say to him:—Every merchant in this town that is conducting a business on honest lines has a reputation, and if he advertises that reputation he will attract more business to his store.—Lots of merchants don't advertise at all simply because they think they have nothing to advertise, but they have something to advertise if they have a good reputation.—If the newspapers will publish special articles on the subject of Reputation in all of its phases, and show the public that it pays to patronize stores that have established reputations,—If some of these articles bring out the fact that no business can hope to prosper unless it establishes and maintains a Reputation, and that the Reputation of a merchant is the best kind of a guarantee that a buyer can have when purchasing merchandise—and if other articles are published that speak of the value of a personal reputation in the progress of men and women in business and private life, a mass of material can be published that will make "Reputation Week" a big event, and all of the reputable merchants will want to come out and ADVERTISE their Reputations during the big week.

utation"---By Carl Laemmle

THIRD: I would suggest that the axioms of the subject of "Reputation" written by Priscilla Dean, be published as part of the campaign.—These axioms do not mention the picture, and they make good reading matter.

FOURTH: I would suggest that the Chamber of Commerce be asked to sponsor "Reputation Week" as a drive that will stimulate buying and as an opportunity for the town itself to come out and show its progressive spirit and its "Reputation" as a fine place in which to establish a business.

FIFTH: I would suggest that the newspaper ask the private citizens to hang out flags in celebration of the Reputation of the town itself.

SIXTH: I would ask the Advertising Managers to start the ball rolling by publishing the following letter and then have his men call on the merchants and solicit special advertising for "Reputation Week."

> Mr. Business Man:
> "Reputation Week" is designed to promote business by encouraging the public to buy;—and to spend their money with reliable business organizations.
> During "Reputation Week" all reputable business men are asked to make some sort of a display or exhibition in their store windows and on their buildings, autos, etc.
> These displays are to be personal exhibitions that will acquaint the public with the good reputation that the store enjoys.
> If you will do this, it will attract particular attention to your standing as a representative business man of this city and it will help in the general movement to make the "Reputation" the guide and guarantee of the public when making purchases.

SEVENTH: I would then go to my Universal Exchange and get a supply of the Special Window Cards that have been prepared for "Reputation Week."—These cards are so arranged that any merchant can use them in advertising his own business and reputation.

EIGHTH: I would take these cards to all the merchants on the main streets to be placed in their windows during "Reputation Week."

NINTH: The week before "Reputation Week," I would post a large number of the "teaser" one-sheets that have the reproduction of the personal ad.—

MOTHER, be careful my
Pauline.

TENTH: During "Reputation Week" I would have newsboys distribute copies of the "Scandal Sheet," that is described on the eighth page of the press book.

* * * * * * * *

It is doubtful if an exploitation stunt could be devised that is more cooperative than "Reputation Week" and the fact that all of the newspapers can be used, makes it far reaching in its scope.

I suggest that every exhibitor read the explanation of "Reputation Week" that is printed on the seventh page of the press sheet for "Reputation."—It points the way to exploit this production in a manner that will long be remembered.

Solution of the Treasure Mystery

IN the campaign book for the Polo serial, "Do or Die," which was issued last week there was a practical buried treasure stunt which can profitably be used by exhibitors showing this chapter-play of romance and adventure in the Spanish Main.

The map and the legend printed last week are again reproduced here together with the explanation of the puzzle. The map and the legend can be printed on post-cards, heralds or throwaways and free admission offered to the first several fans who correctly mark the spot of the buried treasure with a cross.

The second map and the solution of the cryptogram are of course not for publication, but merely to guide the exhibitor in conducting the contest. After the answers have been received it can be printed on cards or shown on a slide. If properly handled this stunt should prove to be a tremendous attraction for any playhouse.

THE LEGEND

LEAVING his lieutenant under orders at the castle, Satan, the buccaneer, led his pirate band straight to the noble senor's home on the senor's wedding night, captured the bride, stole the senor's gold, set fire to the house and started back to his castle.

Seeing the fire, the bandit's lieutenant immediately started for Pirate's Knob to watch for enemy ships, but was halted on his way by a signal gun, fired when Satan returned to his castle.

Satan, accompanied by two men bearing the treasure, then made his way to the waiting lieutenant. All four then walked to the lookout on Pirate's Knob; Satan, unknown to the others, counting his steps.

Leaving his lieutenant to watch for ships, Satan and the treasure bearers started for the Lone Palm. The treasure disappeared. The bodies of the two men were found on the beach. Satan was found dead in the woods. Did he hide the treasure? Where? Can you solve it?

BY studying the map shown here with the aid of the legend it is possible to locate the exact hiding place of the buried treasure.

After setting fire to the Hacienda, Satan started back to his castle at the same time that his lieutenant set out for the Pirate's Knob. Being of the same stature the men covered the distance between the two points at approximately the same pace so that when Satan reached the castle and fired the signal gun his lieutenant had reached the point "A" on his journey.

The bandit's aide waited at this point until he was joined by Satan and two men bearing the treasure. The four then made their way to the lookout post on Pirate's Knob. Satan, unknown to the others, paced the distance.

Then leaving the Knob and starting on the trail towards the Lone Palm tree Satan halted the men at the spot X, the same number of paces from Pirate's Knob as the point A. There he had them bury the treasure.

Satan had worked out this scheme in advance, taking as his known distance the trail from the Hacienda to his Castle. This distance paced off towards the Pirate's Knob would locate the point A where the lieutenant had halted when the signal gun was fired. Then the distance from A to the Pirate's Knob paced off in the direction of the Lone Palm tree would again locate the spot X where the treasure had been buried.

This point was probably selected because of its nearness to the beach and yet it was sufficiently protected by the shrubbery to hide their operations. It could always be found and the treasure easily removed to a waiting ship in case of necessity.

Satan probably intended to kill his helpers, for the bodies of the two men were later found on the beach by Satan's lieutenant who had been left behind on Pirate's Knob to search for ships. He did not know however that the treasure had been buried nearby.

Throughout his career Satan's motto had always been "dead men tell no tales," so that his lieutenant was not surprised at the discovery of the bodies. Later the body of the bandit chieftain was found in the woods several hundred yards from the beach where he had evidently dragged himself after being wounded. Satan carried his secret to his grave and the only remaining clue to the buried treasure was the ring known as the "Seal of Satan" on his finger which bore an inscription showing the spot where the treasure was buried.

Screen Star is Globetrotter

EDDIE POLO, the Universal serial star now appearing in the mystery story of the Spanish Main, which starts next .... at the .... Theatre, has the distinction of being the most widely traveled of all the screen actors. Starting out with a circus when very young he has visited almost every country.

His reputation as a circus acrobat and "stuntster" was gained after touring with the largest circuses of both America and Europe. Before he was of age he had presented shows of his own at inns and taverns in France, Italy, Germany, Spain, Turkey, and all of the Balkan States. Later he went to England and from there to America where he became the idol of American boyhood in every town the circus played.

Upon his entry into pictures about six years ago the staff writers out at Universal City competed with one another to devise some stunt that Eddie could not do. Every human feat they included in the series prepared for the star he performed successfully. He never fakes and never uses dummies or substitutes, so that a Polo serial always includes some of the most thrilling stunts ever caught by the camera. Eddie Polo made his second overseas expedition to act in the Cuban scenes for "Do or Die." In addition to the scenes in Havana others were taken on the Isle of Pines and nearby smaller islands. In filming "The Vanishing Dagger" the Polo company went to France.

Synopsis of Story

"CHEATED LOVE"

SONYA SCHONEMAN comes to America to join her father, who keeps a small grocery store in the ghetto of New York City. At Ellis Island she meets David Dahlman, a settlement worker, who immediately falls in love with her. Upon learning, however, that her sweetheart in Russia, Mischa Grossman, expects to come to America for a career as a surgeon, he withdraws his attentions.

Mischa arrives and uses to pay for his education the money earned by Sonya at the little Yiddish theatre in the Bowery. She had started to work there as a seamstress, but upon showing talent had been given several rather important parts in the little company.

The great Yazurka, a Polish actress, comes to the little Russian theatre to play for one night. On the day before the performance she notices the beauty of Sonya and refuses to act if the girl is retained in the company.

Sonya returns home in despair, and meets Mischa, who tells her that he has decided to become engaged to a wealthy heiress because of the advantages her money would bring him. He offers to pay back the money he had received from Sonya, but she ordered him from the house. Thus in one evening two of her fondest dreams were shattered.

The night of the performance Sonya remained in the wings of the theatre helping her friends get ready for their parts. David and a manager from uptown were seated in a box awaiting the appearance of Sonya. When she failed to appear in the first act David goes back stage and learns the real reason was because of the star's jealousy.

In the midst of the second act the boiler blows up and there is an immediate panic. When the star refuses to try to quiet the audience, Sonya steps to the footlights and calms the crowd by singing the great Twenty-third Psalm, "The Lord Is My Shepherd."

She is the heroine of the fire. When the firemen arrive Sonya faints and is carried outside the theatre by David , who remains by her side. Upon reviving she tells him that she has decided to seek happiness with him.

CARMEL MYERS IN STRONG STORY OF IMMIGRANT LIFE

CARMEL MYERS did what is perhaps her greatest dramatic work at the .... Theatre last night in "Cheated Love," her latest Universal photodrama, in which she appears as a girl of the New York Ghetto.

As the story opens Sonya arrives from Russia, smiles her way through the human pens at Ellis Island and joins her father in his dingy little store. When she gives away more stock than she sells, her father, in despair, sends her to the Yiddish theatre as a seamstress, where her generosity will not have such a disastrous effect. At the theatre, Sonya longs to become an actress, and the quaint old stage director promises her a chance. The little band of players, bravely struggling to express their art against the crushing indifference of the younger generation and poverty, have at last a ray of hope. Yazurka, the great Polish actress, has consented to play one engagement for the benefit of the little playhouse. Sonya is to play a supporting rôle, but when the great actress sees her beauty she refuses to appear with her and sends her to the wings.

From a box, David, a young settlement worker who loves Sonya, is watching the performance. With him is an uptown theatre manager whom he has brought to see his beloved Sonya act. The girl does not appear, and he goes back-stage to find out why. Just then a terrific boiler explosion wrecks the theatre. The famous actress cravenly refuses to go out and calm the audience, but little Sonya runs through flame to the stage and recites for them the twenty-third psalm. When quiet is restored she is carried home to find that Mischa, the man whom she thought she loved, has been unfaithful to her. She gives her happiness into the keeping of David.

THEATRE BOILER EXPLOSION FILMED FOR "CHEATED LOVE"

THE terrific explosion which sets fire to a theatre and furnishes one of the biggest thrills in "Cheated Love," the Universal photodrama which is now at the .... Theatre, was very realistic to Carmel Myers in the filming, for the star was near by when fire caused such havoc at the Iroquois Theatre fire in Chicago.

Miss Myers was but an infant when the historic fire shocked the world, but she was old enough to remember that her father left the house to minister to the injured in his capacity as a rabbi, and the talk around her gave her a particularly vivid picture of the catastrophe.

Since then, she says, her principal fear has been theatre fires and the panic which frequently results. It was through her father's influence, in a measure, that most of the theatres to-day are perfectly safe and equipped with numerous exits, for he was one of the leaders who launched a campaign of Safety First which was taken up by all theatre men.

The story of "Cheated Love" required that a theatre be shaken by the explosion of an overheated boiler in the basement and that flames envelope the stage.

MOST CONGENIAL ROLE FOR CARMEL MYERS

CARMEL MYERS has a rôle to which she is admirably suited in "Cheated Love," the Universal photodrama which comes to the .... Theatre on ....

The star appears as a little immigrant from Russia. She arrives at Ellis Island, the human clearing house in New York harbor, and joins her father in the ghetto where she works, and lives, and loves.

Carmel Myers
in "Cheated Love"
It's a Universal

In no other one of her many successful screen plays has Miss Myers had such a congenial rôle. The star is of Jewish birth and has a deep understanding of the self-sacrificing qualities which animate those of her race through life.

FAMOUS FRENCH STAR RECRUITED HUNDREDS FOR WORLD WAR SERVICE

MLLE. ROSE DIONE, the French emotional star who fascinated Parisian playgoers in the principal theatres of France, has arrived at Universal City to take her place among the notables at the world's film capital.

In the brief time that she has been in America Mlle. Dione has achieved a signal success before the camera, and is now to be seen in Carmel Myers' Universal feature, "Cheated Love," in which she was directed by King Baggot.

What is perhaps her most notable exploit was at the outbreak of the war, when she stood in the principal Paris café and sang "La Marseillaise." Wrapped in the tri-color, she sang the stirring national anthem and recruited hundreds of men for the French army.

"Combine a tensely dramatic story, fine direction, a well-planned scenario, an extremely talented star and a competent supporting cast and there can be but one result.

" 'REPUTATION' is based upon a story that has as wide appeal as there are average emotions to play upon. Taking this basis, the scenarists have performed a fine piece of playmaking.

"As to Miss Dean—Her dynamic personality, genuine appeal and distinct talent in registering the complete gamut of emotions results in a performance that is among the outstanding pieces of acting on the screen. Miss Dean's support does fine work. Boiled down to a single statement, 'REPUTATION' is an 'audience' picture of the first magnitude, suitable for any class theatre."

"Priscilla Dean, who for years has been squinting down the barrels of automatics and engaging in target practice in Chinatown, has somewhat more opportunity in 'REPUTATION' to display talents as a real emotional actress. She appears in a dual role, as Laura Figlan, a notorious actress of the London stage, and as Pauline, her daughter, who is trying hard to get on in a theatrical way in New York. Miss Dean rises to the occasion splendidly and gives a performance of great variety. The interest is cumulative during the course of the seven reels and the play ends with a magnificent smash."

" 'REPUTATION' may be written down in the category of sure-fire hits."

Seating capacity 300. Paid admissions 1,527. This picture will break all house records, for my patrons came out commenting on it. Give me more of these money-getters."

ANOTHER telegram: "Shipwrecked Among Cannibals" opened today, Palace Theatre, Buffalo. House seats 780. Six shows total seats 4,680. Played to 5,000. Broke all house records. About two thousand turned away. Wish to congratulate Universal for this wonderful box-office attraction."

A WIRE from the Columbia Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa., states: " 'Shipwrecked Among Cannibals' opened at Columbia Theatre to capacity business from nine A. M. until eleven-thirty P. M. to over 4,500 paid admissions. Crowd in line all day long in spite of opposition putting on old cannibal picture."

" 'SHIPWRECKED AMONG CANNIBALS' broke all records at my Standard Theatre, Cleveland," wires Thomas G. Carroll. "Sold 2,083 tickets from 9:30 A. M. to Noon. Picture is a sensation. People stood in line for four and one-half hours waiting to buy tickets. Cleveland has seen nothing like this before."

"SMASHED all expectations with 'Shipwrecked Among Cannibals'," wires Ralph W. Albert, Isis Theatre, Indianapolis. Played to nearly 3,500 admissions from 1:30 P. M. to 11 P. M. Only 500-seat house, and we were forced to turn hundreds away. Lined up for half a block all day long. Everybody satisfied."

"'REPUTATION' will be worth much to the exhibitor. It need not be played up as a daring and spectacular picture to interest film patrons. Because of the human appeal of its story and the remarkable acting of Priscilla Dean it can stand on its own merits.

"Miss Dean plays a dual role—one of the best pieces of character drawing that the reviewer has seen in a long time.

"Miss Dean makes Laura Figlan an interesting and vital person. It is a vivid and real bit of acting.

"The dramatic scene of the picture comes when mother and daughter fight for the reputation that has been so unscrupulously bought. Its dramatic points are strong and impressive."

I am the oldest exhibitor in Buffalo, having the first house showing pictures in this city. I consider "THE WHITE HORSEMAN" the cleanest serial I have ever run. It has a strong moral with plenty of healthy excitement for all classes of patrons, and I consider myself a good judge as I have run the majority of serials.

Pulverized Goat Glands Puts Pep into Harry

"A DOLLAR'S WORTH"

Two-reel Century Comedy

HARRY SWEET

THE alley gang is having one of their friendly brick fights when Harry happens along. He takes a dollar bill from one of the men after he is hit on the head by a brick. The leader of the gang chases Harry into a former cafe.

While Harry is told to look through a hole in the wall the secretary of the club in the next room puts some sleeping powder in a bellows and blows the mixture through the hole. But each time Harry is looking the other way so that he escapes getting the powder.

The gang chief happens to look through the hole to find out what is wrong with his assistant and gets the full charge of the bellows in his face. He reels over. The secretary by mistake puts some pulverized goat glands in the bellows and Harry gets new pep from this powder.

Rescues Lily of the Alley

Harry cleans up the cafe and chases the gang leader out. While standing in the yard he is hit on the top of the head by a bottle thrown out of a window by the Lily of the Alley. He rescues her from her room on the top floor. Harry is standing in the street looking at the dollar bill in his hand when the cop comes along and takes the bill. The girl tells him that she is the wife of the secretary of the club and runs away.

"THE WHITE HORSEMAN"

Episode No. 10

"In the Enemy's Hands"

DRAGGED behind their horses, Allen manages to cut his rope, mount his horse and go in pursuit of the Indian and rescue him from a similar fate.

Inside the treasure caves Onava, the Indian girl, starts out with the bracelet.

Outside the caves the Spider's men are about to hang Ramsey. In the act of hanging him they see the cliffs open and realize that he has not double-crossed them. They hurry to the entrance to capture whoever comes out. The Indian girl gets out before they can get there and close the cliffs. She sees the gang coming on foot and herds their horses out ahead of her to stop pursuit.

Rescued by Mummy Man

At the ranch house the outlaw is about to overpower Jean when the Mummy Man appears in the doorway and shoots him down. Jean faints. Onava arrives and the Mummy Man orders her to look after the white girl and guard her life with her own. Her superstition makes her agree, and the Mummy Man leaves.

The outlaw who was knocked out in the fight comes to and attacks Onava to get the bracelet from her. He almost has it when Allen and the Indian arrive at the shack. He takes the girls and the Indian to town for safety. The outlaw takes the news to Ramsey and the Spider. Ramsey goes to town. The outlaws go to a shack just out of town.

Made Spider's Prisoner

Next day Allen leaves the bracelet in the hotel safe. By a trick Allen is lured to the Spider's rendezvous and made prisoner. Ramsey fakes a letter from Jean's father, saying he is ill in the city, and telling her to come to him and bring the bracelet. Cuevas frees Allen and they set out to intercept the train at another point.

Battle on Moving Train

On the train Onava steals the bracelet and is about to escape when Ramsey stops her, and they start to struggle on the front platform of the coach. Allen battles with several of the outlaws in a hand-to-hand struggle on top of the moving train and is knocked off.

Cuevas attempting to climb up to the top of the train, is attacked by the Spider himself and forced to jump.

"FIGHTING BLOOD"

CAST

Jim Roberts	Jack Perrin
Diana	Louise Lorraine
Mayor	Jim Gibson
Mayor's Wife	Ray Hampton
Constable	Otto Nelson
Pete	Jim Corey

THERE was a time when Cactus Center was a good place to live in. But now it is different. A narrow-minded group of reformers, headed by the mayor's wife, have altered things. The henpecked mayor is forced to consent to a law which will close up everything in town at noon.

Steal Mayor's Daughter

Jim loves Diana, the mayor's daughter. But has no use for Jim because he so meekly submits to the imposition of unfair laws. The new closing law, together with a remark of the constable that he can't even make an arrest after noon, gives Jim an idea. He plans a fake raid on the town by himself and his pals, during which Diana shall be kidnapped and the reform party thoroughly scared. But an emissary of a bold, bad bandit learns of this and reports to his chief that now is their time to put something over. The bandits ride into town and make it the real thing, though the constable does not interfere, thinking it is Jim and the raid as planned. Jim and his gang come later and find Diana really abducted. The mayor's wife frantically promises Jim anything if he will get her girl back. Jim and his boys ride to the rescue.

Back To the Old Ways

Pete takes Diana to his lone cabin. Jim seeks a way to get around behind the outlaws before it is too late. He ropes a tree high up on the cliff, behind the bandits and over the cabin. Then he lets himself down again and comes upon the cabin where Pete and Diana are struggling. Pete alarms his followers and they all attack Jim. He tries to hold them off; but realizes that his gun is loaded with blank cartridges for their fake raid. However, Jim's party comes up in time and a triumphant party goes back to town, where Jim extracts two promises from the boss—the mayor's wife—first that Diana shall be his; and second, that the town shall be permitted to be a decent place to live in.

"THE WHITE HORSEMAN"

Episode No. 11

"A Race With Death"

ALLEN is knocked from the top of the moving train by the Spider's men who have boarded it to get the bracelet. Cuevas, Allen's Indian friend, is forced to jump off. Ramsey, on the front platform of the coach, attempting to take the bracelet from the Indian girl is attacked by the Spider before he can succeed. In their struggle, they get across onto the car ahead of the coach and the Indian girl uncouples the train and goes to the rescue of Jean on the back platform.

Allen and Cuevas borrow a signal tender's track motor and go in pursuit of the train to rescue Jean from the outlaw's clutches as she struggles on the rear platform. Onava joins her in battling. Allen arrives on the motor and climbing to the coach throws the outlaw overboard.

Truce is Called

Ramsey and the Spider call a truce and go to the engineer to tell him about the coach. The engineer stops the train and waiting till the coach catches up, manages to get it recoupled without damage and stops to investigate the cause of the trouble.

To get Jean to her father who is supposed to be ill in town, Allen takes the track motor around the train on a passing track. Ramsey and the outlaws see this and cutting the engine loose start in pursuit of it.

Allen switches the motor onto the main line ahead of the engine and swings aboard as it passes. On board, he fights a battle with the outlaws but in the end is overcome and the engine sweeps down on the motor as it gets to the yard limits of the city.

In the Path of the Train

A towerman sees the danger and throws the switch in time to turn the motor from the path of the engine.

Jean and the Indian girl set out for her father's room, having Cuevas to spy on the outlaws. The outlaws get into a taxi and go to beat the girls to the tenement. Cuevas punches a hole in the gas tank and sets fire to the stream of gasoline which trails off after the taxi.

The outlaws double-cross Ramsey and lock him in a closet with the hag that owns the place. Allen and Cuevas arrive ahead of Jean and battle with the outlaws.

Jean arrives —she gets out of the taxi and is paying it off when the fire catches up with it and the gas tank explodes.

Up on the top floor of the tenement Cuevas is tied up in a blanket and Allen is knocked backwards out of the window.

Col. Thompson	Calvert Carter
Reynolds	John Judd

A BAND of robbers have been making a systematic series of raids on the banks of Western towns. In one of them one of the robbers is caught, but the others get away. Jimmy Dickson, ranger, learns from the captured man that the town of Dicksonville is to be their next point of attack. Jimmy conceives the idea of going to the town as a tenderfoot.

Welcome to Town

Jimmy arrives and meets with a reception which first puzzles, then amuses him. But he is quick to see that the whole thing is a fake, made up for his benefit, especially when the stage is attacked by Indians and rescued by the posse from town. But Jimmy, intent on business, plays up his tenderfoot rôle for all it is worth.

At the saloon and gambling hall, lately an ice-cream parlor, Jimmy causes some excitement by resenting the intrusion of some bad men and shooting at their feet. As his bullets are the only real ones in the gathering, there is some anxiety until Col. Thompson gets Jimmy's gun and loads it with blanks. Jimmy dances with Betty, the Colonel's daughter, and arouses the jealousy of Reynolds, who up to this time has been her most ardent suitor.

The biggest joke of the day is to be a fake hold-up of the stage, when it will be robbed of the payroll sent to a ranch down the line.

Real Stage Hold-up

The colonel and the others hand over the pay-roll, gleefully watching Jimmy. But it is soon found that the robbers were the real thing, for the other fake ones arrive. And Jimmy has gone after the desperate gang with a gun full of blanks!

Jimmy meets the bandits one at a time, and has caught and disarmed the last one, who proves to be Reynolds, when the Colonel and the others catch up with him. Congratulations are, indeed, in order, but they fall a bit flat when Jimmy discloses the fact that he is a ranger. But he tells Betty that he will forgive them all if she will let him call on her—and she seems ready to seek his forgiveness.

Mystery of the Ford Coupe with the Trick Doors--See

"FOR SALE"

HARRY SWEET

HARRY is trying to sell a trick Ford coupe of ancient vintage. A young couple look at the car but walk away from the ambitious salesman when he can't control the actions of the car. The girl passes Harry her card and the next day he calls at the house to show the car to her dad.

Just to show what the car can stand he takes the whole family and several baskets of lunch and starts off for a picnic. Out on the State road first one door and then the second door falls off the handsome coupe. In spite of this little detail they arrive at their destination.

Harry takes two of the baskets and lays them on the ground while he returns for the others. But a kid steals the baskets while he turns around and Harry chases him into a large hole.

While Harry is chasing the kid the girl's sweetheart throws her into his own car and speeds away. Harry overtakes him in the coupe and rescues the girl who agrees to be his "storm and strife" for life.

Who Threatens Independence?

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Vol. XXIII JUNE 11, 1921 No. XXV

[Recopied by permission]

THE independent producer is a very important factor in the industry of motion pictures.

He is a bulwark against monopoly; he is a force against the dangerous accumulation of factory-made pictures; he furnishes the individuality of treatment, the freshness of ideas that make for the different picture; he is the well spring of the open market.

His product is greatly needed.

Charles Pathe emphasized the idea seven years ago when, upon withdrawing from the General Film Company, he announced his desire to have an organization similar to a book publishing house, an independent distributing concern that would encourage, everywhere, the film author and producer by being able to market profitably his wares.

The comparison is a good one. What would the book world be today if most all of the stories came from only a half dozen sources of creative effort and bearing the style mark of as few a number of hands?

The health of the box-office today depends very largely upon the picture, marked by originality of conception and individuality of treatment—upon a sufficient number of such pictures. It is the different picture that attracts, often in spite of crudity of treatment or other glaring faults. It is sameness that palls upon the public taste, even when technically the picture has what we term a "satin finish."

Commercially, the matter is of supreme importance. It is conceivable that aggregate box-office returns will vary many millions of dollars throughout the year because of this one factor or lack of it. It is conceivable that this is the main trouble today with the box-office. Certainly we will all admit that there is too much "sameness" in pictures.

We need the independent producer? What are we doing to encourage him?

It is a question that every distributing concern in this business may well and seriously ask of itself. So may the exhibitor; so may the entire industry. For the concern of the box-office is the concern of all.

What is it that the independent producer needs and asks for?

He wants first of all a distributor in whose operations he has implicit confidence.

He wants to know that his picture will get the fairest kind of treatment, that it will not be used to help sell other pictures, that the distributor be not committed to other pictures so that he must advance them at the expense of the independent producer's—in other words, he wants, primarily, a fair and square deal, a deal whereby all pictures handled are sold on their merits and on nothing else.

Then he wants to know that his picture will be merchandised for all it is worth. And this demands more than the ordinary picture salesmanship. It demands a correct rental policy and above all it demands exploitation, exploitation clear through—and big and forcefully—to the picture-going public. Exploitation is the mighty factor.

The matter of financial arrangement isn't so important. If the independent producer gets a fair deal and forceful merchandising he can turn elsewhere and get financial help—to keep on making pictures. And he should finance himself. He must from now on. It is money in his pocket, if he does.

Then, of course, he wants first-run representation. He makes a big point of this.

Our reply is that he'll get first run if his picture is good enough, and his distributor is able enough.

We are fully aware of the importance of first run showings: but we can't believe that the way is arbitrarily closed today to the good enough independent picture.

It takes about 400 features per year to meet our present first run requirements. Will anyone tell us of any one or two or three producing firms which—even all together—supply as many first run calibre pictures?

Again, the investment in first run theatres today is considerably greater than the entire investment in production and distribution. A half billion dollars is at stake here. These theatres have got to have good pictures if they are to last. Are these huge investments to be sacrificed to uphold a comparatively small producing concern? Can they afford to keep good pictures out? Can they be run successfully unless they are run as theatres only, regardless of any producer ownership or tie-up. Do they dare risk a greater investment for a greater one? Of course not!

We are told that first run theatres won't pay the proper prices to the independent picture. If that is true then we will close this editorial with the blunt statement that the first run theatre is the force that is killing independent production; that, thereby, it is standing in the way of the healthful and successful development of the picture and the picture industry; that it is thereby treading a straight course toward its own future bankruptcy. If independent production is to stop we wouldn't want to invest a dollar in first-run theatres.

But we can't believe that any first-run theatre is shortsighted enough to encourage its own ruin.

"Thunder Island"

ISOLA GARCIA, a little Mexican shepherdess, tends her flocks on the peninsula of Baja California which is largely the property of Pio Mendoza, an aged and dying Spanish Don. Isola is persuaded to marry the Don so that she will receive his legacy as he is the last survivor of his family.

She is called away from the Don's hacienda by a bandit's raid on her flock. Paul Corbin, on his schooner in the cove sees the fight and helps the pretty Mexican girl drive the bandits away. The two are walking along the shore when Mendoza's secretary arrives and tells the girl that Don Pio has recovered and wants her to come to him.

The girl goes with the secretary to the mainland in his launch.

Her escort brings her to one of the hotels of the town. Then he tells her that he was Pio Mendoza and asked her if she did not remember her husband. Isobel was suspicious of the Mexican but decided to use strategy and put him off. She tells him that if he is really Pio Mendoza then she wants to be married over again at the church in the morning.

After the man had departed Isobel calls a Mexican youth and for several pieces of gold she borrows his costume, and then makes her escape from the hotel. At the quay she sees Corbin's schooner rounding the point and leaps into the water and swims out to meet the boat.

The crew of the schooner were engaged in diving for pearls when Mendoza's men stirred up mutiny among them and they turned upon Corbin and the white crew imprisoning them in the hold. Mendoza held Isola a prisoner in the cabin of the boat while the men were carousing and dividing the pearl treasure. Through the aid of a half wit in Mendoza's gang Corbin and his men are freed and after a terrific fight subdue the Mexicans. Corbin and Isola then sail away together on the schooner for the States.

Newspaper Publicity Stories for "Thunder Island"

Edith Roberts Stars in Fast Tropical Romance

IT is a colorful, romantic and action-jammed photodrama of life and love in peppery California in which Edith Roberts is to be seen at the .... Theatre next .... when "Thunder Island" is first shown.

"Thunder Island" was filmed in the semi-tropical langor of Magdalena Bay by Norman Dawn, director of many exotic Universal screen romances. The basic idea of the story came from Beatrice Grimshaw's widely read story, "My Lady of the Island," but Dawn has given it additional twists of unexpected drama which enhance its appeal materially.

The story covers a period of four days continuous and fast action. To tell it briefly, a fabously wealthy Mexican rancher is married on his deathbed to Isola Garcia, a little shepherdess. He brings about the marriage to repay her family for their kindness to him, by leaving the child his legal widow in order that she may inherit his fortune. He dies, but a designing employe of his impersonates him, tells the girl that his recovery was sudden and attempts to claim her as his wife. She escapes with the aid of a rich young American who is cruising in Southern waters in search of pearls.

Miss Roberts appears in the dual role of Isola Garcia and her brother, Juan. Jack O'Brien, the dashingly handsome big fellow who is so popular on both stage and screen, has the leading masculine role of the American pearl hunter, while Fred De Silva, a clever Mexican actor, interprets the villainous role.

Mexican Revolution Fails to Stop Actors

LOWER CALIFORNIA, called Baja California in the Spanish, is the tempestuous scene of "Thunder Island," Edith Roberts' most recent Universal photodrama, which is now playing to capacity audiences at the .... Theatre.

The story was filmed under the direction of Norman Dawn, who produced "Lasca," "The Fire Cat" and other extraordinary productions and is regarded as one of Miss Roberts' most romantic starring vehicles.

On the peninsula of Lower California between the Pacific and the Gulf of California the action takes place, and Spanish, Mexican and Indian characters make up the supporting cast.

While the filming was in progress revolutionists overran the country in an effort to restore former Governor Estuban Cantu to power, and bullets whizzed around the actual location where the Universal company was at work.

The water scenes, which add materially to the romance of the production, were filmed in Magdalena Bay while warships of the Pacific fleet were pounding the sea with projectiles at target practice. In the furious fight on the schooner used in the story sailors from the fleet participated and added to the realism by their knowledge of nautical matters.

Southern Romance Makes Strong Photodrama

EDITH ROBERTS will be the attraction at the .... Theatre on .... "Thunder Island," her most recent Universal photoplay of the enchanted mesa of the tropic zone, will be shown.

The origin of "Thunder Island" was Beatrice Grimshaw's clever story, "My Lady of the Island," a tale of the South Seas, but Norman Dawn stirred the dramatic punch into a Mexican cocktail, added a jolt of tobasco sauce and established the locale in Baja California, or in more transparent language, Lower California, and that part of the peninsula within the revolutionist's rifle-range of the Gulf of Lower California.

Miss Roberts appears as a little shepherdess who is content to watch her flocks on the sun-washed slopes above the gulf until her marriage to a dying old don of doubtless dollars complicates the story and starts things moving faster than a Mexican election.

Jack O'Brien, six feet three in his pajamas and a clever actor, plays opposite the star. Arthur Jasmine, who has proven his histrionic ability in previous successes with Miss Roberts, has a delightfully humorous character role as a somewhat cuckoo young simp, while Fred De Silva, the mildest mannered screen villain that ever cut a throat, has the "heavy" role.

Work of Pearl Pirates Shown in Universal Film

IT does not require any unusual taste to get the fullest enjoyment out of "Thunder Island," Edith Roberts' latest Universal action-drama, which began its local showing last night at the .... Theatre. If one is a soldier of fortune the colorful locale will be familiar. If one is somewhat of a modern Lochinvar, the fast work of the two-fisted young hero in defense of the utterly lovely heroine will be appreciated.

"Thunder Island" opens with Miss Roberts as a shepherdess on the picturesque hills over the Gulf of California. She is at peace with the world until bandits raid her little flock and her brother is killed. Then because troubles never come singly, she is married to an old millionaire who is believed to be dying. The ceremony is performed at the deathbed in order that the girl may inherit his fortune. She leaves to return to her mountain home and is overtaken by a vigorous man, the image and likeness of the husband whom she had left to die. He tells her that he is her husband, that he only shammed illness and now tries to claim her as his wife. She escapes and seeks sanctuary on the schooner of a young American pearl-hunter. Then she learns that the man posing as her husband is an imposter; a brutal villain who leads a band of pearl pirates. They overtake the schooner and a furious fight ensues for possession of a chest of pearls.

"ROMAN ROMEOS"

Third Round Makes Moran Champion of Screen World

CLANG—went a gong.

Powie—went a fist.

Ooof—gasped a pug; and the battle for the welterweight championship of the screen was on at Universal City.

It was a scene for "Robinson's Trousseau," a comedy in which Lee Moran is being starred. H. C. Witwer wrote the theme and put into it all of the pep of his famous "Leather-Pushers" series, yet evolving a new and particularly clever trend of humor to suit the capabilities of the rangy fun-flinger.

"Robinson's Trousseau" is a prize-fight story and, as Carlisle would have written, had he not been under contract to the French revolution, is a ring-tailed dinger.

A prize-fighter without a fight is like a general without an army and so the star was provided with a crew of gauntlet blacksmiths to rivet his ribs together in several of the big scenes immediately preceding the fight.

Then the big battle was staged. A ring was built and in the seats were as choice a collection of fight fans as can be found at the principal gore-garrets throughout the country whenever there is a riot.

A young man with ears like the handles of a loving cup was engaged to fight the star. It was supposed to be a fight in which the blows would be pulled to save the participants, but before it started Jack Nelson, directing the star, said to the pug:

"This guy Moran says that if you're a fighter he's an eminent tragedian."

Fighters Start Their Target Practice

"I doan know what this imminent tragedy stuff is," was the answer, "but if that guy don't think I can hit he'd better cancel his accident insurance."

Then the diplomatic Mr. Nelson confided to Mr. Moran that the pug said that he was as funny as a crippled newsboy who is knocked over by a limousine while he is trying to steal an apple for his dying uncle.

"Is thaaaat so," said Lee Moran, who has the touchy temper characteristic of the Norwegians, "is thaaaat so?"

When they climbed into the ring at exactly 143 pounds apiece they shook hands because it is always done, you know, and then started to target practice. The professional pug clipped Lee jauntily on the jaw and Lee whanged him tumultuously on the tummy.

"Cut," shouted Nelson.

"That's what I'm trying to do," said Lee, "I cut him once but he ducked—watch this one."

With that he drew a fist up from around his hip-pocket and curved it gracefully over toward the pug's jaw. It reached the mark and had it been a detonating bomb it could not have wrought more havoc. If that pug had been a cathedral and Lee Moran a German gunner he could not have found his vulnerable spots more accurately.

The camera recorded just enough of the battle to give the screen its fastest fight and mercifully stopped clicking as the pug left the ring—feet first.

Novel Publicity Idea for "Blue Sunday" Comedy

THE new Majestic Theatre of Cudahy, Wisconsin, has a live wire manager in Mr. J. Deisch who knows a real publicity opportunity when he sees one. The difference between a substantial profit at the box-office and "just getting by" depends largely upon the ability to put over the proper publicity and exploitation for each picture.

In "Blue Sunday," the Universal-Jewel two-reel comedy starring Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran, Manager Deisch grasped the opportunity this picture offered and nearly everyone in his town knew that the picture was at his theatre.

There is no prohibition of movies on Sunday in Cudahy yet and Mr. Deisch doesn't intend that there will be any such prohibition. On his heralds he advertised the picture as "The 1921 Model Comedy, 'Blue Sunday.' Come and see what may happen to you, me and everybody in the days to come. This is all Real Fun! You will really enjoy it!"

Then he got out a little blue tag printed in dark blue ink and had it attached to most of the automobiles which came into town and also baby carriages, wagons and conveyances of every kind. In addition through co-operation on the part of the tradesmen one of the tags was attached to every parcel delivered to homes in that city on the day preceding the showing of the picture.

The tag which was made in the form of a regular express tag is reproduced here and it is a stunt that other exhibitors can successfully work in their towns when showing this comedy.

UNIVERSAL-JEWEL COMEDY BREAKS THEATRE POLICY

UNTIL "Blue Sunday," the satire on the Blue Laws starring Lyons and Moran reached San Francisco it had been the policy of Roth and Partington's Imperial Theatre in San Francisco to play no comedies whatsoever in support of their feature bill. They changed their minds, however, after C. A. Nathan of the Universal Exchange in San Francisco, had shown them the two-reel Universal-Jewel Comedy. "Blue Sunday" will also play at the California Theatre in San Francisco and has been booked very heavily throughout California, where the blue law agitation has excited a great deal of antagonism and opposition. Many theatres are giving "Blue Sunday" the kind of exploitation which a five-reel feature often fails to have.

Flashes From Universal City

Future Universal-Jewel Photodramas and Special Attraction Films Now Rapidly Nearing Completion

THREE lively rounds which would be a great preliminary to the Dempsey-Carpentier fight have just been staged at Universal City with Lee Moran in the role of an aspiring welterweight, and a real pugilist from the Vernon Athletic Club as the principals. The fight is for one of the scenes in Lee Moran's current comedy production, "Robinson's Trousseau," from the story by H. C. Witwer.

A REPLICA of one of the huge offices of the Sears-Roebuck Company in Chicago has been constructed at Universal City for Tod Browning's production of "Fanny Herself," the Edna Ferber story, in which Mabel Julienne Scott is playing the title role.

THE two stories originally announced as the first to be filmed for the Universal-Jewel features starring Harry Carey, have been shelved for future production and, instead he will be seen in "Partners," a story Carey has had in mind for several years. Lucien Hubbard, scenario editor at Universal City, has prepared the continuity, and Robert Thornby will direct the picture.

AFTER finishing her current feature, "Christine of the Young Heart," Gladys Walton will start work on one of the brightest and most unusual comedy-dramas that has come to the Universal scenario department in a long time. It is the work of Roy Clements and is called "The Girl Who Knew All About Men."

KING BAGGOT has been selected to direct Marie Prevost in her first Universal feature, "The Butterfly," work on which will be started within the next few days. The story is by Percival Wilde.

EDITH ROBERTS, who has just finished the concluding scenes for "The Gossamer Web," under the direction of King Baggot, will soon start work on "Storm Tossed," an original story of the Brittany Coast by John Hohenwest. In the meantime Miss Roberts is enjoying a few days' rest at Coronado Beach.

PRISCILLA DEAN, her director, Stuart Paton, and the forty people who accompanied them to Oregon to film lumber camp scenes for "Conflict," the star's next feature picture, have returned to Universal City after being away about three weeks. Because of the weather in the North Woods it was possible to work only one day a week, so it was decided to take the company back to the studio where the remainder of the scenes will be filmed.

Edith Roberts Plays Strong Character Role

Edith Roberts in "THUNDER ISLAND" IT'S A UNIVERSAL

THERE are few stars of the screen possessing the youth and beauty of Edith Roberts who are capable of playing the colorful character roles in which the charming Universal star has won such phenomenal success. In fact there are few of the younger stars who will allow the public to see them in pictures which do not give them the opportunity to look their best in the most becoming frocks and millinery.

But Edith Roberts is such a consummate artist and has such a wealth of personality that she does not have to depend on her gowns for her popularity with movie audiences. In her latest photodrama, "Thunder Island," Miss Roberts again plays a part in keeping with her excellent Spanish characterizations.

Miss Roberts appears as a Mexican girl in Baja California and puts into the role all the fire and romance which endeared her to playgoers who saw "Lasca," "The Adorable Savage" and more lately, "The Fire Cat."

In "Lasca" she played the same role and depicted the poem of Franklin Des Prez with a dash which rejuvenated the old classic of the Rio Grande and made it one of the year's most successful films. Norman Dawn directed.

In "The Adorable Savage" she interpreted a South Sea Island role with added vigor and gave particular emphasis to the langorous and romantic love interst.

As Dulce Alvarez in "The Fire Cat" she exceeded her previous vivacity and stormed the citadel of her admirers hearts with a passionate portrayal of a little South American girl in life's greatest moment.

Because of her sympathetic interpretation of Spanish-American roles Miss Roberts has become tremendously popular in the Latin countries and will try and arrange a personal appearance tour in South America and Mexico when she can find time from her work at Universal City.

WHAT'S AT THE PLAYHOUSE TO-NIGHT?

A BANDIT raid on a sheep ranch, piracy on the high seas, love, battle and adventure—these are some of the thrills in store for playgoers who see Edith Roberts at the .... Theatre in "Thunder Island," her latest Universal photodrama. The story was produced along the pearl coast of Baja California by Norman Dawn.

MARA-HUANA, the Mexican hemp which affects those who smoke it like opium, whiskey and red pepper mixed, is used with humorous effect in "Thunder Island," Edith Roberts' latest Universal photodrama, which is now playing at the .... Theatre. Arthur Jasmine appears as "Sanchez, the loco," a Mexican boy who spends most of his time smoking mara-huana. He gives the story a humorous zest which contrasts interestingly with the tense dramatic action.

THE dramatic wallop of a beautiful young girl marrying a dying man at his request so that he can leave her a fortune, and then his unexpected recovery, his equally unexpected relapse and death and his impersonation by another man, are among the interesting situations in "Thunder Island," Edith Roberts' latest Universal action drama. The story is now showing at the .... Theatre and is one of the year's most entertaining pictures.

NEW YORK'S PROLOGUE FOR REPUTATION

Original Prologue for "Reputation"

THE applause of the critics present at the New York premiere of "Reputation," the latest Universal-Jewel starring Priscilla Dean, which was held at the Hotel Astor, is being echoed in the reports from all over the country where the super-film has been exhibited in first run houses.

The elaborate prologue arranged to introduce "Reputation" to New York City has set a high standard for similar screen presentations. A group photograph of the principals in the prologue is reproduced on this page. The prologue was an allegorical pantomine enacted by a young girl and a young man aided by two women. The formation of the character and Reputation of the girl and her efforts to guard this Reputation, her temptations and follies, were all splendidly depicted and later was shown the destruction of her Reputation by the tongues of Rumor and Gossip.

Additional color was lent to the prologue by the presence of five pretty girls dressed in costumes of the Revolutionary period, who distributed the programmes and acted as ushers. For the benefit of those exhibitors who wish to use the "Reputation" prologue as originally presented, it has been prepared in scenario form and a copy may be secured upon booking the picture at any of the Universal exchanges. The complete prologue was as follows.

AT the rise of the curtain the girl is discovered in an attitude of awakening. She is dressed like a child of about fifteen with hair hanging loose and dressed in rompers and stockinged feet.

On the stage is seen fourteen "Building Blocks." (These blocks are the telescopic variety such as children play with. They are the largest size and have specially painted letters on them that can be seen from the furthest corner of the house.) Behind these blocks on the stage are concealed high heeled slippers and a small but elaborate hat.

The girl discovers the blocks and shows that she understands that here is something for her to do. She starts to build up the blocks with girlish enthusiasm. As she builds them up in a pyramid, she gradually changes her costume and general appearance. When the fourth block is put in place she slips on her high-heeled slippers. (This is done without attracting the attention of the audience.) When four more blocks are put in place she goes through the business of finding that her loose hanging hair is annoying and with a quick movement she sweeps it up on the top of her head and puts on the small hat to hold it in place.

"I Knew it"

Says Barret McCormick
Cleveland's famous manager

"WHEN I first screened 'REPUTATION' I knew it was a big picture and after its run at the ALLEN Theatre, Cleveland, where I had the pleasure of presenting it recently, my opinion was confirmed both in its reception by the audience and the receipts. Presented under the most unfavorable circumstances — extremely hot weather and such counter-attractions as big league ball games—it showed a steady increase throughout the engagement, the last day being larger than the opening, which surely speaks well for its dramatic appeal and word-of-mouth advertising value. My congratulations to UNIVERSAL on "REPUTATION'."

The Most Dynamic Personality in Moving Pictures

Read What EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW says

"PRISCILLA DEAN plays a dual role of a brilliant actress ruling the theatrical world by her cyclonic personality and unconventionality and a sweet, young, innocent girl. We see her in many characters and each characterization is perfect.

"THE theme—which is that of a deserted child struggling in the footsteps of a mother of whom she would be proud and yet ashamed, and the meeting of the mother and daughter at various times during the picture—is always an appalling one.

"THERE are some very interesting and unusual shadow effects in the picture which are exceedingly good. An added thrill of excitement is given by a shadow seen creeping outside a screen, and so forth. There are splendid interiors of an extravagant banquet, the interior of an Oriental cafe, and theatre scenes. Director Stuart Paton has kept the action running swiftly, with no let-down of interest."

rising pyramid admiring it and showing that her whole heart is being put into the work.

When two more blocks are put in place the ten of them standing tower-like form the word "REPUTATION."

At this point the man makes his appearance and stands curiously inspecting the work. The girl seeing the man pulls off the rompers (which are "snapped" together so that they are easily removed), disclosing an elaborate dinner gown, fancy hat and high-heeled shoes. This conveys the illusion that she has grown from a child to a young woman while building a "Reputation."

Proud of "Reputation," she draws the man's attention to it saying in pantomine: "That's mine, how do you like it?"

The man looks at "REPUTATION" scornfully and indicates that he has a supreme contempt for it. He swings his cane and is about to knock it down. The girl rushes to its defense. The man, amazed that she should be so solicitous of "REPUTATION," stands observing her curiously for a moment and then contemptuously swings his cane again and hits "REPUTATION."

The column starts to fall but the girl catches it and with apparent effort saves it from destruction. Infuriated she drives him off stage and then tired from her efforts she sinks down on the stage and sleeps.

The man returns and seeing the girl asleep and "REPUTATION" unguarded takes advantage of the situation, and attempts to kiss her. The girl springs from him and points pleadingly to "REPUTATION." The MAN realizing how much it means to her, bows his acknowledgement and extends his hands in respectful pleading. They advance toward each other and are locked in an embrace when two elderly women enter.

These elderly women represent "gossipers" and they are horrified in seeing the girl in the man's embrace. Pointing the finger of scorn at her, they advanced to "REPUTATION," and with contemptuous looks and gestures destroyed "REPUTATION," then exit.

The girl sorrowfully looks over the wreck of "REPUTATION," and finally sinks to her knees in utter dejection among the scattered blocks. The man in deep solicitation kneels beside her and takes her hand. This forms a tableau on which the curtain is drawn.

CURTAIN

NOTE:—The general effect of this allegorical program is intensified by the use of the following lighting effects: A white spot is used at the entrance of the girl and held until she sleeps then an amber flood is used until the entrance of the "gossipers," then a white flood until the column is destroyed by the "gossipers," at which point a red flood is thrown and held until the girl sinks in despair amid the scattered blocks at which point a green spot is held until curtain.

The Very Best Actor in the Movies

By Karl K. Kitchen.

A Gay Dog, Without Pedigree, but Is Super-Intelligent, and Earns $300 a Week.

BROWNIE is the best actor in the movies. But, unlike the majority of the gelatine stars who think they are the best actors, Brownie does not admit it.

There is no occasion to regard with suspicion anything that is set forth here For Brownie does not talk about himself or his art. He has too much sense, for one thing And being a dog is another But that does not make him any the less an artist. In my humble opinion he is so far superior to all the other gelatine stars that there is no comparison.

However, as even the opinion of a critic is merely one man's opinion, I will prove my assertions with genuine logic.

It is universally conceded that animal actors surpass human actors on the silver screen. If the art of acting is the art of being natural, there is no occasion to dilate on this point any further. And as Brownie is universally conceded to be the best of all animal actors working before the camera, it is self-evident that he is the best actor in the movies.

Probably you have seen him many times in different films, for he has appeared in several, even starred in a few. And probably you have been amazed at his "stunts," which are quite as numerous as those of Douglas Fairbanks or even Charlie Chaplin For taking a bottle of milk out of an ice box and feeding a baby with it, as he does in "The Dog Doctor" is quite as "human" as washing a baby's face and putting the child to bed as he does in "Pals."

It would require a lengthy chapter to set forth all the screen accomplishments of this super-intelligent dog. Besides, any one can see them in the theatre. So, like every other movie star, a story about him simmers down to a description of his "personality," how he broke into the motion picture use in the vicinity of Los Angeles.

The movie director was struck by the intelligence of the quivering animal's face. In fact, it was almost a case of love at first sight. He offered to give Brownie a home. In less time than it takes to write it (and it doesn't take much time), the Los Angeles pound was disappointed and the movie colony gained a new recruit. For as soon as his new owner got him to the studio he set about to make an actor of him.

Now, as everybody knows, very few motion picture actors receive any kind of training. If they happen to be "the type" wanted at the moment they are put through the paces by a loud-mouthed director and then "shot," the shooting on these occasions being more painful for the future film audiences than for the actors.

But Brownie was given a real studio training. He was taught to do all the tricks of a studio hound, such as biting the seat of actors' trousers without even tearing said trousers; and as he was a bright "mutt" he learned with surprising ease and rapidity. He never forgot a single trick that was taught him, and what is more remarkable he actually devised new tricks himself.

Now, the main difference between a stage dog and one that qualifies for stellar honors in the movies is this. The stage-trained dog has only to learn a few stunts and repeat them daily, week in and week out, perhaps for years, whereas the canine movie actor has to learn new stunts for every picture in which he appears. In the case of

Right at the outset let me state that Brownie is the highest paid canine actor in the world. He earns $300 a week from the company which makes the Century Comedies in which he appears. But, of course, his owner collects it for him. That is the tragedy of animal actors—they don't get the big money they really earn. However, Brownie is not paying alimony to two or three former wives, so he is really exceptionally well off, although he doesn't know it.

Like most super-intelligent dogs he is a mongrel His father was a bulldog and his mother a fox terrier —or vice versa. It really doesn't matter. He was born in California, and consequently is an American dog Being without a pedigree, the date of his birth is not known, but he will be six years old before long—if not sooner.

It goes without saying that he is handsome—nearly all male vamps are. And from the fact that his tail wags constantly he may be put down as a gay dog, despite the fact that he leads a dog's life.

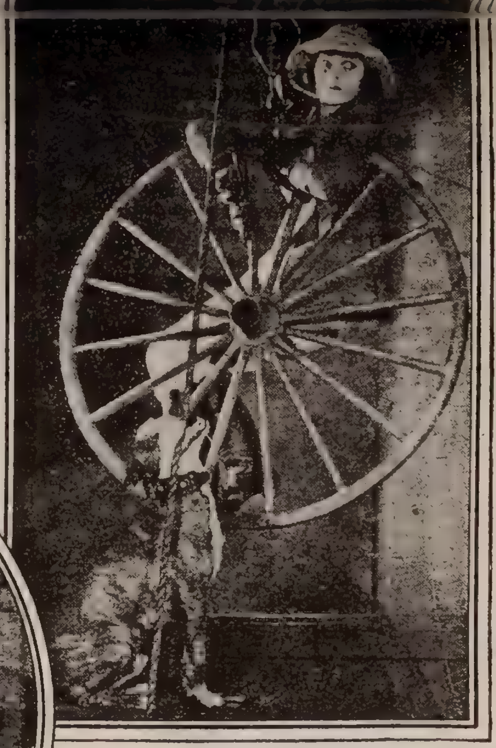
THE story of Brownie's debut in the movies narrowly escapes the tragic. It was on a foggy October morning (soft music should be played for this if you have a phonograph handy) three years ago, that one of the directors of Century Comedies was driving his car in the suburbs of Los Angeles, the city of the unburied dead, when he was hailed by the lone occupant of a flivver who was creeping in the opposite direction.

"Where's the dog pound, brother?" asked the occupant of the flivver.

"Ah, going to get some Hamburger steak?" queried the movie director, who was something of a half-wit.

"Nope, I'm going to get rid of this darn fool dog," answered the other, yanking a shivering animal from the floor of the car. "I thought the pound was on this street."

As luck would have it—and it was a lucky meeting for Brownie, I'll tell the world—the movie director happened to be looking for a "pad dog." A "pad dog," you probably don't know, is a dog that will grab the seat of a man's trousers for comedy effect, the said seat being well protected by a good thick pad to prevent disastrous complications. Few comedy films are made without at least one attack on the seat of the star's pants—pardon, I mean trousers—so "pad dogs" are in pretty general



Pulls the rope that hoists the heroine to safety.

Brownie gives the comedian a much-needed bath.

As "Dog Doctor," he drives the pony ambulance.

Brownie, it means new stunts at least every five or six weeks. From which it will be seen that a high degree of intelligence is absolutely necessary.

Like many gelatine stars, Brownie is temperamental, and when working with other dogs he often shows his jealousy. He will hug the "close-ups" every chance he gets. But naturally he has redeeming qualities. He has great affection for children and small dogs, and he will go to the aid of a helpless one if it is being pounced on by a bigger dog. However, this is merely his natural canine instinct, and he does not deserve any particular credit for it.

That he understands the word "camera" means to begin acting, and "cut" to cease acting, is not surprising. But that he has been around the studios for nearly two years and bitten only one person is really remarkable. For there are a lot of people in the Los Angeles studios who ought to be bitten. Brownie, however, has never taken a dislike to any one except a Chinese actor named Chi-Hong. Chi-Hong hurt his feelings in some way, with the result that Brownie not only took away the seat of his trousers but a good-sized hunk of his Celestial flesh.

Brownie lives with his owner in Hollywood and rides to the studio every day in a motor, as befits his exalted position in the film world.

AMATEUR DETECTIVES ENTER TAM CONTEST

WHEN the exploitation campaign for "Outside The Law," the Universal melodrama, starring Priscilla Dean, is finally concluded in the Middle West, the Priscilla Dean Tams will be known in every city and hamlet throughout that section. Two of the latest Middle Western cities to fall in line and conduct a successful Tam contest were Lima and Elyria, Ohio.

On this page is reproduced one of the advertisements used in the Elyria campaign and also an account of the experiences of the girl impersonator of "Silky Moll" from the Lima News, of Lima, Ohio.

GREAT DETECTING CONTEST

Begins Thursday Next

APRIL 7th

AND CONTINUES TO FRIDAY THE 8th

STARTING at 2·30 p. m. on that date, a CHRONICLE-TELEGRAM representative—Miss Silky Molly—wearing a blue serge skirt and coat, with black furs and with a Priscilla Dean Tam on her head will walk down streets which will be named later. Watch further announcements.

Catch Her and Win a Reward

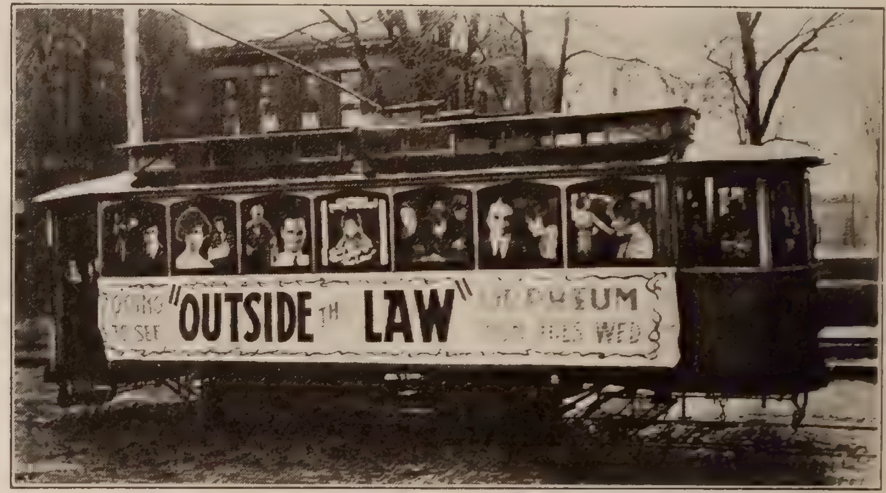
ANY woman who with a copy of THE CHRONICLE-TELEGRAM of the date of accosting stops Miss Molly and says "You are outside the law," will be given a coupon which, when presented at THE CHRONICLE-TELEGRAM office will entitle the lucky holder to a handsome PRISCILLA DEAN TAM absolutely FREE.

Watch for SILKY MOLL And Win the Reward

Advertising the contest conducted by the Chronicle-Telegram of Elyria, Ohio.

The keynote of the campaign in Elyria was the awakening of the detective instinct in the women readers of the paper by instructing them to be on watch for Miss Silky Moll, who would award the winners in the contest with Priscilla Dean Tams.

As in Lima, and other Ohio cities where the campaign had been previously tried, the Elyria contest proved to be highly successful.



Popular Movie Stars were passengers in this "Outside The Law" Car used in Marion, Ohio.

EXPLOITATION STUNTS NEEDED IN SMALL TOWNS

THE contention that exploitation stunts do not go over as well in small towns as in larger cities is strongly refuted by the exploitation put over by the management of the Virginia Theatre in Vallejo, California, for the showing of "Outside The Law," Priscilla Dean's photodrama of the under-world.

Vallejo is a city of 20,000, but it seems to be wide-awake. It became exceedingly interested in a "mystery" girl who appeared there wearing a black domino and a Priscilla Dean Tam.

The Virginia Theatre made a tie-up with the Vallejo Evening Times and a local department store, and arranged the recurrent appearance in the store window and on the streets of the city of three masked girls wearing Tams. While in the window, the girls would wear the masks. Then they would slip out into the streets, minus the masks, and promenade up and down.

One of them was designated as the "Mystery Girl." The other two were foils. It was announced that the first half-dozen Vallejo women who could recognize the "Mystery Girl" on the street, and who would escort her to the Times office, would get a Priscilla Dean Tam. The lucky women also got weekly passes for two to the Virginia Theatre.

The Times carried front page stories of the Mystery Girl, and her picture, in the mask, during the several days the chase was staged.

PRISCILLA DEAN

The Priscilla Dean Tam girl stunt has been put over in many cities in connection with "Outside The Law," but never before in so small a city. Its success in Valejo was equal to that in any other place, however.

He Got Experience Last Year.

Nevermore Says Mystery Girl

By SILKY MOLL.

SO—the tam contest closes today. Silky Moll made her last rounds this afternoon, this time visiting the stores, and gave away the last coupons for the Priscilla Dean Tams. As a result of all this, Lima will have a lot of little tam-o-shanter girls running around that never wore tams before.

At every turn this afternoon, some enterprising lady or girl was lying in ambush for me. I can always recognize 'em by their newspapers, which they have rolled up tightly under their arms.

One poor lady in particular had an awful time. When I left the News Office and reached Main street I saw her on the corner, with her eagle eye fixed on every girl that came her way. I brushed right past her, across the street, and she just gave me a cursory glance and let it go at that.

GAVE HER CHANCE

Because she looked so determined to get a tam, I went past her again but she either failed to notice me or she forgot the words. Anyhow, she never as much as smiled at me. Then once more before I went back to the office, I gave her a chance, but nothing doing, altho I saw her accost another girl who was wearing a tam something like mine, only a different color. It's too bad she didn't get one, for she was observant but at the wrong time.

On Thursday afternoon I was so much more conspicuous, because none of the tams were out yet, so everyone nailed me right at the start. This afternoon, however, there were lots of them down-town and it was more fun. I wandered into the stores, Greggs, Carter's, The Deisel Co., Basingers and Feldman's. In the Leader Store, where I visited the millinery department, there were scads of ladies and four of 'em nailed me right away. I didn't stay there long, for if I had, the coupons wouldn't have lasted a minute longer.

The Public Drug Store also housed a few curious and one of them was successful. Most of the dear ladies, however, got too excited or something, that they mutter something under their breath and by the time they get it out, I'm gone, just like that.

The Priscilla Dean tams are just darling. Miss Dean, the originator, wears one in her new picture "Outside The Law," which opens Sunday at the Lyric.

Boss Robs Himself To Please Cashier Sweetheart

"Bandits Beware"

Jonathan Small	Chas. Newton
Dave Stewart	Hoot Gibson
Betty Channing	Marcella Pershing
Red	John Judd

DAVE STUART is a part owner of the Red Dog Racquet store and is in love with his cashier, pretty Betty Channing. Betty wants romance.

Dave conceives the idea of robbing himself and hiding the "loot," figuring that he can play a prominent part in the subsequent excitement of the discovery of the "robbery" and thereby fill Betty's demand for romance.

The robbery is pulled off without anyone seeing him enter the office of the store through the window. But when it comes to burying the loot he has an unseen witness in the person of Red Pete who has been hiding in the vicinity and is "wanted" by the authorities of a neighboring county. As soon as Dave is gone, Red Pete unearths the treasure and believes that Dave is one of his own kind. But that does not keep him from pocketing the money.

Robbery Is Discovered

The robbery is discovered, but Dave's subsequent plans are shattered by his partner, Jonathan Small, who insists upon accusing Betty of the robbery.

The others know Dave is in love with Betty and think he is making a "noble sacrifice" to save her.

He runs across Red and conceives another brilliant idea of bribing Red to say that he had seen him take the money.

Betty is locked in a room over the store and is given an hour in which to tell where the money has been hidden or go to jail. Dave brings Red before Small and Red starts to tell the story that Dave had drilled into him. While he is re-enacting the robbery for Small's benefit, Betty is planning to make her escape from her prison by way of the window, to the street below. Red swings open the safe doors and covers them with his gun.

Recover Stolen Money

Red makes his getaway with the contents of the safe as Betty is making hers in the buckboard. Dave gives chase, while Small rounds up a posse. Dave overtakes the buckboard and overcomes Red with Betty's aid. The posse arrives at the psychological moment and the money is found on Red—that which he had taken from the safe and also the buried treasure.

Rafael, a bandit	Jean Perkins
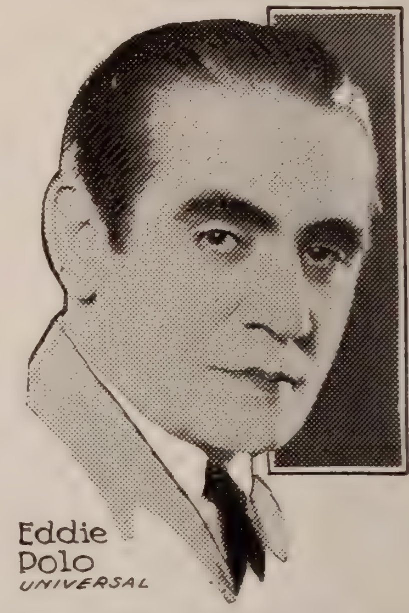
The Mystery Woman	Magda Lane



THE launch with Jack and Dolores aboard is set afire by Satan just after the ring, unknown to Satan, is placed in a bottle and thrown overboard by Jack. Meanwhile, the Mystery Woman has told Lieut. Alvarez that Satan is pursuing Jack and Dolores and Alvarez takes the Submarine H-6 and goes to their rescue. He arrives just after Jack's launch explodes, takes Jack and Dolores aboard and makes for shore while Satan and his men in their speed boat head for their stronghold outside the city. Lieut. Alvarez now advises Jack that he will try and locate the ring and will notify all the ports upon which the Gulf Stream touches to keep watch for the bottle. He takes Jack and Dolores to an old tavern to remain in hiding until the ring turns up. Satan has sent word to various spies to keep watch for Jack and they report his presence at the tavern. Satan and his men attack Jack and Dolores after Alvarez leaves, and while Dolores is captured, Jack escapes through a secret tunnel which the Mystery Woman shows him. He follows Satan and his men and Dolores to their castle, again attempts to save her and a fight follows. Satan's men force Jack on to the parapet of the castle wall where one of the men attacks him from behind. Taken by surprise, Jack is knocked off the wall and falls toward the rocks below.

Benefit Hotel Show Proves Big Success

"Custard's Last Stand"

Two-reel Century Comedy

Featuring

ZIP MONTY and FLORENCE LEE

THE room-clerk at the Bilkmore Hotel is in love with the star summer guest, but the girl doesn't notice him. After being refused a dozen times he goes to the restaurant to drown his sorrows in strong coffee. That night the guests of the hotel are acting in a show for the benefit of the crippled furniture of the hotel.

In the last act the stagehand comes in when the villain is choking the girl and is supposed to rescue her. But just at that time the hotel clerk wakes up and thinks that the girl is really being attacked. He starts throwing everything within reach upon the stage. The audience joins in the fight with pillows, pies and crockery and drive the actors off the stage. The show, nevertheless, was a great financial success.

Masked Prize Winner Only The Grocery Boy

"Rubes and Boobs"

Featuring BILLY FLETCHER

REUBEN was a grocery boy with romantic ideas. When he saw the modern edition of Queen Elizabeth hesitate before crossing a puddle of water he laid his coat at her feet. The girl ignored the coat and passed him by while Reuben picked up his water-soaked garment in disgust.

At the next house he finds a note saying that the key is under the mat and with special instructions for him not to touch the beer but to put the groceries in the icebox. Reuben enters the house and proceeds to take a bath in the tiled bath.

In the meantime the girl he had encountered on the street meets the owner of the house, who is an old school chum ,and she volunteers to keep an eye on the house during the owner's absence. The girl is in bed in the guestroom when Reuben enters the room in his pajamas. He jumps out of the window and is chased by the cop on the beat. Seeing a garden party in the next block he gets a mask and is awarded first prize for having the best costume. When they unmask, the cop discovers Reuben and takes him off to the city jail.

"THE WHITE HORSEMAN"

Episode No. 14

"A Jest of Fate"

AT the cabin of a forest ranger The White Spider, leader of an outlaw band, is battling desperately with the ranger for his freedom. He overcomes the ranger and starts to untie a member of his band who has also been made prisoner.

Hoping to effect the outlaw's capture, Jean Ramsey has led Wayne Allen, owner of the treasure ranch, and his Indian friend, Cuvas, to the cabin of the ranger. The girl is unaware of the dealings of her uncle, Dick Ramsey, with the outlaws, and with the desire of Ramsey to possess the secret of the opal caves hidden on the Allen ranch.

In the meantime Allen and his Indian friend have encountered the outlaws at the ranger's hut and a desperate battle is in progress when the boulder from the adjoining cliff crashes into the house, bringing Ramsey and the Indian girl in its wake.

In the crash Ramsey seizes the bracelet and makes his escape. He is followed by the Indian girl, relentless in her pursuit of the key to the treasure cave, which is the tomb of her ancestors.

Meanwhile the Mummy Man, strange phantom who lives in the hills and appears at times when Jean Ramsey and Wayne Allen seem in great peril, has learned that the Spider has the bracelet and determines once and for all to put an end to the trouble by making away with the outlaw band and burying the bracelet beneath an avalanche of earth.

The White Spider and his men make for the Spider's cave, Allen, Jean and the Indians are hot on their trail. Wayne is determined to wrest the bracelet from the White Spider. The Mummy Man, with dynamite and fuse, prepares to blow up the Spider's cave, burying outlaws and bracelet in the explosion. He lights the fuse, but his plans go wrong, for the Spider and his men leave suddenly enroute to the treasure caves, and Wayne Allen, Jean and the Indians ride on and dash into the Spider's cave, hoping to overcome the outlaws.

Too late the Mummy Man realizes that those whom he has protected are about to meet death in a terrific explosion. He rushes in to try to save them and snuff out the burning fuse, but he is too late, as they are pinned in the cave. A terrific explosion occurs.

Youngest Screen Flapper in "Short Skirts"

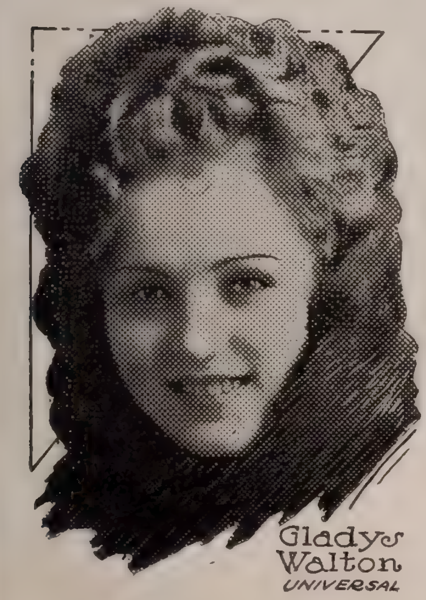
THE history of the screen does not reveal a more brilliant record of achievement by a star than is credited to Gladys Walton, the little Universal favorite who has just celebrated her eighteenth birthday and who, in the short space of a year, has introduced herself safely in the hearts of the theatre-goers of America.

Gladys Walton Scores Another Dramatic Success

A year ago the name of Gladys Walton was unknown to the great public, although Universal directors had their eyes on her for some months. After giving her several important parts to test their judgment they decided that Gladys was ripe for starring honors, and she was presented in "Pink Tights," the appealing story of the little circus girl. Her success was emphatic. Within a few weeks she was firmly established. Theatre patrons began calling for more of Gladys Walton, and exhibitors, in turn, called on Universal for more features starring this newly made star.

Since then the record of Gladys Walton shows one success after another. She was adorable as the little rich girl in "Risky Business" who shot craps with the boys and then risked her life to save her sister from dishonor; she was a revelation in the dual rôle in "Rich Girl, Poor Girl," in which she played two extremely opposite characters; as the little shop girl in "All Dolled Up," she was simply irresistible; in "Desperate Youth" she gave an artistic performance of a little mountain waif; in "The Man Tamer" she again appeared as a circus girl, thrilling not only by her great dramatic talent, but by her fearless work in a cageful of lions.



From all accounts, however, Miss Walton is said to have achieved her greatest success in her most recent feature, "Short Skirts," from the Saturday Evening Post story by Alice L. Tildesley.

Not the least interesting of this photoplay is the artistic prologue which precedes the main story on the screen.

"Short Skirts" is a picture with a message. It is not a story told for the sake of a moral nor does it drag in a lesson by its heels; but in asubtle way it points to the tendency of the modern feminine youngster to miss the joys of budding womanhood and to make the transition from childhood to maturity with a single bound. This, the story points, is due in a great measure to the examples set young girls by their elders and to the lack of restraint in the average American home. As the story is from the pen of Alice L. Tildesley, one of the most brilliant of women writers, and first appeared in "The Saturday Evening Post," there is every assurance that the subject is cleverly treated.

In order to get the audience in the proper frame of mind for the story, the producer has opened his picture with a prologue which shows the evolution of the modern "flapper" and the influence of the grandmothers on the girls of to-day. The various fashions are shown, beginning with the frocks worn in Colonial days down to the very latest Parisian decree. The various types of mothers are also shown, and in connection with this part of the prologue is reproduced an animated model of Whistler's masterpiece, "Mother." Florence Lee, a stately old lady and an actress of skill and charm, was selected by Director Harry B. Harris to pose as the figure of the famous painting, first shown in a frame, and then coming to life.

Almost every woman has experienced that period in her early life when she is anxious to put up her hair, lengthen her skirts and escape the odium of being called "little girl." Miss Walton is just such a girl in "Short Skirts," and her rebellion against the restraint of her widowed mother and her prospective step-father lead her a merry chase. After she has entangled her relatives and friends in a lively mess, stirred up quite a bit of scandal and almost lost her best friend the election to the mayoralty, she learns her lesson.

Synopsis of Story

BART CARSON drives the last nail into a wierd cabin which he has built with seven years' savings to house Lou, the belle of Rawlins, the only town in the desolate snow-blanketed wilderness in which he lives.

Enroute to Rawlins he stops at an isolated cabin where lives Mrs. Walker and her two kiddies. Bart tells her that he is on his way to Rawlins to marry the finest girl in the world.

Lou was a ravishingly beauty and her only weakness was that she loved a number of men. This Bart didn't know until he discovered a man in her room.

The mail train had been robbed and Lou tells Bart that Walker is her brother; that he robbed the train so that she could have some pretty clothes in which to be married.

Because he loves the woman, Bart assumes the guilt for the robbery and goes to prison, sentenced to sixteen years behind the grim walls of the penitentiary for a crime of which he was innocent. Then, one day, word comes to the prison through underground channels of the true relationship existing between the man and Lady Lou. He also learns that the man is the worthless husband who deserted Mrs. Walker and her children in the cabin at Pilot Butte.

Bart escapes from the prison in a packing case and goes to Lou.

In a spectacular flight he finds Walker and Lou on a train. The men fight and Walker plunges to his death over a trestle. Bart escapes and makes his way to the house where he last saw Mrs. Walker and the kiddies. It is Christmas Eve and Bart promises the little ones a wonderful present. He gets the little boy to snap the handcuffs on his wrists and when the sheriff comes, the child, thinking that it is all play, says: "I captured him and I claim the reward."

The sheriff tells Bart, whom he likes, that Lou has confessed that the robbery was a frame-up and it is plainly indicated that the judge, who was himself on the train, will juggle the case so that real justice will prevail.

REMARKABLE PRISON STORY THEME OF UNIVERSAL FILM

HARRY CAREY has his most dramatic and sympathetic rôle in "Desperate Trails," the Universal photodrama which is to be shown at the .... Theatre for the first time locally on ....

Courtney Ryley Cooper wrote the story for the Red Book Magazine where it was widely read and Jack Ford directed its production at Universal City and in Truckee, the picturesque snow-country of California.

The story deals with a man who goes to prison for another, finds that the girl he thinks he loves is unfaithful and returns to marry the widow of the man who caused his trouble.

Remarkable photography, the work of Harry Fowler, gives a thrilling dramatic wallop to the big emotional scenes where the star is seen staggering across the trackless white immensity of snow to escape from the man-hunters who pursue him as a train robber.

Irene Rich, beloved among playgoers for her natural grace and sincerity, appears as Carey's leading woman, while Barbara La Mar, the vivacious brunette beauty, plays the rôle of the unfaithful girl with dramatic power and daring.

Cleverly woven into the fabric of the story are two adorable kiddies, children of the woman the star eventually marries, who provide just the needed touch of pathos. The rôles are interpreted by little George Stone as "Danny Boy" and Helen Field as "Carrie."

HARRY CAREY WINS PRAISE IN NEW DRAMATIC ROLE

HARRY CAREY, supported by a splendid cast in one of his most appealing Universal photodramas, won new friends at the .... Theatre last night when "Desperate Trails," his most recent success, had its local premier before a capacity audience of Carey admirers.

The story deals with a cowpuncher who lopes into the town of Rawlins to claim Lady Lou, the belle of the camp. He believes that he loves her, yet it is difficult for him to tell Mrs. Walker, a sweet and womanly friend, of his impending marriage. It is particularly difficult when the Walker kiddies, two adorable little ones, hang on his knees and ask him if he doesn't wish that he was their dad. Walter Walker, father of the family, has deserted his little brood. He is in Rawlins and is believed to have robbed a train. Bart Carson, our hero, finds him in Lady Lou's room. The girl says that it is her brother. Carson takes the guilt of robbing the train and goes to prison to serve a sixteen-year term. Then, through the mysterious underground channels of prison gossip, he learns that Walker is living in Rawlins with Lady Lou, that he is her lover, not her brother. Escaping from prison he holds up an east-bound train and finds Walker and Lady Lou eloping. Then comes one of the most dramatic climaxes to a swift screen story ever filmed. In the end, quite to the liking of those who saw the performance last night, Walker is killed by accident and Bart Carson goes to the humble little cottage where he left the woman and the kiddies and infuses their hearts with happiness.

LAST SPECIAL ATTRACTION FILM FOR WESTERN STAR

A STORY as big and rugged as the great outdoors in which most of its scenes occur is "Desperate Trails," the vigorous western tale by Courtney Ryley Cooper which recently attracted so much attention in The Red Book Magazine and which has been adapted to the screen for the stellar use of Harry Carey ,the popular Universal star.

"Desperate Trails" is coming to the .... Theatre on ...., and in this photodrama Harry Carey will make his final appearance in the Universal program productions. His next appearance will be in a super-production ,although many of the reviewers have declared "Desperate Trails" to be in the latter class. It certainly should be, with Harry Carey in the most human role he has had in many months (with a story of rare appeal and an all-star cast to portray the supporting roles).

In his latest feature the human Carey appears as a big-hearted Westerner who loves the wife of a worthless outlaw, with a noble devotion. Unable to tell her of his love he tries to forget her by falling in love with a woman totally unlike her in every way. This girl not only betrays his love ,but sends him to prison when he tries to save the man she claims is her brother from the hands of justice.

HIRE RAILROAD TRAIN TO TAKE MOVIE SCENES

THERE is a romantic glamor about railroading that is effectively woven into the dramatic fabric of Harry Carey's current Universal attraction, "Desperate Trails," now showing to appreciative audiences at the .... Theatre.

The story, originally written for the Red Book Magazine, by Courtney Ryley Cooper and directed at Universal City by Jack Ford, is based upon a man who is sent to prison as a train robber. He accepts the sentence, although he is innocent, to save a man whom he believes to be the brother of the girl he loves. When he discovers that the man is her lover he escapes from prison, overhauls a limited train, boards it, goes lurching through the cars, finds the girl and the man and holds the passengers at bay while he metes out his own justice to the despoilers of his life.

The railroad scenes were filmed by Universal after extensive negotiations had been carried on for the leasing of a branch line and an entire train with its modern locomotive, from the Southern Pacific. The regular train crew, engineer, fireman, conductor, brakeman and flagman were engaged for the work and paid more than twice their usual salaries.

To assure realism the train was operated just as it is on its run. Upon its slowing down for a stop at a small station, the telegraph operator and station agent ran out into the storm with their lanterns to discover why he limited should stop there. Their natural amazement has been recorded by the camera.

Dramatic Story for Film Star's Special Attraction Picture

Harry Carey in "DESPERATE TRAILS" ITS A UNIVERSAL

AFTER a brilliant career on the dramatic stage, followed by a succession of triumphs on the screen, Harry Carey is now recognized as the foremost exponent of the Western photodrama. Universal, under whose banner he has starred for the past four years, owing to his tremendous popularity, decided to make him a Jewel star, which places him in the same category as the productions of Priscilla Dean, Erich von Stroheim, Tod Browning and the other super-attractions comprising the Universal special features.

For his final program attraction Harry Carey appears in "Desperate Trails," a story of such remarkable strength, such sheer dramatic force and so wonderfully acted by an all-star cast, that it will serve as an introduction to the Jewel features in which he is to be seen from now on.

Harry Carey came to the screen with a liberal education, a fine record as actor and playwright, and with a marvelous physique gained through years of hard work on a Montana ranch. He was born in New York, the son of a prominent judge, and until he was in his twenties had never ridden a horse except the saddle animals one sees in Central Park. Yet now he is recognized among the half-dozen most daring horsemen on the screen.

His early screen training was received with the old Biograph Company under the direction of David Griffith, being one of that group of players which included the Gish Sisters, Henry Walthall, Blanche Sweet and others who rose to stardom.

Two beautiful women, radically different in type but equally capable, support the Western star in his most recent Universal photodrama, "Desperate Trails."

Irene Rich, whose screen personality has endeared her to thousands, appears in the leading feminine role, while Barbara LaMar, the vivacious brunette, has a less heroic but nevertheless interesting characterization of an unfaithful girl.

"Desperate Trails" was written as an original story for the Red Book Magazine by Courtney Ryley Cooper and was widely read by lovers of Western action. Purchased by Universal it was given to Elliott J. Clawson for screen adaptation and filmed under the direction of Jack Ford.

With the amazing story of a man who goes to prison for another and then finds that he has been made the pawn of an unfaithful woman, as the basic theme, Harry Carey does his most appealing screen work in the heroic role of Bart Carson.

THE prison scenes in "Desperate Trails," the Western photodrama in which Harry Carey is winning such great success at the .... The escape is a counterpart of one which actually occurred in that prison a few months ago.

IT is doubtful if any photodrama of recent months has contained a scene as heart-tugging in its effects and as beautiful in its execution as the final sequence in "Desperate Trails," in which Harry Carey is making more friends than ever at the .... Theatre.

ON May 11th, 1921, the Universal-Jewel de Luxe, "FOOLISH WIVES," directed by Von Stroheim, topped a million dollars in cash cost of production. By the time this picture is released—probably in the early Fall—it will have been a year and a half in the making and will have cost very much more than a million dollars—how much more, Universal does not know at the present writing—and does not care—for the simple reason that "FOOLISH WIVES" will be the finest moving picture that anyone, anywhere, ever produced.

Indianapolis Theatre Exploits Dean Picture

INDIANAPOLIS was highly amused and interested in a series of teaser ads and exploitation stunts recently used in that city in connection with the showing of "Outside the Law" at the Isis Theatre. Supplemented by a liberal newspaper and poster campaign, the combined efforts resulted in filled houses during the run of the Priscilla Dean special.

Attention first was attracted by teaser ads in the "Star," "News," and "Times," reading on successive days, as follows:

"If You Roll African Marbles on Sunday or Any Other Day You Are OUTSIDE THE LAW.

Another was:

"If You Beat Your Wife, etc.," and, tying up with a local election — "If You Vote More Than Once in the Primaries," etc. There were six of these teaser ads in all.

The teasers were followed by a "clean-up your back yard" post-card campaign, signed "P. D.," and which went into every home in Indianapolis. This broadside was followed by a quarter page ad demanding "Who is 'P. D.'? followed by other ads announcing that "P. D." was the electrifying, etc., Priscilla Dean, and announcing the showing of "Outside the Law" at the Isis Theatre.

The campaign included several fruitful window display tie-ups. A personal letter of recommendation was obtained from Miss Dean for Jack Rohr, one of the city's leading haberdashers, which he pasted on his window, and backed up with six lobby display cards and a photograph of the star.

A fruitful tie-up was made with Leo Krauss, a prominent jeweler of Indianapolis, Ind. Kraus devoted one of his entire show windows to the display of "Outside the Law" lobby cards, pearl necklace around the neck. This tie-up followed the suggestion found in the picture, which features the quest of a valuable pearl necklace.

Krause also gave away a pearl necklace on the last night of the showing.

"Outside The Law" is certainly a money-getter. It proved itself to be one of the greatest box-office attractions that has ever played my theatre, and I have shown nearly all the big films of the last few years.

GREAT, would be the best word to describe the week's run "Outside The Law" had at the Princess. And this in spite of strong counter attractions and oppressive weather.

I am certainly well pleased with the success of the picture, and I also want to thank you for the splendid co-operation you gave us in exploitation.

Many thanks for sending me so fine a special. "Outside The Law" is the most exciting, the cleanest and best acted crook-melodrama that I have ever seen. It is intensely interesting, having two thrilling fights, the one in Chinatown being especially exciting. This play is of high order, never cheap, nor does it once insult one's intelligence.

Priscilla Dean and Lon Chaney did excellent work, and, in fact, all the characters played their roles intelligently and most satisfactorily.

The ladies seemed to enjoy this as well as the men, and my patrons did not hesitate to express their satisfaction.

This being such a rattling good play and being so easy to exploit, it should prove very popular in all large or small houses.

Combined Campaign Planned By Clemmer Theatre in Seattle

THE success of well-balanced exploitation and advertising campaigns is well exemplified by the recent drive given to "Reputation," Priscilla Dean's latest Universal-Jewel picture, by the Clemmer Theatre in Seattle, Wash.

The management of that theatre depended upon forceful and liberal advertising and a striking theatre front to attract crowds. They did. This was supplemented by a mailing list appeal and by wide-spread window display tie-ups, using a novel window card with no mention of the picture but bearing a photo of Miss Dean and a slogan boosting the reputation of the store, as follows:

REPUTATION
Our Success is Due to Our Reputation for Courtesy, Service, Honesty and Quality.

Several quotations on "reputation" by Miss Dean completed the card. The card was regarded so well by Universal's Exploitation Department it is being duplicated for general use wherever "Reputation" is shown.

The Clemmer Theatre manager also distributed 10,000 "scandal sheets," the miniature newspaper available for use in exploiting this picture. These were inserted in regular Seattle newspapers, and given away on the streets.

Teaser ads and posters were used all during the week preceding the showing and on the Sunday just before the opening a full-page ad in color was used, accompanied in the same paper by a full-page colored portrait of Miss Dean.

The lobby display was unique in color, being done in orange and black, in checkerboard design, supplemented by framed photos and cut-outs. Over the entrance of the theatre two twelve-foot circular frames were mounted, bearing large heads cut out from a twenty-four sheet poster. These were illuminated with individual spotlights, so arranged that only he circular pictures were lighted. This was unusually effective.

JEWEL FILM GIVEN HIGHEST RATING BY TRADE REVIEWER

"SCREEN OPINIONS," which is an independent reviewing service published in Chicago, Ill., has given "Reputation," the Universal-Jewel film starring Pricilla Dean, the highest rating of all the feature films reviewed in its issue of May 9th last.

Their system of criticism classifies pictures considered very good as A, and those thought by the reviewer to be excellent as A-c. As can be seen in their index reproduced here, the Universal film was the only picture to receive higher than A of those reviewed in hat issue of "Screen Opinions."

In its review the Western paper says:

"This is a production on which a great deal of time and thought has been spent, and one that is likely to be very popular. It's realism is of the extremely vivid type that carries the action into the realm of melodrama."

Set of Six Movie Cards To Be Used as a Novelty Exploitation Stunt for "Reputation."

"Make Your Own Movie Cards" Popular with Screen Patrons

THE extent to which novelties can be adapted to the exploitation of moving pictures is aptly demonstrated by a simple throwaway put out by Universal and used with great success by many exhibitors showing "Reputation," Pricilla Dean's new Universal-Jewel production.

Five poses of Miss Dean as "The London Flame," the striking character she portrays in "Reputation," were printed on a card, so chosen and so arranged that each successive one differed very slightly from the preceding one.

The card also bears instructions indicating that the pictures are to be cut out, clipped together in rotation, and ruffled, with the thumb and forefinger, like the old-fashioned prize-fight booklets.

The photo-bearing cards were made up so the exhibitor can put his theatre name and play date on each one.

"ROOSEVELT THEATRE opened Sunday, the fifth, with 'REPUTATION' to a big business and is holding up splendidly. PRISCILLA DEAN'S work in this production places her well up in the ranks of the greatest emotional actresses of the screen. Everybody impressed with the excellence of her work and satisfied patrons should do much in making a pronounced box-office success of 'REPUTATION,' even in an off season. We extend congratulations."

Says M. P. World:

"ALTHOUGH it is a broad statement it is made without reserve. 'SOCIETY DOGS' IS ONE OF THE FINEST COMEDIES OF THE YEAR. There is almost a laugh a foot and every inch of the comedy is clean. Any exhibitor showing this picture will be performing a service to his patrons."

Says Wid's:

"NEW stuff and a lot doing make this a fine comedy. GET THIS IF YOU WANT YOUR PEOPLE TO LAUGH. The dog is almost human and what is rarer than that, HE IS FUNNY. The dog may truly be called the Charlie Chaplin of the animal kingdom—Charlie won't mind when he sees him. You will want more pictures of this dog after you have seen this one."

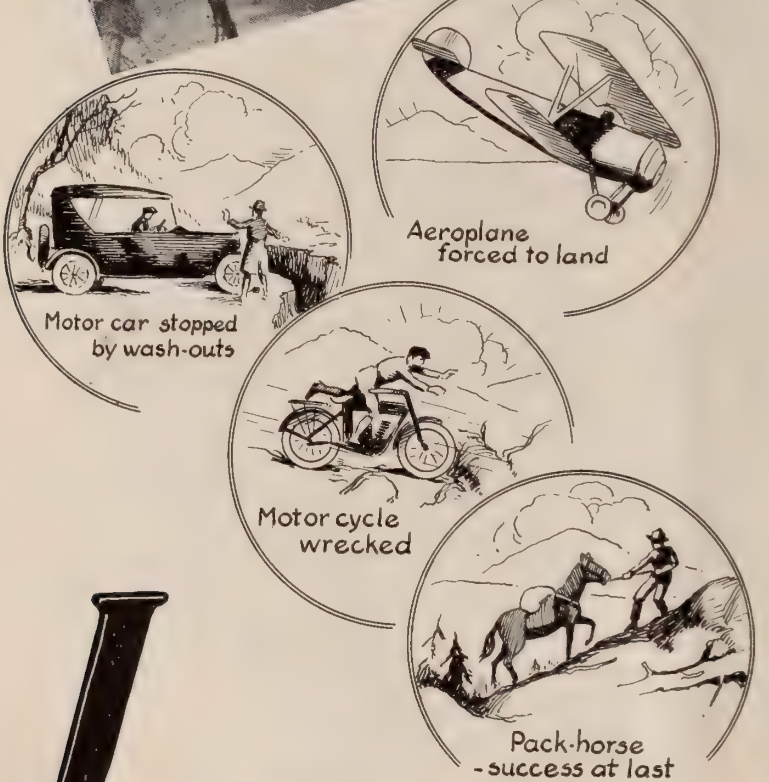
how we brought PUEBLO to your Screen



Aeroplane forced to land

Motor car stopped by wash-outs

Pack-horse - success at last

EXACTLY one week after the terrible disaster at Pueblo INTERNATIONAL flashed on the screens of the country pictures of this great catastrophe for your patrons to gape at.

How did we do it? Because, as always, we had a man on the job—and because, as always, the man made good. Taking the pictures was easy—getting them to the laboratory was the hard job.

They started east first by aeroplane —but the aeroplane was forced down. Nothing daunted, INTERNATIONAL'S man jumped into a motor-car—only to be stopped by washouts. Stumped for a moment, he commandeered a motor-cycle and then struck a real stump, and—wrecked the machine.... What then? A packhorse—and success at last.

We don't say that this is a world's record in showing pictures of a great catastrophe. We simply give you the story to show you the lengths to which INTERNATIONAL goes in putting its news on your screen. We think that you'll agree with us that a NEWS SERVICE that regularly triumphs over every difficulty and turns up smiling at the end is the best one to serve you and your expectant patrons.

Sign that INTERNATIONAL contract today.

Eastern Society Changes Cowgirl Into City Flapper

CAST

Laura Hilton	Eileen Sedgwick
Judge Hilton	George Williams
Buck Gray	Percy Pembroke
Slim Hutton	Stanley Fitz

THE cowboys on Judge Hilton's ranch are slicking up for the homecoming of Laura ,the daughter of the family, who has been away at a finishing school in the East. Among the most enthusiastic men among those who are preparing to greet the girl upon her arrival is Buck Gray, foreman of the ranch, and a favorite of Laura's before she got ideas of education.

It is a changed Laura that arrives in the little western town. Instead of her old straight-forward glance she lifts a drooping eyelid and peers through a lorgnette. Instead of the genuine and sincere handshake of the old days she extends her finger-tips to her friends, aping the absurd society affectations that she had learned in the city.

Party For Laura's Return

The beautiful girl's changed attitude wounds her old friends, but they resume their individual and collective siege for her favor and stage a dance in her honor.

In a mail-order suit Buck is the Beau Brummell of the party until he awkwardly steps on Laura's dress, tearing it. This is gratifying to Slim, one of the cowboys and his pal, who hate the young foreman. When Laura goes upstairs to change her dress they rob the safe in the ranch office, binding and gagging the girl. Buck releases her and stages a daring capture of the desperate men. She falls back into her own natural way of speech and tells Buck that she wants to be the same pal to him that she was before she went to school.

"NEVER AGAIN FOR ME!"

"Foolishly I booked too many pictures last Fall. For this reason I was not able to take advantage of a lot of pictures that were offered to me, though I was satisfied that they were better than the ones I had booked."

JACK misses the rocks below but is knocked unconscious as he lands upon a long,sliding slope that serves to break his fall. Satan sends a man down to get him and he is brought back and imprisoned in a cell in the lowest tier in the castle. Meanwhile, Dolores has taken advantage of the excitement caused by the fight with Jack to secure the keys from the guard on duty outside her cell—and when Jack is locked up her absence is discovered. Satan's men start out in search for her. The Mystery Woman now appears on top of the castle and with the aid of a small negro boy secured a rope. She lowers the boy down to the outside window of Jack's cell and he climbs back up the rope, but is seen by Satan's men as he crosses the moat hand-over-hand upon a small pipe line. As he arrives on the other side, and Satan's men are circling the moat to reach him, he looks down and sees Dolores below him just as Satan and one of his men capture her. At the same time the main force of bandits reach him. Another fight follows, Jack breaks loose, tears off the end of a strand of wire running over another part of the moat and swings down to the runway below —where Satan and his men have Dolores.

Mail Order Detective Helps Crook to Escape

"AN AWFUL BULL"

Featuring BILLY FLETCHER

WHILE sitting in the park one day Billy picks up a newspaper and reads that the police are trying to solve a large jewel robbery. He polishes up his detective badge which he had received that morning from a correspondence school and enters the largest hotel in town because his course instructed him that the proper place to look for big jewel robbers was in big hotels.

He chases the house detective around and also several of the guests who he regards as suspicious characters. Finally the cop throws Billy out of a window and he lands on top of a young fellow who is just leaving the hotel with a suitcase. Billy helps him pick up the jewelry and silverware contained in the bag and watches him get into a taxi as the real detective comes up and accuses him of aiding the crook to escape after robbing the hotel.

Two Rabbit Hunters Bring Home Live Lion

Featuring

THE CENTURY LIONS

CHARLEY and his partner accompanied by their valets start out with their shotguns to bring in a few rabbits for dinner. They see several rabbits but can never get near enough to the enemy to place a shot.

Charley tracks a rabbit to a hole which proves to be the rear entrance to a lion's den and Charlie drives out the cubs followed by the business looking members of the lion family. It promises to be an interesting party when the hunters take flight in their Ford car with the lions in pursuit.

At the house the lions follow the hunters from one room to another. One of the valets, thinking that the lions have left, starts to take a bath. A large lion enters the room and starts to lick the lather off the coon's head. When the valet discovers his danger his arms work like piston rods and he works up a mountain of lather and sinks down in the tub to escape his lion guest.

Episode No. 15

"A Conquest of Courage"

THE trap set for the White Spider and his gang by the Mummy Man failed its purpose as the outlaw band left their den for the treasure caves before the explosion of the dynamite. Wayne Allen, Jean and the Indians arrive at the Spider's den and are caught in the terrific explosion and buried beneath an avalanche of rocks and dirt.

Wayne Allen comes to first, and, after reviving Jean they notice the bracelet in the hand of one of the outlaws who was also caught in the explosion. Wayne takes the bracelet and together they ride away.

ART ACORD
UNIVERSAL

The next day Allen receives a letter from a San Francisco attorney saying that the loan on the ranch would have to be arranged through a local concern. At the local bank he is refused a loan and returns to the hotel where he meets Jean and tells her of his plight.

The hotel clerk acting on previous instructions from Ramsey tells Allen that he will let him have $1,000 for the bracelet on the condition that the money is returned in three days. Wayne refuses and says that it would be the same as selling the bracelet to part with it on those conditions. However, upon the tearful pleading of Jean he turns over the bracelet and she receives the money.

On the morning of the third day things look very black for Wayne and Jean until they see a poster announcing that $5,000 in prizes will be awarded for the champion all round cowboy at the annual rodeo that afternoon.

Wayne captures the bucking broncho contest, trick riding and standing roman races. In order to stop Wayne from winning the prize Ramsey sends two of his men to cut the saddle girth on Allen's mount just before he rides out on the field for the steer-roping contest. Allen is chasing one of the steers when he falls from his horse in front of the enraged animal.

1—Carmel Myers's extraordinary popularity.

2—The fact that the story is filmed from Johnston McCully's widely-read novel, "Little Erolinda."

3—The actual locale of the story used as a background for the production.

5—Miss Myers' admirable supporting cast including William E. Lawrence, Jean Acker, P. J. Lockney, J. J. Lanoe, Harvey Clarke and Ed. Brady.

6—The interesting fact that the story was directed by Jack Conway, well-known as both a leading man and a director.

8—Beautiful moonlight scenes artistically photographed.

9—The romance and glamor of the most picturesque period in the history of California.

The Story

LUIS BALDARAMA, owner of a great rancho in the days of the California padres, has planned that his son should marry Isabella Chavez, daughter of Miguel Chavez. When Big Audre is told of his father's wish he objects and says that he is in love with Erolinda, the daughter of Selistino Vargas, the superintendent of the rancho. Miguel Chavez and his daughter arrive for a visit.

At the feast Audre tells Isabella that he loves another and she in turn confesses that she is in love with the commandant of the fort. Leaving Isabella with the other guests, Audre goes to Erolinda's home and persuades her to elope with him. They plan to meet at an isolated cabin and when the feast is at its height to slip away to a friendly padre and be married.

Later Vargas, who has been told by a servant that his daughter met Audre at the hut, bursts into the cabin armed with a pistol. Before Audre can explain why they are there, Vargas shoots him. The cabaleros rush to Audre's house, find him apparently dead and then surge back to the ranch house, demanding Vargas.

At the ranch house, Luis and Miguel attempt to hold back the mob, but the men are determined to get Vargas.

Erolinda knows that she cannot call Audre back to life but she can at least clear his name and perhaps save her father. She dashes to the ranch house and interjects herself on the stairs between Luis, Miguel and the mob. But to no avail.

The mob dashes past her into the room. They see Vargas leaping upon a horse and fleeing toward the highway. As the mob gives chase, all stop in their tracks. There, tottering on the arm of the doctor, is Audre. The bullet fired by Vargas had only cut a deep, grooving gash in his temple.

With a tragic cry of joy, Erolinda darts down the stairs and flies into the arms of Audre, Luis and Miguel and Isabella following. Audre explains. As the leader they love and would die for, he asks them to forgive Vargas. Luis gives Erolinda and Audre his blessing.

STORY OF DAYS OF THE DONS SHOWN AT A LOCAL THEATRE

CARMEL MYERS has a thrill for every temperament at the .... Theatre where she began her local engagement last night in "The Kiss," her most recent Universal photodrama from the fascinating romance of old California, by Johnston McCully.

The story was originally printed in novel form as "Little Erolinda." Credit for the screen version is given to George Pyper and the scenario was given into the hands of Jack Conway to direct.

The director has taken pains to establish the romantic atmosphere of old California and the first few sequences are devoted to that end. One sees the langorous hacienda where dwells the daughter of the administrator of the rancho; then a brillian fiesta to celebrate the return of the old don's son from his conquest afield and then the thrilling drama which develops when the gallant young caballero falls to love below his station and the girl leaps to meet it—above hers.

For those who love beautiful women, they are to be seen in "The Kiss" in profusion; but none of them is quite as bewitchingly lovely as Miss Myers, although Jean Acker, playing the second feminine lead, comes perilously near.

For those who like to see a dashing big caballero in action there is William E. Lawrence in the principal masculine rôle, and he is in fast and furious encounter from the instant of his appearance on the screen.

DRAMATIC SCENES OF EARLY HISTORY OF CALIFORNIA

PLAYGOERS who like Carmel Myers in unusual rôles will be particularly enchanted with the star as she appears in "The Kiss," her latest Universal photodrama which is to be shown at the .... Theatre on ....

The story presents her as Little Erolinda, the characterization made famous by Johnson McCully in his widely read story of that name, and its theme is based upon the heroic exploits of the early Californians who fought as gallantly as they loved.

Jack Conway, selected by Universal to direct the production, was careful to stage the picture on the actual locale of the original story and for that purpose used many of the old haciendas which preserve to modern California, the romantic traditions of the past.

Carmel Myers Now Starring In "The Kiss"

Particularly interesting to those who have followed the early history of California will be the intensely dramatic scenes where the young girl participates in battles for the territorial aggrandizement of her feudal lord, and through the smoke emerges to a wondrous love-haven with the man she worshipped from afar because of his more exalted caste.

FAMOUS WESTERN NOVEL MADE INTO PHOTOPLAY

THE romance of old California, its loves and battles, is smashingly depicted as the background for Carmel Myers' artistry in "The Kiss," the star's latest Universal photodrama, which is to begin its local engagement at the .... Theatre on ....

Johnston McCully wrote the story which originally appeared in book form as "Little Erolinda." It was purchased by Universal from among hundreds of stories submitted for Miss Myers at the time and produced under the direction of Jack Conway.

ROMANCE OF THE OLD WORLD PRESENTED BY UNIVERSAL

THE romance of the old world, the struggle and strife of the new world mingled with an atmosphere that is like no other in any part of the world, are to be found in the latest Universal feature, "The Kiss," starring Carmel Myers, coming to the .... Theatre next ....

There are men and women alive today who recall the California days under Spanish rule; the stately old missions still attract thousands of tourists to the Southland each year; the padres still count their beads and give their blessings; and yet the California of the Dons is as Europe under Napoleon or Rome under the Caesars.

Comparatively few dramatists and novelists have touched upon this, probably the most picturesque period in the development of this country, and yet every novel and every play of early California has met with instant success. Some years ago David Belasco, himself a Californian, staged a play in New York called "The Rose of the Rancho." Its scenes were laid in Southern California under the old regime, and it scored one of the biggest theatrical successes in years.

Recently Johnston McCully has come to the front as a dramatic writer of that picturesque period before California became a part of the United States. His novel, "The Curse of Capistrano" was recently produced by Douglas Fairbanks under the title of "The Mark of Zorro," and his most popular read story, "Little Erolinda," furnishes the basis for Carmel Myers' latest successful screen adaptation "The Kiss."

The story concerns a young girl, the daughter of a ranch foreman, who loves the son of the owner of a vast California estate. The difference in caste restrains them until an amazing sequence of thrilling adventure levels the artificial barrier of birth and brings them together for a breathcatching climax.

Miss Myers is amazingly pretty as Erolinda, the heroine, while William E. Lawrence has exceeded his previous screen successes in the leading masculine rôle of Andre Baldarama. P. J. Lockney, J. J. Lance, Harvey Clarke, Jean Acker and Ed. Brady play the remaining rôles with a vigor which greatly enhances the dramatic appeal of the production as a whole.

Smashing Paper

"THUNDER ISLAND"

"WHY is it that Universal always puts out the best paper in the moving picture industry?" is a question that has often been asked. In a nutshell here are the reasons:

THE outstanding, generally admitted fact is that Universal understands better than any other organization in the business just what the exhibitor needs to pull folks in with; and it always gives you these elements on its posters.

BUT a peep behind the curtain may serve to give you a better idea of the extreme care and hard work put in on every sheet of paper before it is offered to exhibitors.

EVERY picture is viewed by real showmen in company with the artists. The best and biggest punch scenes—the most powerful moments of the picture and those best calculated to attract attention and draw crowds, are then selected.

ONE of the best and finest equipped art staffs maintained by any organization anywhere is employed in drawing the posters.

NOT bizarre or fantastic effects that take the mind off the human drama, but striking, colorful, smashing scenes devised by the best advertising brains with the purpose of driving home the big central idea.

How Old is Earle? Ask Film Patrons

EARLE COBLE is manager of the Lyric Theatre in Redkey, Indiana, and is alive to the possibilities of clever exploitation for his pictures. A short time ago he booked the Universal serial, "The Diamond Queen," starring Eileen Sedgwick, and for the first performance decided upon an interesting experiment. He arranged for a birthday party, and the way his fellow townspeople took up the suggestion is explained in the following letter:

THE GREATEST PHOTOPLAY SERIAL YET PRODUCED

Indianapolis.

Gentlemen:

On next Wednesday, May 11, we start your serial, "The Diamond Queen," and we thought perhaps you might be interested in a little exploitation scheme we are attempting. The enclosed invitation is self-explanatory in a measure. I am going to throw open my doors and give a free show, and if the serial is strong enough, I believe it will be a good advertising stunt.

What do you think of the scheme?

I did not mail these invitations promiscuously, but "let the word" get out that May 11 was my birthday, and I was going to "throw a party" to all my friends.

And the joke of it is, a number have called at the office and inquired of my secretary if they "should bring presents." One good old lady stopped me last night and thanked me for remembering her, wanted to know how old I would be, and insisted that she bring me a present. Pretty good, eh?

All indications are that I will have a big crowd, and if the serial appeals, it may prove a winner. Will let you know, if you wish.

EARLE COBLE.

I never saw on any pictures such attractive paper. Universal is making wonderful strides in this direction. The slides you furnished with these pictures are easily worth twice as much to an exhibitor as those ordinarily furnished, as they will undoubtedly get considerable business for him.

Universal ought to teach other concerns how to prepare their advertising paper and slides.

Conduct House to House Canvas for "Reputation"

ONE of the most successful engagements ever given a photoplay was enjoyed by "Reputation," when the Universal-Jewel feature starring Priscilla Dean opened at the Laughlin theatre at Long Beach, California, as the direct result of the strong exploitation campaign conducted before the opening date. In commenting upon his plans for putting over this picture Frank R. Powell, manager of the Laughlin, wrote to the Universal home office as follows:

"I will outline for you the ideas I am using here in Long Beach on this feature and believe it should show some result.

"I am putting out 3,000 scandal sheets, house-to-house, and seeing to it personally that they get in. Thursday I follow up house-to-house with the 3,000 heralds, and on Saturday before the opening I follow up the house-to-house with 3,000 of my house programs with the program of the show."

"Reputation," according to our patrons and our own opinion, is one of the best dramatic productions we have played this season.

Miss Dean's acting is exceptional, in fact so good that at times you forget that she is playing a dual role.

Announce Universal Plans for Next Year

Schedule For Production of Jewel Features, Special Attractions and Short Reel Subjects Decided at Recent Conference

AFTER several conferences with his executives, President Carl Laemmle, of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company announced the complete fall program of the company before he sailed on his European tour. The program, effective on September 5th, undoubtedly is the most ambitious ever scheduled for any one year by Universal and will include the following productions.

The big Jewel picture for the year will of course be "Foolish Wives," which has just been finished at Universal City. This photodrama de luxe which has been more than a year in the making will still require an additional month for cutting and titling. It probably will be released early in the Fall. Definite plans for this offering to exhibitors will be announced later.

Although the huge investment of a million dollars has been put into the picture, Universal officials expect the picture to be the greatest success of the motion picture industry and to make a large fortune.

Other Jewels Nearing Completion

Two other Jewels which are nearing completion are Edna Ferber's story "Fanny Herself," and Clarence Buddington Kelland's Red Book serial novel "Conflict."

"Conflict" is being directed by Stuart Paton, who directed "Reputation," with Priscilla Dean in the starring role.

Another Jewel release will be Lucien Hubbard's original story, "Partners," written especially for Harry Carey's debut as a Jewel star.

The fifth Jewel to be released in the Fall is scheduled to be "Human Hearts," the late Hal Reid's famous melodrama.

In addition to the Jewel photoplays which are under production Priscilla Dean will appear in three more Jewels during the year and Harry Carey will also be starred in three more. The twelfth Jewel will be a big production made by one of the most popular stars in pictures.

There will be fifty-two Special Attraction pictures made during the year with one being released each week. Eight pictures will be made with each of the following players; Frank Mayo, Gladys Walton, Hoot Gibson, Marie Prevost, Miss du Pont and Herbert Rawlinson. In addition there will be four Special Attraction photoplays with all star casts.

The first Frank Mayo picture on the new schedule will be, "The Shark Master," written and directed by Fred LeRoy Granville.

Gladys Walton's first picture will be "Christine of the Young Heart." It is directed by Lee Kohlmar.

The first Hoot Gibson picture will be "The Mascotte of the Three Stars," by J. Allen Dunn and directed by Jack Ford.

Marie Prevost's first picture will be "The Butterfly," written by Percival Wilde and directed by King Baggot.

Miss du Pont was made a Special Attraction star because of her excellent acting in "Foolish Wives." A society drama to be decided later will be her first picture.

Herbert Rawlinson will start work on his Special Attraction contract after the completion of "Conflict," in which he is supporting Priscilla Dean.

Short Reel Subjects Coming

Eddie Polo will be starred in one of the series of the fifty-two two-reel westerns to be released during the year. These are being directed by Jay Marchant. Another series will be eight pictures by George Larkin and Josephine Hill. Eileen Sedgwick and Art Acord will each be starred in a western series.

In the comedy division Universal will release twenty two-reel Jewel comedies. Of these Lee Moran will contribute twelve and Joe Martin, four or eight.

Three stars will be featured in the Century comedies: Brownie, the Century Wonder Dog, Harry Sweet and Charles Dorety. They will each make eighteen pictures.

Author of Mission Play Coaches Star In Romantic Story

BEING one of the foremost stars of the movies doesn't entirely consist of looking beautiful and dashing around in one's cerise limousine. It means hard study, grueling work and long hours.

To prepare for "The Kiss," the photodrama in which Carmel Myers, the Universal star, is now appearing at the .... Theatre, she sacrificed a much needed vacation and studied hard for two weeks to gain a research expert's knowledge of old California customs and costumes.

The story of "The Kiss" was written by Johnston McCully, and concerns California in the days of the Dons. It was originally written as "Little Erolinda" and published in novel form. Universal purchased it as being particularly suited to Miss Myers and gave it to Jack Conway to direct.

It was not an ordinary photodrama, and extensive research was required before Miss Myers felt herself fitted to interpret the spectacular starring rôle.

Being a wise young lady, she went to headquarters for her information. She called upon John Steven McGroarty for her information. Mr. McGroarty is probably the world's foremost authority on old California and is the author of the California Mission play, conducts a page in the Los Angeles Times and is internationally known as a philosopher and historian.

WHAT'S AT THE PLAYHOUSE TONIGHT?

"ORDER another ten casks of wine for the feast to-night." That is what the old California Don says in "The Kiss," now playing at the .... Theatre, and it brings back faint memories to playgoers who regret the Volstead act. The wine is used at one of the most pretentious feasts ever filmed, the betrothal feast of the son of the rancho to Carmel Myers, which follows a series of romantic adventures in her latest Universal photodrama.

JOHNSTON McCULLY, author of many successful stories and plays, considers that "The Kiss," now playing at the .... Theatre is his most romantic creation. It was originally written as "Little Erolinda," published in novel form and later purchased by Universal for Carmel Myers. Jack Conway directed it and succeeded in transferring to the screen all the warmth and color of California in the days of the padres.

HUNDREDS of local people who have visited Southern California will recall a visit to San Juan Capistrano, the historical shrine half way between Los Angeles and San Diego. "'REPUTATION' at the Roosevelt is scoring a decided hit with Chicago movie-goers—'Reputation' or Priscilla Dean. It may be the combination rather than a single element, for Miss Dean is singularly well-fitted for the dual role in which she is cast. The star's make-up is remarkable, while her command of the emotions borders on genius. It must be conceded that Miss Dean is a wonderfully clever actress."

"THIS highly-colored melodrama gives Priscilla Dean a chance to tear a passion to tatters—also to reveal her skill in the art of make-up. The play moves along rapidly, but arrives at its big climax with plenty of force, which proceeds to explode in dramatic fireworks. Priscilla Dean is usually to be found in pictures which have plenty of action. As the elder actress, Miss Dean has a chance to be the "wild-cat" again. It is the sort of production which always seems to entertain the general public."

"IN 'REPUTATION,' to my way of thinking, Priscilla Dean makes her debut as a great emotional actress. She shows flashes of genius as a brilliant mother gone to the dogs, and as that mother's clean, clever and beautiful daughter. Celebrate With Universal Universal Asks Exhibitors Everywhere To Assist Them To Celebrate the Fifteenth Anniversary of Carl Laemmle's Connection With Universal and the Ninth Year of the Universal's Success.

Carl Laemmle

UNIVERSAL officials, after carefully studying the business of sales throughout the country, have come to the conclusion that the only thing that is required to make this a normal year in every way is a little jazzing up of the atmosphere surrounding the appeal which exhibitors have to make to their summer audiences. For that reason, H. M. Berman, general manager of the Universal Film exchanges, has designated the period from July 4th to September 5th, to be set apart and known as the "Laemmle-Universal Anniversary."

The idea back of it all is two-fold. In the first place, it just happens that the Universal Film Manufacturing Company will celebrate its ninth year of successful growth during this time, and that Mr. Laemmle will celebrate his fifteenth year in the moving picture business during this time. The officials felt that both of these events are deserving of more than passing notice and that they are of sufficient interest to exhibitors throughout the country to warrant bringing it to their attention. In the second place, they felt that if exhibitors are given something entirely out of the ordinary with which to appeal to their public, the effort will result in a very material increase in the box-office reports for any given week when this interest is aroused.

How It Works Out.

The plan which is being suggested to exhibitors is as follows:—To the exhibitor who desires to make use of the material with which Universal will provide him to celebrate the Laemmle-Universal Anniversary, and who for one solid week will run a 100 per cent Universal feature service, the exchange will supply free a big banner in full colors, reading:

"Gala Week, Laemmle-Universal Anniversary. An extraordinary showing of specially selected Universal pictures." This alone should serve to attract a great deal of interest on the part of those who pass the theatre. In addition to that, Universal has designed two posters, one a three-sheet and the other a one-sheet, in full color, for use of exhibitors both in the lobby and at any other advantageous place. These posters utilize two birthday cakes, as the most fitting symbol of this double anniversary. There is also a special line of advertisements, mats of which will be sent free. The publicity mats and stories will also be incorporated in an attractive press book which will be distributed by the exchanges, telling exactly how this anniversary can be utilized to the benefit of any theatres which desire an unusual occasion for a week during the summer time.

UNIVERSAL'S plan to celebrate the fifteenth year of Carl Laemmle's advent in the motion picture business, and the ninth year of its own existence as a company, brings to you the opportunity of a lifetime to make some real money for yourself, and give the patrons of your theatre a week of the finest kind of motion picture entertainment.

You are doubtless already familiar with the plan, but, nevertheless, here it is in brief:

CARL LAEMMLE
Publicity Cut No. 1

YOU can choose any week you like between July 4th and September 4th as your Gala Week, during which you are to show nothing but Universal features. You will be given the rock-bottom prices on these features, to begin with, and to guarantee you a fat profit, and as a part of its general plan of celebration, Universal will furnish you during that week—ABSOLUTELY FREE—all advertising and accessories for each and every picture you book.

Now—

On top of that proposition, you will also be furnished free of charge the advertising accessories shown in this folder by which you can exploit your week as GALA WEEK, and as a special treat for your patrons.

A RARE OPPORTUNITY

As we have said, this is a rare opportunity—you can make it as big a money-maker as you like. Use every one of the accessories listed here, and play up the features you book with all the accessories that come with each of them separately.

Study the Press Sheets of each picture booked. Pick out the best and most practical ideas, and EXPLOIT THEM FOR WHAT THEY ARE WORTH! We have based this entire campaign upon principles which will allow you to advertise attractively, and in such a manner that your patrons will be drawn because of the entertainment you can give them.

If you are still in the dark concerning the details of the plan or if there are questions which are unanswered in this folder, call on the nearest Universal Exchange, where further information may be had.

MAKE NEWSPAPERS HELP PUT IT OVER!

AS one of the preliminary steps in your exploitation campaign, have a heart-to-heart talk with the city editors of your newspapers. City editors all over the country have been clamoring for real news of picture producers, rather than the ordinary type of "publicity" material which is usually furnished.

Show them that this event is actually a milestone in the film industry—that it is a matter in which the average movie fan will be more than interested. Point out to them that Universal is the oldest distributing corporation in the business, and that the week in your theatre is a part of the celebration of its ninth birthday. The stories in this folder have been carefully prepared, and each of them contains facts and information of interest to movie fans everywhere.

Make your city editors promise to help you—and your battle is half won.

FOR YOUR POSTERS

AN attractive sticker, a miniature replica of the GALA WEEK three-sheet, has been provided. It is about 5 x 13 inches in size, printed in the colors of the original. HUMBLE BEGINNING MAKES FILM MAN'S SUCCESS UNUSUAL

SOMETHING over 15 years ago a man came down to Chicago from Oshkosh, Wis., with $4,000 saved after a career—up to that point—devoted to the clothing business. With this meager capital, but with indomitable courage, this man started a moving picture theatre in the Windy City.

From such an obscure beginning has grown what is now the largest film-producing and distributing organization in the world—the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, and its fairyland home, Universal City, California.

The man is Carl Laemmle, to-day president of the Universal company and undisputed leader in the business of providing independent motion picture entertainment for the American public. That humble Chicago "Nickleodeon" soon grew into a small chain of theatres, and from that into a series of exchanges, and expanding still further into a producing unit with headquarters in New York and studios in New Jersey.

With the development and steady growth in popularity of motion pictures the company thrived and flourished. Within the space of a year it was seen that quarters in the East were cramped, and Carl Laemmle conceived the idea of utilizing the pure sunshine of Southern California for the filming of motion pictures. Thus was started what is now Universay City—thousands upon thousands of acres basking under glorious California sunshine. A visitor to Universal City can be taken around the globe in a single day. He will be escorted through quaint Chinese streets, over snow-capped mountains, through gorgeous canyons, and to Haiti, Ceylon, India, into the swamplands of Florida, or the rocky steppes of Siberia.

All this is due to the energy and foresightedness of one man—Carl Laemmle. And at the .... Theatre during the week of ...., the fifteenth year o fthis man's advent into the motion picture industry is to be observed with a big Gala Week of motion pictures produced in Universal City. The same week will serve also to observe the ninth year of Universal's existence as a company.

UNIVERSAL GIVES NOTED STARS EARLY TRAINING IN FILMS

FEW who follow the fortunes of the leading actors and actresses of the screen to-day know that an amazingly large number of them received their early training with the Universal Film Manufacturing Company. Figures announced this week by that company reveal the astonishing information that 630 of the most successful players and directors are either now employed by this company, or have been at some time in the past.

This latter list includes Mary Pickford, queen of all the stars; Thomas H. Ince, one of the most famous producers in the industry, who played heroic rôles with the old Imp company, which was the forerunner of the present Universal organization; the Moore brothers—Tom, Matt and Owen; Jack Pickford, Louise Glaum, Mae Murray, Dorothy Phillips, Jane and Eva Novak, Priscilla Dean. Edith Roberts, Glady Walton, Thomas A. Wise, Ben Wilson, Pearl White, Winifred Westover, Niles Welch, Lois Weber, Helen Ware, Marie Walcamp, Wallace Reid, Marie Prevost, Mabel Taliaferro, Olive and Alma Tell, Wyndham Standing, Pauline Starke, Rosemary Theby, Eric Von Stroheim, George Loane Tucker, Lillian Lorraine, Montagu Love, Rhea Mitchell, Seena Owen, Thurston Hall, Mildred Harris, Violet Heming, Louise Huff, J. Warren Kerrigan, Alice Lake, Frank Keenan, and too many others to enumerate in the space.

Carl Laemmle, the man who built Universal City, is responsible for the present success of many of those players mentioned here. It was he who encouraged them in the early days of the industry, and who gave them the opportunities which brought them fame and success.

The Universal organization is this week observing its ninth year of existence as an organization, and the fifteenth year of Carl Laemmle's advent into the motion picture industry. By means of a special Gala Week, the .... Theatre of this city is aiding in this observance. During this special week only the best and most entertaining of recent Universal releases will be shown. The week of .... has been set aside by the .... for this purpose.

the older exhibitors in the moving picture business know it already, but there are so many men who do not go back for anything like fifteen years, that a short sketch of Mr. Laemmle's moving picture career and the manner in which he came into the picture business may be of interest in connection with this celebration.

It was on January 1st, 1906, that Mr. Laemmle decided that the time had arrived for him to go into business for himself. He was at that time manager of a clothing store in Oshkosh, Wisconsin, and he had saved up a little over $4,000. After several trips to Chicago, he had almost decided that the most money could be made on a small capital such as he had by investing in a chain of ten-cent stores. The small price and the rapid turn-over were the things which most appealed to him. But while he was looking around Chicago for desirable locations with Maurice Fleckles and R. H. Cochrane, who had written Laemmle's advertisements when he was in the store at Oshkosh, they chanced upon one of the very few moving picture houses then in existence in the Windy City. They stood on the opposite corner and watched with growing interest the long queues of people waiting outside of the theatre, going in one door and coming out of the other, each one of them paying ten cents and getting twenty minutes' entertainment.

"There's a game that beats our ten-cent stores all hollow! How can we get into it?"

Mr. Fleckles was resourceful, and energetic, and in a very short time Mr. Laemmle had a lease on the premises known as 909 Milwaukee Avenue, Chicago, the leading business street in what is known as the West Side section, and had Cochrane interested in the business with him.

In a day's time Mr. Laemmle had the building remodeled. He put in a metal front and painted it white, and from that circumstance it was known throughout the neighborhood as the "White Front" Theatre. It was a few doors away from a large department store. It was opened on the twenty-fourth day of February, 1906, and although its seating capacity was only 180 it was a success from the moment he opened it. It later was increased to 214. The first picture that Mr. Laemmle showed was entitled "From Newsboy to Judge," and it was a 600-foot thriller with a comic on the end. It ran from ten in the morning until eleven at night. On April 1st Mr. Laemmle opened another theatre on Halsey Street, south of Twelfth. It was called The Family Theatre. The house was about the same style and size as the White Front and was equally successful. But it was very hard to get the proper films.

On October 1st of the same year Mr. Laemmle found it necessary to open an exchange on his own account, which he did in the Criller Building, Chicago, in a little room 15 x 30 feet. The next year in June Mr. Laemmle went to Europe, and on the same day that he sailed from New York the exchange was moved to larger quarters on Lake and Fifth Avenue, on the ground floor. It was then employing forty-five people. He had also a chain of exchanges covering the Middle West.

In the Producing End

About the same time Mr. Laemmle and his associates started the Imp producing company on Fifty-sixth Street in New York City. Still in guest of the proper pictures for his houses and exchanges. Before he had returned in October the first picture of the Imps, entitled "Hiawatha," was released. Its success was the signal for Mr. Laemmle to move his business to New York, where the embryonic film industry was destined from then on to centered. The Patents Company was formed in 1909 and in order to protect themselves, Mr. Laemmle and a number of other independents organized what was known as the Sales Company. The stirring times from 1909 to 1912 are still fresh in the minds of many in the business, and the part played by Mr. Laemmle and the Imp Company are matters upon which the president of the Universal looks back with a great deal of pride.

Out of this old Sales Company grew the Universal, which was incorporated on June 10th, 1912. Its first president was Charles Baumann, and its office was established in Baumann's office, No. 1 Union Square. Through an internal dissension and the refusal of the Baumann

Carl Laemmle's Parting Message

To the Employees of the Universal Film Mfg. Co.

JUST before sailing for Europe, I want to say a few things which I hope you will study over and over again.

FIRST—I have unbounded confidence in your ability to keep the Universal forging ahead even faster than it has during the past year, or I never would go away and leave you to your own resources as an organization at this particular time when all the fear-stricken people in the world are shaking their heads about the business outlook.

SECOND—The company's plans for the coming season, now completely mapped out, call for the greatest and most ambitious effort of our career. If every big company in the United States would act accordingly and immediately, this so-called depression would melt away as if by magic.

THIRD—If you find yourself harboring gloomy thoughts, give some thought to the following FACT which has helped me so many times: Depression, whether financial or otherwise, is NOTHING BUT A STATE OF MIND. It is nothing you can feel, see nor touch—because it is nothing but a state of mind. The quick and sure cure for it is A BETTER STATE OF MIND, which can be summed up in the one word, "COURAGE!"

FOURTH—We are not going to wait for other companies to wake up. We are not going to mark time. We are not going to plunge ourselves into a ridiculous gloom. We are going ahead with all our heart and soul and resources! With your untiring and unafraid co-operation in this program, there's nothing in the world we can't accomplish. If you are of the same opinion, I ask you to subscribe to the following slogan and I ask you to spread its message of encouragement as fast as you can.

"Marking time?
Hell no!
We're going AHEAD!"

Good-bye and good-luck and—go to it!
Enthusiastically yours,
CARL LAEMMLE,

Life Story Contest Excites Interest in "Big Adventure"

THE same human characteristic that prompts people to get up in a camp meeting and "testify" as to their personal experiences, and which prompts others to write letters to newspapers recounting amusing anecdotes and thrilling adventures, can be directed in the channels of moving picture exploitation, as recently was proved by the management of the Clemmer Theatre, Seattle, Wash.

In its drive to exploit "The Big Adventure," a Universal five-reel feature starring "Breezy Eason," a five-year-old screen favorite, the Clemmer Theatre arranged with the Seattle "Post-Intelligencer" to run a column each day open to the readers of the paper who had unusual adventures to relate.

Saturday Morning Kiddies' Matinee for "The Big Adventure" at the Frolic Theatre, San Francisco.

For a week the paper was swamped with letters on "my big adventure." Scores of them were printed and at the end of the week the theatre presented the writer of the best "adventure story" with $50. Although the stunt originally was arranged for youngsters it was found that grown-ups took as much if not more interest in writing up their thrills than the school children. The best story was written by a woman who told how she broke and rode a wild horse for many miles to Marion, O., to hear President Harding speak. She was a little girl at that time and the President then was a rising Ohio political figure.

In presenting "The Big Adventure" the Clemmer constructed huge "slates" on the front of the theatre building and wrote the ads for the picture in crooked lettering and with mis-spelled words, to carry out the "kid" idea.

The Laemmle-Universal Anniversary

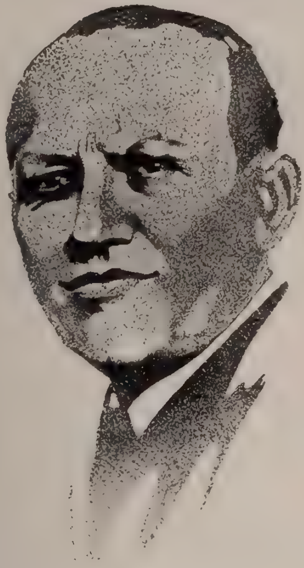
& Kessel interests to turn over their property to the Universal Company, both Baumann and Kessel withdrew, and Mr. Laemmle was elected president. The newly-formed Universal company was then established in 1600 Broadway, where it has remained ever since. From half of the third floor, which it first rented and on which both the exchange and the general offices were situated, it has grown to occupy all of the third floor, all of the seventh floor, and part of the second and eighth floors. The companies which came into the Universal at the start were the Imp, Rex, Bison, Champion, Nestor and the Powers. Later were added Frontier, Eclair, Crystal, and the Gaumont for a short period.

Mr. Laemmle and the company which is the embodiment of his fighting spirit have always been independent. Every movement to enslave the industry or any part of it has met with his ready and whole-hearted opposition. It often looked as though the Trust would gobble it up, but his indomitable courage and ready resourcefulness have been able to withstand every new situation and aggregation of forces against him. More than that, Mr. Laemmle has always been arrayed on the side of the exhibitor and never on the side sought to control or oppose the exhibitor in any way. The Universal has spent thousands of dollars, often fighting alone, for the protection of a principle, and it has won every fight it has entered.

Three-quarters of the stars and leading players of today received their first start with the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, either in the old Imp days or in the big studio at Fort Lee, or at Universal City, California. Universal has been the big training school of the industry.

It is only fitting and right that Mr. Laemmle should take this opportunity to celebrate his own fifteen years of success, and the nine years of success of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company.



"Marking time? H--l no! Universal's going ahead!"

If every exhibitor will follow the slogan of Carl Laemmle, President of the Universal Film Company, the picture business need have no fears as to the future. And the first step in the going ahead process is to make your program absorbingly interesting with International News. "The world before your eyes"--and long before your eyes see it in any other news reel. That's the "go ahead" spirit that turns slack times into boom times. Put your name on that contract today.

Texas Ranger Acts Before the Camera To Catch Smugglers

CAST

Texas Kid	Hoot Gibson
Myrtle Lee	Marcella Pershing
Donald Lawrence	John Judd
Director	Charles Newton

DICK HARRIS, a Texas Ranger, known as "The Cactus Kid" is on the trail of some smugglers who have been getting some diamonds across the border without paying the duty on them. The trail leads him into the vicinity where a moving picture company is at work.

Donald Lawrence, the leading man of the company uses his work as an actor to camouflage his connection with the smugglers.

Signs As An Actor

The company returns to the studio to complete the picture and the "Cactus Kid" goes with them as an actor in order to keep an eye on Lawrence.

The big scene of the picture calls for Lawrence, as the leading man to cross from one building to another over a slender rope to rescue the leading woman who is trapped in the burning building. He refuses to risk his life on the "stunt" and the "Cactus Kid" is called upon to do it for him.

The Smuggler's Secret

The "Kid" slips into Lawrence's dressing-room to use his make-up since he has none of his own.

He discovers an uncut diamond has been imbedded in the grease paint. Now he knows how the stones have been smuggled and that Lawrence is the guilty one.

Lawrence discovers that his grease paint has been tampered with and also that Dick is a Texas Ranger.

The stunt in the picture gives him his idea. While the "Kid" is hanging onto the rope in mid-air making his way to where the leading lady is trapped at the blazing window, Lawrence makes his way unnoticed to the opposite window from which the "Kid" had started and starts to cut the rope.

Peril In Midair

The leading woman sees the dastardly act and cried out a warning to Dick. Dick sees his peril and while suspended in mid-air pulls his gun and shoots Lawrence in the hand.

His plot discovered, Lawrence scrambles down from his perch and makes his getaway on a horse. Dick goes after him followed by the leading woman and others. Dick captures him in a ravine after a chase that takes them all through the studio grounds.

GRASPING a strand of wire Jack swings thro the air from the moat down to the runway below where Satan and his men have Dolores. He succeeds in driving off the bandits and helps Dolores to escape.

Satan immediately sends out a message to all his spies to watch for the two escaped prisoners and report their hiding-place to him as soon as they are located.

In the meantime Jack and Dolores as soon as they get into the city go to Lieut. Alvarez and tell him of their experience and ask him if he has received word of the ring.

Lieut. Alvarez tells them that, although word had gone out to the Port Captain of every harbor, no word had so far been received that the bottle had been picked up. He advised Jack and Dolores to remain in hiding for the time being. He sends them to an old deserted hut near the Almendares River.

While they are enroute for the hut they are seen by one of Satan's men who follows their trail. As soon as he makes sure of their new hiding-place he leaves for Satan's castle, where he reports what he has learned to his chief.

Satan then organizes a crew who he sends to the hut to overcome Jack and Dolores and bring them to him. Jack sees the men coming and escapes from the hut with Dolores. They get into a car and are pursued by the bandits along the river bank and over several bridges. Just as they come to the longest bridge over the Almendares River, Satan's men overhaul the other car and during the terriffic fight which follows, Jack is knocked off the rail of the bridge into the river below.

Extra Routs Company In Big Movie Scene

"A Monkey Movie Star"

Universal-Jewel Comedy

Featuring

Joe Martin, the Monkey Comedian

AFTER being abused by his keeper, Joe Martin, the educated monkey, escaped from his cage and wandered into the office of the Hi-Tone Film Company. The director was just about to start a new picture and when he saw the monkey, hired him as the new star.

Early the next morning the president of the film company arrived at the studio and found all the cast and the extras sitting around loafing. When he was told that the star had not arrived he rushed to the star's home with the director and the vice-president.

Finally after being correctly attired for the day the monkey star started out for the studio.

After sending the company home the director discovered that the elephant had picked up a hose and was directing a stream of water on the location where the company was working.

"Society Dogs"

Two-reel Century Comedy

Featuring

"BROWNIE," THE WONDER DOG

"BROWNIE" and his master were loafing in the park dreaming of life in society, with "Brownie" wearing a Tuxedo and being waited upon by a corps of obedient servants. Their dreams were cut short, however, by the arrival of a cop, who started them off again on their journey.

"Brownie's" master was a glazier, and, as his advance agent, the dog, would pass along one of the business streets and break several show windows by means of a stone fastened to his tail. Business was fairly brisk, until a cop saw "Brownie" at work.

The dog managed to escape , however, by jumping up on top of a victrola standing outside a music store and posing as the well-known trademark of the dog hearing his master's voice.

Episode No. 16

"Flames of Fury"

CAST

Jean	Iva Forrester
Spider	Hank Bell
Sam Ramsey	Duke R. Lee
Onava	Marie Torpie
Cuevas	Tote Ducrow

THE episode opens with Allen roping a steer at the rodeo where he is trying to win enough prizes to redeem the bracelet he pawned to help Jean. The Spiders have cut his cinch. He ropes the steer and the cinch breaks dragging him.

Despite the handicap against him, Allen has got to his feet, bulldogged and tied the steer winning the event by a split second.

Ramsey and the Spider see this and set out for Redrock to get the bracelet anyway—the time is up on it within an hour or so.

Allen, with the prize money, returns to Redrock to take up the bracelet. Ramsey beats him to it but the hotel proprietor will not give it up until the time is up to the minute. Cuevas gets wind of their scheme and rides to intercept Allen and tell him to hurry.

Allen leaves the road and rides cross-country to get to town in time to take up the bracelet.

He gets there just too late, after a superhuman ride. The proprietor has given it to Ramsey. Ramsey hides it in a vase of flowers on the desk and swears he hasn't got it. Allen appears to swallow his lie but in reality he doesn't. He resolves to follow Ramsey in the hope that he will lead him to the bracelet.

Realizing he is being followed, Ramsey leads the way to an abandoned shack on the edge of town. The spider is following Allen.

Ramsey enters the shack. Allen follows in but Ramsey has gone on through and out another door which he locks on the outside. Allen tries to go out the door he entered, but the Spider has locked that also.

Ramsey in leaving drops a cigarette stub which sets fire to grass beside the shack.

But the proprietor has cleaned up the lobby and in doing so he has dumped the withered flowers into a pile of refuse without noticing that the bracelet is with them.

The episode ends with the bracelet being thrown out into an alley; Ramsey is inside, wild at the discovery that the bracelet is gone from the vase; Cuevas has been left unconscious in the alley by the Spider; Onava is trying to force her way into the burning shack where a falling timber has struck Allen on the head and left him lying unconscious, unable to help himself.

Born Serial Star

EILEEN SEDGWICK

Cut No. 2-P

HAVING been born into a theatrical family and practically brought up on the stage, Eileen Sedgwick, the star of the Universal serial, "Terror Trail," which begins at the .... Theatre next ...., possesses natural dramatic talent and unusual ability, in addition to her reputation as a daring serial star.

Both her parents are popular players and also her brother Ed and a sister, Josie. During Eileen's youth the Sedgwick family traveled as an independent theatrical company through the South and West and became famous throughout that territory.

The dramatic company toured the country and became notable for its repertoire. Not only did they present tabloid versions of the latest New York comedy and dramatic hits, but interspersed vaudeville numbers, songs, dances and athletic sketches between the acts by way of variety.

Miss Sedgwick's first important work before the camera was at the age of 14, in a Universal picture, "The Isle of Life," which was made in Mexico. She was so appealing in the rôle that her screen career was assured and she continued in Universal productions.

Forsaking the dramatic rôles for a time, Miss Sedgwick gave a new interpretation to comedy leads and was featured in a number of funny films made at Universal City.

Realizing that her talents were too great to be entirely confined to the comedy screen, the star was again placed in dramatic rôles by Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, and has since then specialized principally in serials.

Her work in support of Eddie Polo in his first romance of the big top, "The Lure of the Circus," was characterized by skill and daring and by a dramatic quality seldom met with in film serial production. She later appeared in such thrilling creations as "Man and Beast," "Dropped from the Clouds," "The Trail of No Return," "Number 10, Westbound," and others.

After her success in "The Great Radium Mystery," in which she was co-starred by Universal, Miss Sedgwick was given the leading rôle in "The Diamond Queen," a popular serial romance.

Following her success in that chapter photoplay, she was made the star of "Terror Trail," the latest Universal serial directed by Edward Kull.

Episode No. 1

CAST

Elaine Emerson	Eileen Sedgwick
Bertram Russell	Theodore Brown
Bruce Burns	George Larkin
Hunch Henderson	Al Smith
Holmes	Barney Furey
Vera Vernon	Eileen Sedgwick

BERTRAM RUSSELL is the inventor of the most powerful agent of destruction known to man. It is known as terror gas, and is far more powerful than any heretofore invented. He has made an arrangement with this government to give a demonstration of its powers on the isolated plains in the West.

Before starting, he has learned that a certain band of conspirators are seeking the formula, and for protection he divided it into three parts. He takes one part with him, mails the other special delivery to himself out West and sends the third part by his assistant, Henry, who goes by a different route and is to meet him.

Crack Operator On Case

As additional protection the government puts its crack operator from the Department of Justice on the case. She is Elaine Emerson, and she arrives at the same time Russell does and puts up at the same hotel on the same floor. Bruce Burns, another operator, is also assigned to the case, but neither he nor Elaine knows that the other is working on the case, nor are they known to each other.

Hunch Henderson is the leader of the band that seeks the formula. He is aided by a man named Holmes and a girl who recently joined him known as Vera Vernon.

Vera Vernon is an expert in scientific impersonation, and has made herself up to look exactly like Elaine. It is only in this guise that Henderson knows her. Henry arrived as per schedule, and is attacked at the station, where he is struck down and his part of the formula secured by Hunch.

Vera and Holmes go to rob Russell, but are interrupted, and Vera hides. Holmes feigns being wounded, and Elaine and Bruce meet for the first time, when Russell, who has seen Vera, accuses Elaine of holding him up.

The proprietor of the hotel vouches for her, and Bruce goes to Russell's room, where the stricken Holmes is supposed to be. Holmes in the meantime has leaped through the window, and Bruce follows him to the roof. Here a fight ensues which is heard by Elaine, who starts up the fire ladder after the two. She gets halfway up when Holmes knocks out Bruce, and wrenching the ladder from its foundation on the cornice he pushes it from the building with the ill-fated heroine on it. The ladder falls and hits a cornice of the opposite building, but does not stop, continuing on its flight toward the street below.

The villains now have two parts of the formula, and the heroine is facing death. The hero is unconscious, and he cannot save her.

CAST

Hunch	Al Smith
Vera	Eileen Sedgwick
Russell	Theodore Brown

AS Elaine swings to certain death the ladder stops momentarily in its downward flight as it hits the cornice, and its course is deflected so that it describes an arc and instead of falling straight down it falls toward the hotel. Elaine is catapulted through a window on the floor below where she got on the ladder, and after recovering consciousness she goes upstairs to her room. She is intercepted in the hall by the chauffeur of Hunch, who battles with her.

Meanwhile Bruce has recovered, and seeing Elaine make her swing of death he knocks out Holmes and, climbing out on the flag pole, he undoes the rope and lowers himself to the end of the rope. He starts to swing and swings through the same window which Elaine was thrown as the manager of the hotel and the house detective enter the room.

Search For Elaine

They start a search for Elaine and start upstairs. She has been overcome by the chauffeur, who hears them coming and cannot get away. He leaves the unconscious girl in a hamper in the hall and hides. Bruce, the manager and house detective come upstairs and seat themselves on the very hamper. They start searching, and two porters carry the hamper from under their noses to the freight elevator.

The chauffeur boards it, and knocking out the elevator man gets the girl and takes her to Hunch's den. Here Hunch upbraids him and orders him out before he can explain, as Hunch thinks that Elaine is Vera Vernon. He asks her for the paper, and she tells him she must go to get it.

Vera has, in the meantime, come from in hiding and goes to Russell's room, where she learns that Russell has sent the other part to himself by registered mail. She goes to Hunch, tells him, and they start out to get it. They capture Henry, who has been sent to get it, and get the third part of the paper in this way.

In the meantime Elaine and Bruce are busy, and decide to go to Hunch's den, as Elaine has the means of entrance. She goes inside and thinks she is alone, as she does not see Hunch. She breaks open his desk and gets two parts of the formula, and is about to escape when Holmes comes in and attacks her. She fights valiantly, but is nearly overpowered. She throws the two parts out the window to Bruce, who gets them, then climbs to her rescue.

He gets to the window as Holmes in anger pulls the lever which precipitates Elaine into the pool of flame. Elaine falls through the trap and the flames start to crawl down toward her. Bruce is helpless to aid her.

"The Mine of Menace"

EPISODE No. 3

As Elaine is slowly being burned to death by the vicious flames from the torches in the pool of death, Bruce leaps from the window and, knocking the gun from the hands of Holmes, forces him to turn off the gas, and then aiding the girl starts out of the hall.

In the hall he is met by several more villains and a fight ensues, and the hero and heroine make their escape by leaping over the men on the stairs.

Elaine goes to her room, but Vera sees an opportunity to get the other part of the formula from Russell, and visits him. Here she is mistaken for Elaine, and she finds out that Russell has sent the third part of the formula to himself via registered letter. She learns this and meets Holmes, to whom she imparts the information. Bruce sees her in the hall, and thinking that she is Elaine he tries to speak to her, but she ignores him and gets on the elevator before he can really get a good look at her. Vera has learned that Russell is going to the Coyote mine to make up the formula from memory. She tells Holmes this, who in turn goes to Hunch and tells him.

Elaine and Bruce decide to go to the den of Hunch to get the rest of the formula and go there. Bruce goes in, while Elaine waits outside. While in there he is attacked by Holmes, who makes him a prisoner.

Holmes, with Bruce a prisoner, starts for the mine, but Elaine seeing this starts out after the car on a motor cycle. She follows, but they know that she is following and speed up the car. They round a corner, and Holmes quickly stretches a steel cable across the road, and Elaine coming full speed around the corner hits the cable and is knocked off the machine. She is made a prisoner and taken to the mine with Bruce.

At the Abandoned Mine

Holmes arrives at the mine and has the two taken to an abandoned drift, while he looks up his chief. He goes in search of Hunch. He finds him just as Russell, weakened by the grilling he is getting, is about to tell, and Hunch, angered, orders Holmes out, cursing him. Holmes sees a chance to rid himself of both the operators and Hunch, so he goes to Elaine and Bruce and tells them they must tell where the formula is in two minutes, or he will shoot the mine.

He goes up, leaving the two bound below in the abandoned drift. Elaine with her teeth unties Bruce's bonds, and he in turn releases her. He wants to tell, but she will not. Holmes waits with his hand on the plunger, and then fires the mine. Brue and Elaine are nearly buried in the debris from the falling wall that hems them in. They start to dig their way out when they notice the water trickling in. They rush to stop it, but are overcome by the great volume and swept beneath the roaring mass as we end the episode.

BORN DURING FLOOD SHE KNOWS NO FEAR

Miss Sedgwick was born in Galveston shortly after the big flood of 1900, in a little marooned cottage that had been washed far afield by the great tidal wave. The child's mother had undergone a series of terrifying experiences similar to the flood horrors recently reported from the Pueblo district.

Miss Sedgwick has absolutely no sense of fear. In early childhood she did deeds and performed stunts before which other children quailed. As she grew older she became more daring. When she started in moving pictures, it soon was discovered that no stunt could be found she would not attempt for the camera.

In "Terror Trail" she endangered her life a score of times in order that the serial might provide thrills for the picture public.

In no serial production in which she has heretofore been featured has the radiant blonde been required to do the dangerous feats which have been outlined for her in "Terror Trail."

The story of "Terror Trail" was written by John W. Gray and Edward Kull with the supervisory collaboration of William Lord Wright, chief of the serial and short-reel feature department at Universal City.

In scope the narrative is cosmopolitan, touching every country on the globe. In theme it concerns a girl who, single-handed, undertakes a patriotic service to her country by solving a great international mystery and frustrating the plans of crooked diplomatic agents.

The plot, which comes with smashing swiftness, cannot be told at this time, but it is said to have an international significance which will add to its force.

George Larkin, widely known as a leading man, has been selected to play opposite the star, and will head an all-star supporting cast of unusual appeal.

Al Smith, whose principal dramatic work has been in "villainous" rôles, and Barney Furey are two popular players who have been selected for the opening episodes.

Secret Service Agents Have Thrilling Lives

ADVENTURES OF UNCLE SAM'S SPIES SHOWN IN "TERROR TRAIL," THE NEW SEDGWICK SERIAL

THE world has eyes, which are constantly watching. They never close; they see everything; they report quickly; and then the law takes its course slowly—but in the end there are no escapes.

The attractive lady who lives in the villa in a distant land, and who appears to be a traveler seeking rest, may be one of th eyes; the gentleman dressed in the garb of the underworld who hangs around the pool hall, could be one of the eyes. There are all over the world the eyes of the Secret Service Departments of the different governments.

Their lives are thrilling—they mix constantly with people, but seldom, if ever, mention their purpose. When they find the trail, nothing stops them; to the end they must go, no matter how terrible. The destiny of nations is often controlled by the eyes of those who watch. If the enemy has the formula of a poisonous gas, an operator is told to return to headquarters with it, that is all. Where, how and when and at what cost is his lookout. Sometimes a woman is detailed on the mission. It may take years, but they never return until they have the coveted piece of paper on which the lives of millions may depend.

Eileen Sedgwick, in Universal's latest super-serial, "Terror Trail," has such a rôle. As a representative of the government she started out on the trail. The episodes of the story will bring to the screen one of the most thrilling and exciting serials ever told.

The popularity of the star in serials has brought her the well-earned title of "Queen of the Serials." Her reputation in "The Diamond Queen" has been definitely established, and this production under the direction of Edward Kull will increase Miss Sedgwick's reputation as one of the most popular stars of the screen.

FOR THE HERALD

CHEMICAL experts have evolved a new gas which will make America supreme in the next war. A fleet of aeroplanes spraying this gas in liquid form over armies, towns and country sides will annihilate entire populations and destroy all vegetation.

Spies of almost every foreign country are active in the United States in an attempt to get the formula for the new gas. The War Department and the U. S. Secret Service are taking every possible precaution to safeguard the formula from alien hands.

The gas is known as Terror Gas. It is lethal, paralyzing the nerve centers by its toxic qualities. In light concentration it puts its victims into a state of suspended animation. In heavy concentration it paralyzes the heart and causes death.

The desperate struggle between the various international spy systems to get this gas has been woven into a stirring photoplay by Universal. It is called "Terror Trail," and is an 18-episode serial starring Eileen Sedgwick.

Development of New Terror Gas Forms Theme of Thrilling Serial

REVIEW No. 1

THE development of the most deadly form of gas used in modern warfare and the efforts of a band of international spies to steal the inventor's formula furnishes the interesting and timely theme of "Terror Trail," the latest Universal serial starring Eileen Sedgwick, which started last night at the .... Theatre.

This serial starts off with fast action and if the succeeding episodes provide the thrilling incidents of the first two, "Terror Trail" should be the most interesting and popular chapter photoplay ever shown at a local playhouse.

The young serial star gives an excellent account of her dramatic ability and fearlessless in her encounters with the conspirators who are trying to gain possession of the secret formula of Terror Gas and which they intend to sell to a foreign power. In addition to playing the role of the plucky American girl who is a member of the Secret Service, Miss Sedgwick also plays the part of the female member of the criminal band who closely resembles the government agent and who as the occasion demands impersonates the government worker.

In addition to the highly dramatic plot and many thrilling moments provided in this serial, the action will carry the movie fan from this country to nearly every country on the globe. The succeeding episodes of this serial will be shown every .... at the .... Theatre.

REVIEW No. 2

STORIES of international intrigue are always interesting, and the latest Universal serial, "Terror Trail," starring pretty Eileen Sedgwick, which was shown for the first time last night at the .... Theatre promises to be the most popular chapter photoplay ever shown at a local playhouse.

The first two episodes of the serial which has as its theme the efforts of a girl member of the Secret Service to outwit a band of international conspirators, started off with fast action and many thrilling incidents.

Eileen Sedgwick, as Elaine Emerson, a young American girl who volunteered her services to the Government, is engaged in working to prevent a band of criminals stealing the formula of Terror Gas, the most destructive agent of warfare invented for use by the U. S. Army. The plot promises to carry the spectator to almost every country in the world before the conspirators are run to earth.

Because of the universal interest of the public in all the modern methods of destruction on the battlefield which is the outgrowth of the World War, the theme of this serial is a timely one. It is agreed by experts that the most powerful and terrible weapons of defense or offense in the next war will be gas in its various forms.

Great strides have been made by nearly every country since the armistice in the development of this branch of the army service. At the present time both the U. S. Army and the Navy are conducting extensive gas tests and this serial shows how great are the precautions necessary for the inventors of the newer forms of gas.

Edward Kull, who directed Eileen Sedgwick in her previous Universal serials also directed the star in her present serial and is also the co-author with James W. Grey of the story.

The succeeding episodes of the "Terror Trail" will be shown every .... at the .... Theatre.

Screen Stuntsters Need Iron Nerve

DOES it require nerve or a lack of it to become a famous serial star? Eileen Sedgwick, the youngest and one of the most attractive screen serial stars, is decidedly in favor of the highly educated nerve that can sense the difficulties and possibilities of any situation.

It takes nerve—not the sort described as "brass" or "crust"—to face the many perils that are always a part of the chaptered dramas and the numerous hazardous situations that make a serial interesting and thrilling. A person with plenty of "brass" may face a few lions, tigers and other wild animals, and if he gets too 'crusty" with the dangerous beasts it is quite certain that a casualty will be registered with the producing company. One must possess nerve, but of the kind which designates daring and valor.

In "Terror Trail," Universal's latest super-serial starring Eileen Sedgwick, the star is an expert operator in the confidential service of the government. Time after time she is called upon to go through the most nerve-racking and hair-breadth escapes in order that the plottings of a gang of international criminals may be frustrated.

In the filming of "Terror Trail," the star narrowly escaped serious injury upon several occasions, but she refused to permit a "double" to take her place in any perilous bit of action. Her coolness in time of danger brought her safely through each experience, where a less level head would have come to grief.

Miss Sedgwick is just twenty-one years old, and possesses unusual dramatic ability, with a great love for the thrills and excitement of the serial, which has given her unusual popularity.

"Terror Trail" is being shown every .... at the .... Theatre.

Screen Heroine in Daring Auto Dive

EILEEN Sedgwick, the charming and daring screen star who is acting in "Terror Trail," the serial which is now being shown every .... at the .... Theatre, is known as an expert motorist. Her ability to handle the wheel of practically any make of motor car was very valuable to her in this latest serial of international romance and intrigue.

Miss Sedgwick, as the secret agent of the United States government on the trail of the international crooks, handled a motor car in many of the episodes.

One of the most thrilling feats she has ever been called upon to perform is contained in the fifth episode. Miss Sedgwick was locked in a motor car which with a racing motor was sent spinning off the stern of a ferryboat in the middle of a river. It is needless to say that every one in the company was greatly alarmed that the daring young star would not be rescued before she suffered from immersion.

Eileen Sedgwick Stars in Serial

FORMER VAUDEVILLE KIDDIE NOW A SCREEN STUNTSTER

EILEEN SEDGWICK, the pretty star of "Terror Trail," the latest Universal super-serial, is one of the most popular and best-known young women of the screen. Miss Sedgwick is known as "the serial queen" if the films. She has appeared in countless perilous situations, and has never permitted any one to "double" for her, regardless of the hazard.

Like many famous motion picture stars, Miss Sedgwick started her career in comedies. It was a very natural step from the vaudeville stage to a comedy set with the old Lubin company. Miss Sedgwick had been with the "Five Sedgwicks," playing in popular vaudeville houses in a version of the happenings of the Katzenjammer family. Eileen played the part of Fritz, the noted mischief-maker of the comic supplement, and her sister, Josie, also a screen favorite, played the opposite rôle of Hans, the equally famous Katzenjammer brother. The sketch was well taken by audiences, and Miss Sedgwick enjoyed the footlights.

Leaving vaudeville, she played a few comedies for Lubin, and then was engaged by Universal to play an important part in "The Isle of Life," a colorful action drama staged in Mexico. With her wealth of beautiful blonde hair, she made a most attractive heroine, and at that time was engaged permanently by Universal.

When "The Isle of Life" was completed Miss Sedgwick returned to comedies and became a great favorite in Universal mirth production. She was featured in no less than thirty comedy productions. However, it was the star's desire to return to the excitement of the serial, and she supported Eddie Polo in many of his thrilling Universal serials.

Exploitation Ideas That

THE exploitation seeds you sow between the time you book this serial and the time you show the first episode will bear fruit for eighteen weeks. That fact should make you realize how important it is to publicize the serial in advance, so that the maximum possible number of persons see the first episode. On this and succeeding pages you will find suggestions for stunts, displays and other methods of attracting crowds to the opening episodes of "Terror Trail."

THE best exploitation theme available for putting over "Terror Trail" is the Terror Gas that forms the basis for the story. Terror Gas is a new and lethal agent of warfare invented by American gas experts. The gas theme can be used in lobby displays, in stunts and in other exploitation.

HERE is a good suggestion for a street stunt. Have one or more men stroll around the streets wearing gas masks. You can get any number of former soldiers for this, most of whom have their own gas masks. Displayed on their backs or on the front of the gas mask container there should be a caption somewhat as follows:

LOOK OUT FOR TERROR GAS

See "Terror Trail" at the .... Theatre

These men can call attention to themselves by a small hand claxon, such as are sold in toy stores. Claxon horns were used as Gas Signals during the war.

Show Them The Terror Faces

EILEEN SEDGWICK has the ability to correctly present and interpret the various expressions of terror shown by the human face. In this serial she has an opportunity to run the entire gamut of human expression. In all the posters and other display material prepared for the serial the element of this terror is strongly stressed.

In putting across and impressing on your patrons the quality of terror a good plan would be to make up several lobby cards or a lobby display showing several faces and the way that they are changed by various kinds of terror. If you can't secure the services of the local newspaper cartoonist get one of the amateur cartoonists who are to be found in every town and have him make several pen and ink sketches for your lobby display.

Select one of the portraits of Eileen Sedgwick and mount it on a lobby card frame surrounded by several of the drawings. These terror faces can be treated in a number of ways, and you need not actually stick to the subject matter of the serial. In fact, if you can put a humorous touch in the drawings they will be much more effective.

Every exhibitor can add additional slogans or captions of local importance to the following suggestions for this card idea: "He Forgot His Ticket Money," "Sneaking Home at 4 A. M," "She Missed The First Episode," "He Held Five Aces."

These cards placed in a lobby frame on your wall or placed on an easel in the entrance to the lobby are sure to attract considerable attention.

Other lobby cards which play up the title of the serial should also be used freely.

Use This Ballyhoo

AN effective aid to your ballyhooing for "Terror Trail" can be had with a siren horn or a claxon worked in your lobby. These noises are recognized Gas Signals wherever gas is expected, and always produce a creepy sensation. If you cannot get a siren or a claxon, an old piece of iron bar hit with a hammer makes a satisfactory Gas Alarm.

The Alarm should be accompanied by a flash sign or illuminated card with the caption:

Watch the "TERROR TRAIL!"

HAVE YOU TRIED THIS YET?

Here is one of the best serial exploitation stunts you can use:

Announce that on the opening night of the serial, a flashlight picture will be taken of the audience and that twenty (or any other number) of the faces shown in this picture will be enlarged and shown on the screen (by slide) during the showing of the second episode. Those persons whose faces thus appear on the screen will get season tickets for the entire run of the serial.

Detour Here

PLAY up the "Terror Trail" angle wherever possible if you want to get the most benefit from the advertising and publicity opportunities in this serial. Sign boards and finger boards with the title of the picture can be erected at important places in town.

It should not be very difficult to get permission from the proper officials to place a street sign with the words "Terror Trail" on the street markers on the corners of the street leading to your theatre.

If the entrance to your theatre is on one of the side streets of the town, place a sign board somewhere on the main highway, reading as follows: "Detour Here—'Terror Trail,' follow arrow to ....Theatre." "Terror Trail," traffic stands should also be made for use in the front of the theatre.

Essay Contest on "Terror Trail"

EILEEN

ONE of the surest ways of getting worthwhile publicity across in your local newspapers is by bringing to the editors a really interesting essay contest idea. Because nearly every family has some one who thinks that they can express their thoughts—grave or gay—on paper, a contest is always popular and excites more interest than almost any other publicity stunt for such slight cost.

Here is an essay contest idea for "Terror Trail," that can be successfully worked in any sized town. Now, Mr. Exhibitor, when you go to your home town editor with your advance publicity for this serial ask him to conduct an essay contest on the most terrifying moment in the lives of his readers.

This can be arranged in a number of ways, but two suggested headings for the contest page in your paper are: "My Most Terrifying Moment," or, "My Most Terrifying Experience." The writers of the best essays received during the contest will receive as rewards passes to your theatre for all the episodes of "Terror Trail." At the end of the contest the winning essay should be printed in the newspaper with the names of their authors.

Some showmen seem to think that newspapers only want to co-operate with them in running a contract of some kind when they are showing a feature picture at their theatres. As a matter of fact the editors will be glad to co-operate with you on any picture if the idea you show them has real merit. And the contest suggested here is one that will be welcomed anywhere, for it will be of mutual benefit to both your theatre and the town newspaper.

Don't Forget Your Badge

"HEY, Johnny! did you get your badge? I'm working for the Secret Service now. Sure—following the "Terror Trail" mystery. Better beat it down to the picture show and get a badge."

Don't forget the boy element in your town when you book this serial, Mr. Exhibitor, for the kids are coming to constitute an important part of serial audiences. The reproduction of the badge which is shown on this page is a suggestion which can be worked by your theatre.

After your kid patrons have worn these badges around the town for a time everyone will know that there is a rattling good mystery serial down at your theatre.

These badges appeal to the element of adventure in the boy and the pride of possession with the desire to have the same things that the other fellow has.

This is a very simple and comparatively economical stunt. Let your local printer print on square cardboard the official permit as shown on the card here.

These are then to be given out at the box-office or promiscuously, as you determine. The boys will then cut along the outline of the badge and make their own shields in afew moments time.

Another Lobby Stunt

TAKE advantage of the Terror Gas angle to this serial by arranging a Gas Mask Exhibit for your lobby. This suggests a tie-up with the American Legion or the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Many "overseas" veterans have French and German gas masks which they gladly will place on exhibit. You might be able to get hold of other implements of gas war-fare from your local National Guard organization.

A novel ballyhoo or presentation stunt would be to have a Gas Mask Drill, showing the various steps taken by a soldier in combating gas. Any "overseas" veteran can help you with this. Keep in it a light vein. One of the most amusing stunts you can arrange is to get a quartette of ex-soldiers to sing in gas masks, on the street, in your lobby or on your stage.

Universal Screen Villain Started As Choir Boy

At the tender age of nine years little Al was singing in a boys' choir in an eastern city. Now he is enacting the villain's part in a Universal serial, and for certain he is wearing the conventional costume that the government has designed for gentlemen who are not at liberty.

When Al's voice started to swing from high soprano to a rather deep bass, with no degree of certainty, he left the choir to take up stage work. He enjoyed the usual experiences which befell a young man seeking fame on the stage, the most usual one being the long walk home at the end of each season's engagement. At that time Smith says there were about thirty seasons to the year.

A stock company brought him West eight years ago, and since that time he has been in screen work. He was Zimba in Eileen Sedgwick's serial, "The Diamond Queen," and is playing the "heavy" in the current production.

Personally, Smith is anything but a villain off the screen, and is one of the most popular players at Universal City. His dramatic ability is noted by the excellent characterizations which he has given to the silver sheet.

Former Acrobat Now Serial Star

George Larkin a Scientific Daredevil

WHEN Edward Kull, director of Eileen Sedgwick in her Universal serial, "Terror Trail," discovered that the leading man would have quite as many perilous stunts to perform as the star, he selected "Daredevil" George Larkin for the rôle. This serial is being shown every .... at the .... Theatre.

Larkin has appeared in a dozen serial productions, and falling off an aeroplane or jumping across a bottomless ravine is all in the day's work.

There is a science in his daredeviltry, however, which keeps him out of the morgue or the hospital. He has learned the art of complete relaxation, so that he can take a fall with the minimum danger of bodily injury, and he has developed co-ordination and control of the muscles so that they act with hair-trigger rapidity.

In one of the episodes of "Terror Trail," for instance, he leaps from a running horse to a speeding automobile in which the heroine, Eileen Sedgwick, is being spirited away. The first time the scene was attempted there was a slight error in timing, and the car rushed by a fraction of a second too soon, leaving Larkin to land on the hard road. Had he been merely a reckless fellow, he would have sustained several broken bones, at least, and delayed work on the picture for weeks. But as he jumped he realized he would miss the machine, and almost unconsciously he relaxed his muscles and struck the road in such a way that he only sustained a few bruises.

George Larkin was a circus acrobat when quite young, and it was there that he learned the science of muscular relaxation which has been of such a wonderful help to him in supplying thrills for the edification if picture fans.

Thrills from "Terror Trail" Serial

Desperate Chances Taken By Film Stars

(Use Before the Second Episode)

MUCH has been printed of the desperate chances taken by screen heroes and heroines to provide thrills for the picture-play public, and many writers have sought to give the impression that all stunt acting is faked.

It is a well established fact, however, that most of the stunts performed for the camera actually are done with a factor of safety that is only slightly greater than the stunt itself indicates.

It is not in the doing of dare-devil stunts that screen players come to the most harm. It is in the performance of simple stunts such as fill the action of almost every film thriller.

In her latest serial, "Terror Trail," Eileen Sedgwick, Universal's most fearless actress, got more scratches and bruises doing apparently simple stunts than she did in enacting the real breath-takers of the serial.

In the third episode of "Terror Trail," which will be shown at the .... Theatre next ...., Miss Sedgwick had to fall through a trapdoor. In doing this for the camera she hit a projecting piece of timber and was severely bruised. A slight difference in the way she fell would have caused her to suffer concussion of the brain.

No Trick Photography Used In Lion Pictures

Cut No. 7-S

MANY people who see moving pictures showing the actors being pursued by lions or otherwise acting with lions believe that the pictures are obtained by trick photography. Nothing could be more incorrect. In most cases the players actually are in the same room or on the same stage with the lions, and it is only by the most adroit means and by extra careful handling of the beasts that the actors are safeguarded from injury.

Often accidents do occur. Usually they result from false moves by the players themselves or from unforeseen incidents and conditions which the lions have not been trained to expect.

In her latest serial, "Terror Trail," Eileen Sedgwick narrowly escaped a bad clawing, due to such an incident. In the fourth episode of the serial, which is to be shown at the .... Theatre next ...., Miss Sedgwick was scheduled to fall through a trapdoor into a lions' cage.

In rehearsing the scene Miss Sedgwick fell through the door when the lions were being turned into the cage. She hit one of them as she fell and the beast turned on her with a snarl. Only the prompt action of the trainers prevented the young star from being attacked. Quick action with a sharp prong and the firing of blank cartridges frightened the lion away before he could strike.

Burglars of Future To Fight With Gas

(Use Before the Fifth Episode)

CRIMINOLOGISTS say the burglar of the future instead of being armed with blackjacks and pistols will carry a poison-gas projector. This gas, with which he will asphyxiate all who surprise him at work, will be either a lethal gas, possibly causing death, or a sleeping gas. Burglars, for instance, would have no use for tear gas, sneezing gas or mustard gas, the three gases so effective in warfare, where it is more advantageous to put a man out than to kill him.

Startling and realistic moving pictures showing this new and criminal use of gas, warfare's latest terror, are shown in the fifth episode of "Terror Trail," the Universal serial which will be seen at the .... Theatre .... The serial, starring Eileen Sedgwick, is based upon the attempt of a foreign government to get the formula for Terror Gas, a new American weapon.

MINE DISASTER SHOWN ON THE SCREEN

(Use Before the Third Episode)

IN the list of catastrophes and horrors which at times visit the human race nothing is more terrible than a mine disaster. The poor fellows trapped far underground by fire, flood, explosion or cave-in haven't a fighting chance for their lives.

The heart-rending suspense of such a predicament has nowhere been better portrayed than in "Terror Trail," the Universal serial now being shown each week at the .... Theatre. In the third episode, to be shown next ...., Miss Eileen Sedgwick, the star, and her leading man are depicted trapped in a destroyed mine.

They are shown endangered by three of the worst forms of mine disaster. First are shown the effects of an explosion, such as occurs from fire-damp, or from ill-arranged blasts. Also the destructive effects of a cave-in far below the ground are shown, and finally the two screen players are shown undergoing all the sickening experiences of a mine flood.

The scenes were arranged under the supervision of a mining expert who had undergone all varieties of mine horrors and are said to form a strong screen lesson for those who do not thoroughly appreciate the necessity for every possible safely appliance in underground work.

She Likes 'em Wild

EILEEN SEDGWICK, SERIAL STAR, SAYS SHE ACTS IN SCREEN THRILLERS BECAUSE SHE GETS WILD ANIMALS FOR PLAYMATES

"Why I Am In the Movies"

By EILEEN SEDGWICK

LIKE many motion-picture actresses, I graduated from the legitimate stage to the silver-screen. It seems that I've been touring on the road ever since I was born—mother and father were both on the stage. But I've inherited no overwhelming love for the stage—the movies for me every time.

When I joined Universal I had to make out a standard form giving information of various sorts. One of the questions was: "Why did you take up a motion-picture career?" I answered, "To keep eating regularly." Which may account for my not being enamoured of the ligitimate stage.

I'm mighty keen about pictures because they enable me to keep out in the open air and they give me an opportunity to play around with wild animals. I don't know how many times I've sworn off fooling with the cats (that's what we call any lion or tiger in the pictures), but I always seem to be cast for serials where they use wild animals instead of extra people.

Of course I got the worst of it occasionally—there are a couple of scars on my shoulder which aren't birthmarks. But, take it all in all, I feel that the movies are not only the most interesting career possible for a young girl, but I am certain that no other profession offers such great rewards, from a financial physical and educational standpoint.

I prefer serials to all the other types of films; there is more excitement, action, pleasure and thrill to a two-reel serial episode than in five reels of feature picture of the usual sort.

"WHILE many of the producers are shouting about 'super-productions' and 'stupendous entertainment,' Universal goes right along making program attractions , many of which have a great deal more merit than more blatantly heralded offerings. 'Luring Lips' comes to our attention quietly and unobtrusively and it goes its way leaving the pleasant remembrance and the feeling that we were given more in the way of entertainment than we were looking for."

And "Harrison's Reports" adds: " 'Luring Lips' is an excellent drama, so good, in fact, that it should prove suitable, particularly at this time, for theatres that run a picture for an entire week, if quality is what they seek. Although it does not boast of lavish settings, it is a much better picture than many of those announced by trumpets, and which are charged to you at $500,000 or more."

We've been telling you so right along, and we're going to keep on telling you!

Special Attractions for September

IN the race for business it's the fellow who gets the flying start that stands the best chance of winning. And this season you're going to have to run like blazes to keep ahead of the field. Universal knows that—that's why Universal has planned to get you off to a flying start—and to keep you in front throughout the year.

RIGHT off the bat you get the edge on everybody else with four bang-up Universal Special Attractions. Further, you get Universal's promise that the pace will be kept up with each succeeding Special Attraction.

THE new season begins with Hoot Gibson, the smiling dare-devil, in "Action," a feature that more than lives up to its title. Another one for September is Gladys Walton, in "The Rowdy," the same kind of a picture as "Pink Tights," which made a sweeping hit last year. Then comes Frank Mayo, the fighting hero of romance, in "The Shark Master," a wonderful adventure story of the tropics, and Marie Prevost, in "Moonlight Follies," a comedy-drama packed with thrills, chuckles, romance and adventure. Get off to a flying start—NOW!

"Big Four" Near Completion at Universal City

"Foolish Wives", "Conflict", "No Woman Knows" and "The Fox", Will Soon Be Ready For Screen

FOUR of the most pretentious productions of the year are converging toward the screen at Universal City. One of them is considered in the industry to be the greatest picture of screen history. The other three are pictures behind which Universal has put an unusual amount of brains, time and money.

The big picture is, of course, "Foolish Wives." Erich von Stroheim, who shot it in 326,000 feet in something over a year at a cost of $1,300,000, is edit-iting it down to footage. It will be ready for its preview about August 20, when a delegation of censors from every censor board in the country, arrive to be Carl Laemmle's guests at Universal City.

The first picture of the remaining three to have been completed is "Conflict," a story in which Priscilla Dean will be seen in a role even more dynamic than her starring characterizations in "Outside the Law" and "Reputation." The story was filmed under the direction of Stuart Paton from the Red Book Magazine serial by Clarence Buddington Kelland. The Universal producing unit has just returned from British Columbia, where the vigorous and colorful lumbering industry was filmed to add atmosphere to the dramatic action.

Closely following the completion of "Conflict" will be Harry Carey's own smashing big Universal-Jewel story, "The Fox," upon which he has been at work on the Mojave desert under the direction of Robert Thornby. "The Fox" will go to the screen as a motion-picture trail-blazer. Two troops of regular United States Cavalry play the atmosphere. A machine gun crew tears out a suspension bridge as just one kick in the dramatic highball, while the screen will show some of the most magnificent scenery in the high-wide-and-handsome confines of the West.

A month ago editorial work began on "No Woman Knows," Universal's screening of the big Edna Ferber magazine story, "Fanny Herself," which was directed by Tod Browning.

The production gives Mabel Julienne Scott the greatest opportunity of her brilliant career in the leading role and will animate for millions, one of the sincerest stories that ever emanated from a human heart.

Irving G. Thaberg, general manager at Universal City, is satisfied with the way in which the big Universal-Jewel super-features are being cleared through the studio screenward, and he is concentrating on two special attractions, three serials and two short-reel comedies, which are now under production.

Miss Prevost is making excellent progress on "The Girl Who Knew All About Men," a clever comedy drama that took her to Big Bear for some of the prettiest vistas that ever trickled through a camera and has now returned to the studio for the elaborate interiors. King Baggot is directing.

Hoot Gibson is working on the other feature. It is tentatively called "Bransford of Rainbow Ridge," and is a speedy Western drama by Eugene Manlove Rhodes. Jack Ford is directing the production.

Eddie Polo, Art Acord and Eileen Sedgwick are starring in serials. The famous screen Hercules is engaged on "The Secret Four," a serial based upon the oil game, which Albert Russell is directing. The company is at Catalina. Art Acord is filming the adventures of Capt. John Fremont as "Winners of the West," a thrilling chaptered drama which Edward Laemmle is directing, while Eileen Sedgwick has the starring role in "Terror Trail," an eighteen episode screen narrative through which Edward Kull is guiding her.

The three comedy companies are turning out short reel mirthquakes in which such famous fun-flingers as Lee Moran, Bert Roach, Mary Philbin and Harry Gribbon are being starred or featured.

"For the Love of Mike--Cheer Up"

A Message from Carl Laemmle

FROM far-away Carlsbad, where he has an opportunity such as we cannot appreciate of turning the spy-glass on the industry, Carl Laemmle sends a message to exhibitors, distributors and producers. Mr. Laemmle has been kept in the closest of touch not only with his own company by regular bullletins from the Universal, but with the affairs of all other companies through a system which was devised especially to keep him informed of conditions at home. Mr. Laemmle never learned how to take a vacation that permitted an absolute detachment from business. He can rest best when he knows just how everything is going. For that reason he has had an unprecedented opportunity to obtain a bird's-eye view of conditions in this county. He can size up the situation much better than one who is in the midst of things and who sees only his own horizon and whose vista is limited.

Carl Laemmle, President of Universal Film Mfg. Co.

"Conditions are going to improve," said Mr. Laemmle. "The reaction has already started. Exhibitors' faces are not quite so long as they were a month or two ago. The dawn of a new day—the day of Bigger and Better Box Office—is here.

"This is not a surmise. It is not a prediction. There's no guess work to it. It is an ASSURED FACT. The causes for this improvement are many.

"Living costs are going down. The retrenchment epidemic—that penny-wise, pound foolish policy that urges a man to forego several hours of real pleasure, to spend his evenings brooding and worrying—is disappearing. Like all epidemics, that one was contagious or infectious. People got panicky without cause. I repeat: WITHOUT CAUSE.

"There never was a real basis for the depression. Certain producers felt, perhaps, a bit squeamish. They might have mentioned the fact that they were a bit doubtful about weathering a tough season. That word was passed on. The gossips got to work. A rumor was born. That rumor grew. From a rumor, fundamentally false, there developed a Frankenstein monster. It cast off its shackles, struck at those who had conceived it, and soon had the entire industry by the throat.

"Any industry as wholesome and mighty as our enormous motion picture business is too big, too essential, too necessary not to survive mere back-stair gossip and scuttlebutt rumor. It has survived and will continue to survive the onslaughts of professional reformers. It is healthy enough to prosper in spite of disproportionate taxation.

"Films are better to-day than ever before. More thought, more vision, more brains, and, most of all, more common sense are being put into motion pictures than in the past. If you cannot sell your patrons on the idea that, in justice to themselves and to the fine things that are being done on the screen, they should see these motion pictures, something must be wrong. The fault may lie with the production; I doubt it. The trouble may be lack of advertising or exploitation on your part; that's for you to decide. The theatre-going public may be responsible; Universal will co-operate with you in every way to remedy it. Universal always has helped and always will help the exhibitor to the best of its ability.

"I am not predicting a boom. Conditions will have to readjust themselves gradually and intelligently if there is to be very lasting benefit. What I do maintain, however, is that things are getting better now and they will get better and better as optimism replaces pessimism.

"There's one thing you can do to bring back prosperity, normalcy—call it what you will. Start selling your patrons on the idea that the slump season is closed. They're the ones you have to reach before you can tell Old Man Depression where to head in. Get your theatre-goers sold on the thought that Gloom has been given the gate and the glad hand is being extended in hearty welcome to Good Times.

"Good-bye, Grouch—Howdy, Grin."

That Mr. Laemmle's message of cheer will have a marked effect on the industry, is apparent to those who know how sane a prophet he is. Whenever, in the past, he made a prediction, his prophecy has always materialized—later events have justified his promises.

in "REPUTATION"

UNIVERSAL WILL TAKE NO PART IN MOTION PICTURE DAY

R. H. Cochrane, Vice-president, Declares that the Universal is Entirely out of Sympathy with the Plan

R. H. COCHRANE, vice-president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Co., and in executive charge while Carl Laemmle is in Europe, issued on Monday the following statement:

"The Universal is decidedly not in favor of Motion Picture Day, nor will it have anything to do with that movement. Let's look the situation squarely in the face:

"In the first place, the exhibitors are not doing such a land office business that they can afford to give up a day's receipts or any part of a day's receipts for the Motion Picture Day Fund.

"In the second place, the distributors are not having such a rush of prosperity that they can give up one day's receipts for that purpose or any other.

"In the third place, from the very beginning we have opposed this movement because it was launched without due regard for its possible consequences. Imagine the effect among crooked politicians all over the United States if such a fund were built up. The very thought of so much money would make their mouths water. They would resort to the old trick of introducing adverse legislation in every legislature in the United States in the hope of being "bought off" with money from a rich national fund, such as the Picture Day Fund plan calls for.

"So far the moving picture industry has fought a clean fight against all sorts of adverse legislation. It has won more battles than it has lost, by long odds. The very fact that it has been a clean fight, without bribery or corruption, has permitted us to hold up our heads and look every would-be crooked politician squarely in the eye. It strikes us as the height of folly to have even the appearance of evil in our ranks, for it assuredly would look as though there were something rotten in our methods if we were to raise a huge fund to fight crookedness.

"What we need in all fights against fake reformers and politicians is the active help and influence of all exhibitors and their screens for the purpose of pitiless publicity. We do not know of any occasion when the exhibitors have refused such help when properly appealed to. Let the exhibitors and distributors and producers fight each other as much as they like on all other questions, but let them fight as a unit when it comes to questions of outside interference or oppression. Self-preservation will compel them to fight side by side whether they want to or not; and that is more than all the Motion Picture Day Funds in the world can do.

"The Universal is out of the movement completely and will take no cognizance of it in any way whatever."

Zoo Chief in Accident

A. C. Stecker, chief of the Universal City arena, tore his little finger off at the big knuckle when he jumped from the top of a training cage in an effort to land on a ferocious lion. His signet ring caught on a nail, throwing his entire weight on the finger. He was rushed to the Good Samaritan Hospital, where he is being cared for. The accident occurred in the filming of "Terror Trail," a serial in which Eileen Sedgwick is starred. Stecker's idea was to hurl himself on the lion to strangle it into submission in order to save the life of Miss Sedgwick, who was alone with him in the cage.

Thalberg Emulates "One-Armed Paper-Hanger"

The industry is in pretty tough shape. There are only nine companies working at Universal City. Four other directors are cutting recent productions and preparations are being made to begin work on new stories as soon as the big plant can catch up with the special attractions that are now being speeded to the screen. Irving G. Thalberg, general manager at the studio, is enjoying the slack time as it gives him part of every Sunday morning off and sometimes two evenings a month.

Dean's Gameness Praised

"She's as game as a United States Marine." That is what members of Priscilla Dean's Universal Expeditionary Force said of the famous star when the outfit rolled into Universal City after four gruelling weeks in British Columbia, where the principal scenes for "Conflict," Miss Dean's forthcoming Universal-Jewel feature, were directed by Stuart Paton. The traveling troupe is with Priscilla to a man. "She slept on the ground, ate the grub without squawking, worked like a Trojan and made everyone around her happy!" said one of the bunch. "Some star," said Irving G. Thalberg when he heard of it.

"NO WOMAN KNOWS" IS FINAL TITLE FOR NEW UNIVERSAL-JEWEL PICTURE

TOD BROWNING

"NO WOMAN KNOWS" is the title finally given to the Universal-Jewel production directed by Tod Browning from Edna Ferber's popular novel, "Fanny Herself." This decision by the heads of the Universal company marks the end of a two months' search for a suitable name for the super-production, during which Universal solicited advice from the exhibitors of the United States and Canada as to a proper name for the picturized novel.

It was no mean problem which Universal faced As "Fanny Herself" the novel has been read by more than two million readers, either when it was first published in the Cosmopolitan Magazine, or later, when it came out in book form. The book is conceded to be Miss Ferber's best work and one of the most gripping human interest stories ever written.

In opposition to the widespread recognition and popularity of the story under the name "Fanny Herself," the film company had to admit the unsuitable nature of the name as a picture title. It was this question which Universal put up to its exhibitors—whether the popularity of the book would sell the picture to the public or whether it needed a forceful title with exploitation possibilities.

Moving picture exhibitors, by an overwhelming majority, said: Give us a title with a punch. One that will draw, irrespective of the book's popularity. Accordingly, Mr. R. H. Cochrance, vice-president of Universal, and at the helm of the film organization in the absence of Mr. Carl Laemmle, who now is in Europe, issued a call for title suggestions.

Hundreds of good titles were turned down because it was felt they were not big enough for the picture, which is said to be powerful in theme, yet human in its appeal. When the title "No Woman Knows" was suggested, it immediately received unanimous acclaim. Its exploitation possibilities were especially noted, and plans already are under way, it is reported by Universal, to campaign the production to an extent even greater than the exploitation put behind "Outside the Law" and "Reputation," two recent Universal-Jewel productions.

More time is said to have been spent in selecting the cast for "No Woman Knows" than for any other Universal picture ever screened. Mabel Julienne Scott was chosen for the leading role. Her excellent work in such pictures as "Behold My Wife," "The Sea Wolf," "The Barrier" and "The Concert" influenced her engagement for the Browning production.

Stuart Holmes, recognized as one of the most accomplished "villains" on the screen, was engaged to play the leading "heavy" role. Holmes is rated as one of the most subtle "villains" in the film world, because of his ability to make his character likable to a certain extent, and therefore more natural than the standardized mustache-curling "villains."

E. A. Warrren, another favorite character actor, was added to the cast of "No Woman Knows." Warren is well known to photoplay-goers for his remarkable work as the bazaar keeper in "The Virgin of Stamboul," and as the lovable Chinese philosopher Chang Low in "Outside the Law." Others in the cast include Max Davidson, John Davidson, Grace Marvin, Duck Cummins, Earl Schenck, Snitz Edwards, Joseph Swickard, Danny Hoy, Eugenie Forde, Baby Bernice Radom and little Raymond Lee and Dorothy Dern.

To make sure that every detail of production would be accurate, Browning sent William Fildew, his chief cameraman, from Los Angeles to the Middle West to get atmospheric scenes in several small Wisconsin towns and to get interior shots of Chicago's largest department store. Among the shots Fildew was instructed to get was a snow-storm. He chased a snow-storm from Texas all the way to New York, in vain. A sudden warm spell followed the storm and melted the snow almost as fast as it fell. He finally had to go far into the north woods of Wisconsin before he got the snow shots he sought.

The story of "No Woman Knows" recounts the struggle of a girl who sacrifices herself to the whims of her relatives and who prejudices her future time after time for what she considers her obligation to members of her family. How she breaks away from them and takes a stand for her own self, and the unusual situations that develop as a result, form the basis for the intensely human plot and the stirring climaxes.

Those who watched the picture in production say that Miss Scott has gone far beyond her former screen success in the portrayal of the character "Fanny" in "No Woman Knows." Browning, the director, says he is certain the picture will create a sensation because of its absolute verity in recording human life. He characterizes it as the "Main Street" of filmdom.

The production is nearing completion at Universal City. The final scenes now are being cut and titled. The New York office of Universal expects a finished print of the picture within two weeks. The feature is scheduled for release early in September.

OHIO MAN BRAVES DEPRESSION IN OPENING NEW PLAY HOUSE

Features "Once to Every Woman" With Sure-fire Exploitation

J. D. KESSLER, manager of the New Alhambra Theatre, Canton, O., is one of the nerviest men in the film business. He recently opened up the New Alhambra, made over and renovated, right in the midst of the depression wave and hot weather. On top of this he featured "Once to Every Woman," a Universal-Jewel almost a year old, as his opening bill.

Full advantage taken of the exploitation advantages of the picture turned the trick for Kessler, however, and he found his doors crowded when they were thrown open. The impetus given to the picture-going public of Canton by his auspicious opening, has assured him continued crowds, despite the poor business reported by near-by theatres and towns.

Kessler was aided in his exploitation by Joseph H. Mayer, Exploitation Expert for Universal. They made their appeal both to young and old. For the youngsters, it was announced that admission would be by horseshoe for the first Sunday matinee. As a result more than 600 horseshoes were deposited in the lobby of the theatre. It was a good omen for the new house. This stunt got front page publicity in the Canton newspapers.

Kessler made his appeal to older folks through the human qualities of the picture. Following the idea of the photo-play, which is a story of mother love, the theatre manager announced that all mothers fifty years of age and over would be guests of the house during the first four days' run of the feature.

Kessler played to capacity busines on the opening performance, and at the night show he was forced to turn hundreds away.

CHURCH BROTHERHOOD IN CENSORSHIP FIGHT WITH SANE REFORM AS OBJECT

THE Emanuel Presbyterian Brotherhood, one of the most influential church organizations in the country, has swung into line behind Universal to straighten out the censorship tangle.

The startling action of Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, in inviting a member from every censor board in the country to be his guest at Universal City, met with the wholehearted approval of the brotherhood and brought from it an offer to cooperate.

John L. Byrnes, the widely-known consulting engineeer, and treasurer of the association, called upon Irving G. Thalberg, general manager at Universal City, and explained the purpose of his participation in the censorship campaign.

"We feel," he said, "that censorship should be a point of honor with producers, and that no good can be accomplished by investing a few politicians with authority to pass upon the morals of millions.

"Mr. Laemmle's idea in bringing these men to Universal City is one of the sanest steps toward the discontinuance of censorship that has ever been taken. Out of it will probably come legislation that will give theatre-goers the right to do their own thinking."

When the censors arrive, Thalberg will try to bring them in touch with the church brotherhood, for he, in common with other motion picture executives, realizes that the most effective opposition to unreasonable censorship comes from church people.

Big Dean Story Finished - Company Back From North

"CONFLICT," Priscilla Dean's Universal-Jewel production, has been completed.

The star and twenty members of her unit have just arrived at Universal City from British Columbia, where Stuart Paton directed the most important sequences for the screen narrative.

"Conflict" will go to the screen as the most interesting production of the year in point of story, cast and locale.

Thousands are now reading the story in the Red Book Magazine as it appears serially from the pen of Clarence Buddington Kelland, and the concluding installment will approximate the release of the picture.

From Kelland's story, Lucien Hubbard, scenario editor at Universal City, assigned George C. Hull to prepare a continuity that would adhere to the original theme, yet heighten the intensity of the drama to correspond with Miss Dean's unusual power of emotional interpretation.

Then Stuart Paton got together a cast that will rebound to the box office. Herbert Rawlinson, a well-known star, was selected for the leading masculine role opposite the star, while such popular players as Hector Sarno, Edward Connelly, Martha Mattox, L. C. Shumway, Sam Allen, Capt. C. E. Anderson, Milton Brown and Bill Gillis, were added as the story progressed.

After the studio sequence had been filmed, the company entrained for British Columbia, where the logging industry, the atmospheric background of the story, was accurately recorded.

What Chance Has Novice In Motion Pictures?

Casting Head Tells How Aspirants Are Chosen

"WHAT qualities do you look for in persons applying for work in motion pictures?"

The question was put to Fred Datig, casting director at Universal City, the largest producing studio in the realms of the silent drama.

"Broadly speaking," replied Mr. Datig, "it is not in my province to look for new qualities or new talent. There are several thousand experienced, capable players registered in my office, covering every type and temperament required in making pictures. I have met all of them personally and have seen them all play various parts in different photodramas. A full description of each is card-indexed in my files, while I have a mental picture of each in many different roles.

"When a director brings me a manuscript of a story to be cast, I run over the list of available actors in my mind and can visualize some player as ideal for every character in the play. After asking a number of these actors out to the studio, where we talk about salary, wardrobe and other details, in some instances asking the advice of the director or star, we select the cast of principals," Mr. Datig continued.

"But what chance has a newcomer in motion pictures, and what qualities recommend them for consideration?" the questioner queried of Director Datig.

"It is in the minor role, or even as an 'extra' that new faces make their appearance before the camera. Even for these humble roles," said Mr. Datig, "there are thousands of persons registered in every studio. But now and then some unusually pretty face or some striking personality will compel the attention of the casting director, and the possessor is given a chance to appear in a picture. As the art of the screen is primarily visual, it is our intention first to please the eye. If the applicant is a woman, good looks are the first requisite; but in the long run personality and intelligence are the qualities which will win success. To this must be added ambition and the willingness to undergo the hardships of the game. From my years of experience in interviewing applicants for the screen I can easily determine whether a girl is earnest and sincere or attracted to the studio by the glamor of the profession. The later type will assure you it is her lifelong ambition to become an actress, but I can generally detect the vanity of the applicant. She may be given a chance to do atmospheric or purely decorative work, but will seldom rise above that station. The person who is really sincere and ambitious will soon make an impression on the film, and if he or she possesses a degree of talent, is in line for promotion.

"We are always looking for unique personalities. A sparkling eye, a sensitive mouth, a distinctive carriage, an individual way of holding the head or unusually expressive features will always interest the casting director, and he will give the applicant an opportunity, even as an 'extra' or in a very minor part, to discover any latent possibilities.

"Theoretically," continued Mr. Datig, "motion picture producers are always looking for new faces and for material for future stars. But these cannot be discovered in the beginner. We must wait until an actor displays unusual talent in some particular role. For instance, Priscilla Dean played at Universal for over a year before she found her opportunity. In 'Even as You and I' she was given the role of a 'baby vamp' and displayed the dynamic personality which has since made her famous and is so apparent in 'Reputation' and 'Conflict.' Edith Roberts played in comedies for a long time until a two-reeler, 'The Baby Bandit,' revealed that unusual dramatic ability which has since endeared her to the public and which is one of the salient features in 'Opened Shutters.' Gladys Walton, a mere child, played an ingenue role in a Lyons and Moran comedy with such charm and ingenuousness that she was soon elevated to stellar prominence.

"To sum up the matter," concluded the casting director, "the qualities we look for in an applicant are youth, good looks, personality, brains and ambition. Some of these qualities are obvious, others may be perceived by the experienced director and that elusive quality, personality, must be guessed at and finally left to the verdict of the public."

EVERYBODY wants to be a motion picture star. This story tells what qualifications an applicant must have before being given an opportunity to appear on the screen. Get your editor to run this story in his newspaper—he will immediately see how universal its appeal will be to his readers. After he has inserted it in his newspaper, cut out and frame it in your lobby where it will attract the attention of all your patrons and have a marked effect on your box-office when you next present any of the features starring those actresses mentioned in the article.

"Who's Who On Screen" Stunt Wins In Cleveland For "Short Skirts"

CHALLENGE a man's knowledge and you get his interest. That's why Edison's questionnaire became so widely discussed. That is why Thomas G. Carroll, who runs the Standard Theatre, Cleveland, O., reaped so much benefit in publicity and patronage in a stunt he recently used in connection with the showing of "Short Skirts," a Gladys Walton feature, during a Gala Week program.

Carroll obtained photographs of seventeen Universal stars and players, some of them better known than others. He mounted all on a big frame and numbered each photograph. Among the stars were Priscilla Dean, Harry Carey, Erich von Stroheim, Frank Mayo, Gladys Walton, Hoot Gibson, Miss du Pont, Eddie Polo, and others.

HOW MANY UNIVERSAL ACTORS DO YOU KNOW?

First Prize—This set of photos.

Second Prize—A season pass.

Third Prize—Ten pairs of tickets.

Ballots were handed out and each person receiving one was invited to write down the names corresponding to the numbers on the photos. The stunt created great interest among the patrons of the theatre, and built up the box office receipts for the week to a considerable extent.

Mis-spelled Word Contest Proves Good Exploitation

AN ingenious adaptation of the mis-spelled word contest to moving picture exploitation is afforded by the stunt recently put over by Verner Hicks of the Family Theatre, Marion, Ill., in his exploitation of "Reputation," the Universal-Jewel production starring Priscilla Dean.

Hicks bought four full pages from the Marion Daily Republican, and then divided the space among the merchants of the town. He had no trouble in getting them to come in with him on the plan.

On each day, for the four days immediately preceding the showing of "Reputation," he used a page ad made up of merchant ads built around the word Reputation. His own ad was on the page, as was a description of the contest. In some of the ads words had been intentionally mis-spelled. The missing letters, properly arranged, spelled a word. Each reader answering correctly received a pass.

The newspaper co-operated wholeheartedly with Hicks in putting this stunt over. Front page spread stories were used during the four days and much publicity given to the prize winners and to the picture.

This stunt was put over by Hicks without any cost to himself, except the time involved. The advertising space leased to the various merchants paid for the space devoted in the ad pages to Hicks' own ad concerning "Reputation."

My Dear Mr. Smith:

Your Jewel Production, "Outside the Law," starring Priscilla Dean, which played the above theatre the week of July 25th, was a sure knock-out and a box-office winner.

Story, action and photography were great and the praises of the picture were on the tongues of every man, woman and child in Wilmington.

The acting of Priscilla Dean, Lon Chaney, Wheeler Oakman and, in fact, the entire cast could not be beat.

A picture that can play to capacity from 11 A. M. to 11 P. M. daily for six days in weather that reached the highest temperature since 1876, has got to be some picture. "Outside the Law" did it. Give us another picture like this soon.

Very truly yours,

A Few Unsolicited Testimonials From Universal Exhibitors

Gentlemen:

I want to thank you for the splendid service we have received from Universal. In the opening of a new house so much depends upon first impressions that it is very essential that the service (and by service I mean, condition of film, subject and delivery of show on time), be up to standard.

There is not the slightest criticism that I can make of Universal Service, such subjects as have been booked us to date have been very satisfactory; in fact, to be perfectly frank, your "SOCIETY SECRETS" secured more favorable comments than any feature we have shown to date. The audience, the last judge of the worth of a picture, proclaimed it "the best feature ever shown in Dansville."

The "MAN TAMER," which we ran during our opening week, is another splendid picture and secured a very liberal patronage, despite the unfavorable weather and other conditions. We are making money with Universal productions and are not afraid to tell you so, and that goes for all the features we have run to date—not just one or two.

Very truly yours,
STAR THEATRE,
W. H. Wagner, Mgr.

Dear Sirs:

Edith Roberts in "THE FIRE CAT" cannot be surpassed for finished excellence in plot and filming by any film company under any name or reputation. The strange animals, the religious procession, the way one phase of the story glided into another, the close-ups—by the way Miss Roberts is a striking beauty—and act, Oh! Boy!—make "THE FIRE CAT" a really big picture. Few people have ever seen a real volcano erupting, or seen a real earthquake, but it's all right in "THE FIRE CAT" and this feature alone makes the picture worth while.

We are glad to say this is entirely unsolicited. Take Universal productions straight through and tie up to them and they will draw the crowds and send them away satisfied as well as anything on the market.

We want at this time to extend our sincere thanks for the co-operation and the many courtesies you, as well as your capable staff, have always extended to us.

Wishing you and Universal unbounded success, we are,

Respectfully,

Gentlemen;

We played your super-production, "Outside the Law," at our Spruce Theatre for three days, beginning Monday, June 6th, and feel it an obligation on our part to advise you of the success we enjoyed during its engagement.

We are putting it very mildly when we tell you that it broke all records for attendance and receipts and the demonstration and praise accorded it by our patrons was such as has never been equaled.

For a real box-office attraction I have no hesitancy in advising my brother exhibitors to book this one. It unquestionably will do the same for you as it did for us.

Gentlemen:

At this time I wish to express my opinion about "Outside the Law," which I showed last Friday and Saturday nights. I wish to say in my opinion it is the best production that Priscilla Dean ever produced, also the best that Universal has ever released, and furthermore I consider it the best picture I have shown since I've been in the show business.

It went over big here and proved to be a wonderful picture, as it pleased my patrons 100 per cent.

No exhibitor needs to be afraid to book a picture like that, and after he has booked it, to spread a little salve, as the picture will back anything he can say.

Give us more of this kind; they are the ones that put the "B" in business.

Universal Buys Big Story as Priscilla Dean Vehicle

UNIVERSAL has purchased "Wild Honey," a story by Cynthia Stockley, as Priscilla Dean's next Universal-Jewel starring vehicle.

Lucien Hubbard, scenario editor at Universal City, is writing the continuity so as to have the script ready when the star has finished "Conflict," the super-feature which is now being filmed in the British Columbia woods under the direction of Stuart Paton.

The cast and the director for "Wild Honey" have not yet been considered, but Irving G. Thalberg, general manager at Universal City, has ordered elaborate production for the screen narrative, and it is anticipated that the work will go to the screen as one of the most colorful stories ever screened. The title, "Wild Honey," will be changed.

In theme, "Wild Honey" deals with a lovely young girl in the Transvaal, and it is rich in local color. The writer, Cynthia Stockley, has contributed many splendid stories of South Africa to literature, among them "The Poppy," and she knows her field thoroughly.

Production on "Wild Honey" will probably start within a few weeks, closely following the completion of "Conflict." The last-named story is nearing the screen. It was originally written as a Red Book magazine serial by Clarence Buddington Kelland and is being given an unusually elaborate screen interpretation with Stuart Paton directing and Herbert Rawlinson in the leading masculine role. "Wild Honey," Universal officials say, will give Miss Dean an unexcelled opportunity to display her dynamic personality and protean genius.

"THE RAGE OF PARIS," Miss du Pont's first starring vehicle for Universal has been completed at Universal City under the direction of Jack Conway.

The action of the piece centers about the romantic incidents in the life of a young American girl, whose bizarre dancing has taken Paris by storm. Adroitly woven into this kaleidoscopic panorama of Parisian life is a love story of tenderest interest.

Universal has spared no expense to make this initial starring vehicle of Miss du Pont's a dramatic and photographic triumph. Unusual and startling lighting effects are said to have been achieved by Conway and Harry Vallejo, his cameraman.

A smoothly blending supporting cast of note has been assembled for the production. Opposite the new star is Jack Perrin, a popular young leading man. Others in the cast are Ramsey Wallace, Leo White, Eve Southern, Mathilde Brundage, J. J. Lance, Elinor Hancock and Freeman Wood.

A wardrobe of elaborate costumes, such as is seldom assembled by one star, is worn by Miss du Pont in this production. An exotic dancing dress of great value, made of red, white and green peacock feathers fastened by strings of pearls, is worn by Miss du Pont and will create a sensation, it is promised. Miss du Pont's rise to stardom came as a result of her work in "Foolish Wives."

Universal Beats Pathe--Loses to Fox Team

UNIVERSAL'S ball team suffered its first reverse at the hands of the Fox nine, 11-10, in the second game of a double header. The first contest was handily won from Pathe, 13-0, in seven innings.

The defeat at the hands of the Fox aggregation puts Universal in second place for the first time this season, and mars the U's record of "no defeats." The standing of Universal, however, has not been officially determined as yet, as the League is taking action on a protest against the Fox nine lodged by the Universal team.

This protest alleges the use by the Fox team of a player not a bona-fide employee of the organization. Should the investigation prove the allegations in the protest to be based on fact, the offending team may be expelled from the M. P. B. B. League.

STANDING OF THE LEAGUE

Fox	2*	0	1.000
Universal	4	1*	.800
First National.	3	1	.750
Paramount ...	2	3	.400

Goldwyn	1	3	.250
Pathe	0	3	.000
Hodkinson...(withdrawn)			.000

*Game between Fox and Universal protested by latter on charge of employment of "ringers" by Fox.

Universal's next game is with First National. First National has one of the best-balanced teams in the League and an interesting contest is looked for. Both Universal and First National have won all but one of their games and a defeat for either team will ruin that nine's chances for the championship cup.

Thus far Universal has scored victories against the Vitagraph, Paramount, Goldwyn and Pathe teams.

THE STORY

Sylvia Lacey is the daughter of Sam Lacey, a dabbler in art, making a precarious living. Sylvia has inherited his artistic tendencies. Almost her only friend is Nat, who does a juggling act on the small time, and wishes to marry her.

Sam Lacey came of straight-laced New England stock. Sam's sister is Martha Lacey, a prim-lipped old maid. Sam's wife was the sister of old Judge Calvin Trent, an equally hardened bachelor. Curiously enough Judge Trent once proposed marriage to Martha Lacey. That was twenty-five years ago. She turned him down. "If I had married him," says Martha to herself. "Thank God, she didn't marry me!" the judge congratulates himself.

Judge Trent and Martha are jarred by the news that Sam has died and that his daughter is on the way East to live with Martha.

So Sylvia waits for the uncle whose picture she had been taught to kiss each night, and the aunt, who, she pictures, must be a kindly, motherly woman. But instead, as she waits, she overhears a spare, vinegary woman and a young man indicate that her arrival is most unwelcome. And then they begin talking of her father, and how he had mistreated her mother.

"It's a lie!" she cries, and leaps up to face them. She tells them to go.

Sylvia flees to her room, refusing to have anything to do with either of them. But outside the hotel John Dunham remembers an errand, leaves Miss Lacey and goes to the girl's room, where he finds her in despair.

Edith Roberts in "Opened Shutters"

When Martha and John face Judge Trent there ensues an uncomfortable half-hour. Sylvia is sent to Jacob Johnson, known as "Thinkright," through his favorite saying that right thinking would make anything come out right.

Sylvia finds herself at the Tide Mill farm, bitter in heart against her relatives, rather reluctant even to accept the hospitality of "Thinkright" despite his kindness and the persuasiveness of his precepts. It is called the Tide Mill Farm because just at the edge of the little harbor stands an old tide mill with close shuttered windows, which seems to typify the hearts of those to whom Sylvia has gone so trustfully—close shuttered against love and light.

Sylvia has fallen in love with John, but believes he and Edna, a wealthy summer visitor, are sweethearts.

That night Sylvia goes out on the lake in a tiny skiff in a vain attempt to forget her sorrow at not wining John's love. A terrific storm comes up suddenly and Sylvia, at the mercy of the elements, loses her oars. A thunder-bolt strikes near the boat and, in her terror, Sylvia overturns the skiff.

John has missed Sylvia. The family make inquiries and learn she is out in the storm. John sets out to find her, but cannot trace her in the darkness. As he searches the shore in a frenzy a flash of lightning reveals the overturned boat with Sylvia desperately clinging to its keel.

John effects a heroic rescue and carries Sylvia back to the house. He suddenly realizes he cares for Sylvia and she confesses her love for him.

Sylvia finds that "Thinkright" has preached a true gospel—a new outlook on life which brings her love and happiness and throws wide the shutters which had kept in shadow the souls of those whose restricted lives gave little opportunity for light and joy to enter.

MOVIE ACTOR SIGNS CONTRACT AS HE "TREADS WATER" IN SURF

THE story of "Opened Shutters," now playing at the .... Theatre with Edith Roberts in the starring role, called for a young leading man who looks as though he might have just stepped from the cover of a magazine. With that rather difficult order, William Worthington, the director, searched Southern California and interviewed scores of young leading men. Then he thought of Edward Burns and sent a flying squadron of assistants to visit every place where a husky young fellow might hang out between pictures. An assistant found the dashing young Burns rolling in the surf half a mile off the beach at Santa Monica and negotiated with him from a launch.

"I can't think of anything I'd rather do than to support Edith Roberts in a Universal production," said Burns. "Let's go."

As a result Edward Burns has added another successful production to the list of photodramas in which he has played important roles. In "Opened Shutters" he appears as John Dunham, a young New England business man who falls in love with the girl of the story and wins her only after an amazing series of adventures.

Edward Burns was born in Philadelphia and was educated to be a politician. He was well versed in the art of awarding municipal paving contracts, and would probably now be wearing the speckled vest of an alderman if an idea that he would like to be an actor had not permeated his skull. As it was, he went to New York, persuaded a film magnate that he could act and started out on the road to screen fame, with appearances in support of practically every big feminine star.

Playgoers who have seen "Opened Shutters" at the .... Theatre are united in the belief that Director Worthington turned a neat trick when he scooped Edward Burns out of his Pacific bath-tub to play opposite the vivacious Edith Roberts in one of the best pictures of the year.

IS the English type of feminine more alluring than the American? Artists have never been able to agree on the question, but local playgoers may form their own interesting conclusions after a visit to the .... Theatre, where Edith Roberts is starring in her latest Universal photodrama, "Opened Shutters."

Supporting Miss Roberts is Nola Luxford, a young Australian girl who is said by artists to be the perfect type of the British beauty. Miss Luxford is a striking blonde with hair like spun gold and the typically perfect pink-and-white complexion common to British girls.

In "Opened Shutters" Miss Luxford appears as a Boston society girl who spends her summers in a New England village and strangely influences the highly dramatic trend of the story.

Nola Luxford was born in London but accompanied her parents to Australia when she was a little girl. Her father was an officer in command of Colonial troops and she was brought up in the social whirl of the military set. She attended a private school and graduated just as the first contingent of Anzacs left for the front. Making her first public stage appearance at a benefit for the initial group of wounded to be sent back to Australia, she attained a phenomenal popularity on the Australian stage and decided to make the drama her life-work. So successful was she abroad that she decided to go to Southern California, where she is now a prominent member of the colony of film notables.

Work with Carmel Myers in "The Mad Marriage," one of the Universal star's recent successes, gave her the entre to Universal City, which resulted in her being selected for the important role of "Edna Derwent," the Boston heiress of "Opened Shutters."

Regarding the Star of "Opened Shutters"

NOT so many years ago when Edith Roberts was twelve or thirteen years old and appearing on the vaudeville stage in songs, dances and imitations, her favorite movie stars were Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran. She was appearing on a vaudeville circuit which had contracted to run the Lyons & Moran comedies at the close of the bill, and twice a day Edith would look at the comedy pair enacting some one-reel farce. Finally she felt as if she knew them both, and this long distance acquaintance first gave her the idea of going in pictures.

When Miss Roberts was thirteen years old she was no smaller than she is today, and she induced her mother to take her to California to try her luck on the screen. Naturally the first studio she visited was Universal City, where Lyons and Moran were producing their comedies. Little Edith confided her ambitions to Eddie and Lee, and they soon gave her an opportunity to play small parts in their productions. Her beauty, charm and acting skill soon bore fruit, and before she was fifteen years old she was leading lady for Lyons & Moran, following in the footsteps of Priscilla Dean, Juanita Hansen, Louise Glaum, Billy Rhodes and other well-known screen players who had their first big chance in the Eddie and Lee two-reel mirth-producing films.

For the past two years Edith Roberts has been one of the most popular Universal stars, appearing in a wide variety of roles. A little over a year ago she scored a tremendous success in "Lasca," in which she played a fiery little Mexican girl, and since then she has appeared in many roles of that type. But once in a while the public likes to see her as herself—as a sweet young American girl—and that is the sort of role she portrays in her latest Universal feature, "Opened Shutters," an appealing narrative of love and life, tears and laughter in New England. "Opened Shutters," through the medium of a most interesting story, preaches the gospel of right thinking, and Edith Roberts, the charming Universal star who plays the featured role in this film drama, has been an ardent disciple of this philosophy all her life.

Edith Roberts, Universal Star, In "Opened Shutters."

Edith Roberts goes through life wearing a pair of rose-colored spectacles, and as a result she never sees any phase of existence in other but a roseate hue. According to her mother, who is her constant companion, Edith is the original "glad child." As a youngster, when she was singing and dancing on the vaudeville stage, she was often compelled to undergo comparative hardships, such as staying up half the night to catch an early train, giving extra performances on holidays and special occasions. But she never complained and met every situation with a smile. At school she became a general favorite by her happy disposition and her refusal to see the faults of her playmates. When she came to Universal City about five years ago, a mere child, she won the favorable attention of Lyons and Moran, who were producing comedies, by her sunshiny expression and her ineradicable dimples, and was given a part in their production. Soon her glad smile had its effect on the theatre-going public, and people began to make inquiries about the clever young girl. Before long, Edith Roberts, still wearing short dresses, was playing leading roles in comedies, and shortly after that she was given important roles in dramatic productions.

For the past two years Miss Roberts has been a full-fledged star on the Universal program, and her popularity has increased with every new release. During the past years she has appeared in some unusual film successes.

"Salt" Mine, Steal Deed ---Cowboy Thwarts Plot

"BOTH BARRELS"

Featuring JACK PERRIN

BART MATHEWS sells stock in a worthless gold mine to citizens of the town of Searchlight. These citizens discover they have been swindled and threaten Bart with death unless he refunds their money. In order to do this, Bart negotiates the sale of the mine with Jack Harrington, a cowboy.

While in a restaurant he rescues Miriam Lane from insult at the hands of Jake Fisher, a tool of Mathews. Jake is about to revenge himself by shooting Jack in the back, when Bart prevents him and says he doesn't want the cowboy shot until he has sold him the mine.

Then Bart enters and talks over the deal with Jack. Miriam, whose invalid mother has invested her all in the mine, overhears the conversation and tries to warn Jack that the mine is worthless.

He and Jack go to the mine which has already been "salted" by Jake. Miriam decides to warn Jack that the mine has been "salted" but is too late to prevent him signing the papers. Jack starts to work the mine.

He plans to kill Bart. He accuses Miriam of having permitted him to invest and lose his money in the mine when she should have warned him, and then he sarcastically gives her the deed to the mine as a present for her faithlessness.

The Chink discovers black gold nuggets in the mine. He starts for town to tell Jack of his discovery, but is waylaid by Jake, who knocks him unconscious and takes the nuggets to Bart.

Bart knowing now the mine is valuable plans to regain it. When Jack demands his money back, Bart smilingly asks him for the deed to the mine. Jack tells him he gave it to the girl. Bart then covers him with a gun, ties him, and he and Jake go to the restaurant.

There they take the deed by force from Miriam, when Jack, who has escaped from the office, enters the room. He battles and regains the deed.

"TERROR TRAIL"

Episode 6

"The Ship of Surprise"

ELAINE and Bruce cross the bridge before the explosion and miss the full force of it. They speed on to Hunch's. Hunch and the rest of the gang see them get into their car and follow. Elaine and Bruce reach Hunch's and are about to enter when they see the gang coming. They hide. The gang enters; all but the chauffeur. Hunch and Holmes start to quarrel. Outside, Elaine and Bruce capture the chauffeur and question him about the formula. Hunch and Holmes fight. Hunch summons help. Holmes, in order to escape, is forced to jump from a wondow. Elaine and Bruce also capture him and get one part of the formula.

Hunch fears the treachery of his own gang, so he plans to go to Myopia with the two parts of the formula he now has.

Hunch is on the boat when Elaine comes aboard. He believes her to be Vera Vernon of his gang and thinks she has followed to trick him. Bruce has also come aboard, disguised. Hunch asks Elaine to his cabin. There he fiercely denounces her, accusing her of following him to rob him of the formula. Adopting desperate measures, Elaine tells him she has followed him because she loves him. Hunch believes her and shows her where he has hidden the formula. Bruce looks into the cabin to see what appears a real love scene between Elaine and Hunch. Elaine later meets Bruce and explains her motives for what she did, easily satisfying him. Hunch sees her talking with Bruce and is on guard again.

Elaine and Bruce plan to search Hunch's cabin. She goes alone and is caught by Hunch. Bruce follows her and is also captured. All are in the cabin, when a fire accidentally breaks out down the corridor from them. They are all trapped in the cabin with no means of escape and with the fire coming toward them.

JAZZ JAIL-BIRDS AROUSE TOWN

HERRIN, ILL., is a small city, but it has big ideas when it comes to the appreciation of wide-awake showmanship, such as is exhibited by John Marlow of the Hippodrome, one of the prettiest little show houses in the State.

Marlow recently put across a novel and amusing stunt for the exploitation of "Outside the Law," which attracted the attention of every man, woman and child in the community.

He obtained a jazz band of several pieces. Then he had a cage built on the body of a three-ton truck. In the cage, in convict's clothes, he placed the drummer of the band. On the seat with the driver was the cornetist, dressed as a cop, and at the back of the truck, in prison keeper's garb, was another member of the band.

This combination of jazz and justice covered every street highway and byway of Herrin and awoke echoes which had slumbered since P. T. Barnum died. Result: All box-office records for the Hippodrome were smashed to smithereens during the showing of the Priscilla Dean masterpiece.

Concerning his success with the film, Marlow reports:

"While I knew 'Outside the Law' was a great picture, I also knew that a killing could be made with it if it were supported in a big way. This I decided on, and I must say that the exploitation done for it added at least fifty per cent to my receipts. It went over with a smash, playing to the limit of my capacity during its run. In fact ,it resulted in the biggest actual money-maker that my records show."

"EVERY FAN HIS OWN REVIEWER" STUNT PULLS THEM IN FOR "REPUTATION"

W. L. HILL, Universal exploitation expert in the Chicago territory, helped the Atlantic Theatre, Chicago, with its showing of "Reputation" by a stunt which created widespread interest among the theatre's patrons.

It was a "write your own criticism" stunt. The theatre circulated mimeograph sheets among its patrons and to its mailing list, announcing that the one sending in the best 250 word review of the picture would receive remunerative recognition. A sample of the style of Mae Tinee, the reviewer for the Chicago Tribune, in reviewing "Temptation," was reproduced on the throw-away.

The stunt was a winner for the box office, as it took advantage of the well-known fact that nine out of ten picture playgoers also consider that they can write reviews and scenarios.

Several prizes were given out, among them was a cash prize and a subscription to a leading motion picture magazine.

GOOD FRONT FOR "THUNDER ISLAND" PULLS CROWDS TO MONTREAL HOUSE

THE Holman Theatre, Montreal, Can., is a consistent booster for attractive lobby displays. The management of that theatre reported that the box office shows as high as 35 per cent increase on productions which are elaborately ballyhooed by an attractive front to the theatre.

An example of the pains which are taken to attract patrons into the Holman is demonstrated by the following description of the lobby arranged by W. J. Stewart, the home publicity man, for "Thunder Island," an Edith Roberts feature, and "Blue Sunday," a Lyons-Moran Universal-Jewel comedy:

The entrance of the theatre was decorated with painted flats to represent the prow of a steamship. Red and green (port and starboard) lights were strung up and operated by flashing incandescents. A large anchor and a life buoy were placed in the lobby and the cashier and doorman were garbed in sailor costumes.

This display stopped the passersby. They stayed to read the humorous proclamations placarded for "Blue Sunday." These were in the form of comic "blue law" precepts, describing what might happen to the unsuspecting citizen who kissed his wife, etc. ,etc., on Sunday.

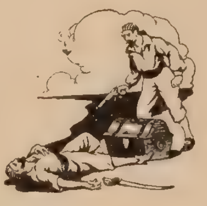
Episode 13

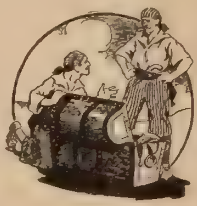
"The Cipher Key"

DOLORES rushes out of the house and releases the Mystery Woman in time to see Jack hurled over a steep cliff by Satan's men. Satan upbraids his men for doing away with Merton before the parchment had been taken from him; two men are dispatched to bring him back and search him for the valuable script.



As the pair start down by a side path to get Merton, Dolores and the Mystery Woman, watching Jack from a ledge on the cliff, see Jack, who is feigning unconsciousness, at the cliff's base, stealthily hide the parchment under a rock upon which he is lying. Satan's men come and carry Jack to the top of the cliff where he is searched for the parchment without success.

Satan orders Merton taken to a deserted cabin on the road to Crystal Lake. Still in an apparent state of coma, Merton is thrown on the floor and Satan and his men stand by to watch him and wait for him to regain consciousness. An hour passes and still Merton does not reveal the fact that he is "playing 'possum." After another hour of waiting, Satan says they will go out and look for the parchment. Jack overhears, and when the gang has departed, jumps to his feet to reach the parchment's cache before the bandit does. Satan's remark, however, was only a ruse to make Jack reveal his hand, and directly Merton sets foot outside the cabin he is captured by Satan and brought back.



Merton is strung up by the wrists and is threatened with thirty lashes of the "cat-o'-nine-tails." He refuses to divulge the hiding-place of the parchment. The many-tailed whip is poised, ready to leave its cruel welts across Merton's face.

"GOLFING"

Featuring Brownie and Baby Peggy

The head of the family is anxious to learn golf—and so is Baby. Father calls in A. Niblik, expert golfer, and asks for a few lessons at home. The parlor is transformed into a golf course, and father goes to it in his endeavor to wreck the house. Brownie plays the part of a caddy—and he and Baby make every effort to play the game according to rules.

After a few lessons, in which the house becomes the duplicate of a dumping-ground, father goes to a real links with Baby and Brownie. There father shows his prowess as a wonderful misser of golf balls. Baby, tiring of golfing, switches to pool and it is not long before she covers the nineteenth hole, with the aid of Brownie.

While father is still playing golf Baby is kidnapped by a young gypsy, and taken to the gypsy camp. Mother and father, missing their baby, begin looking for her. Brownie, who has endeavored to go to Baby's rescue, has been tied to a pole. Mother and father are told by the gypsies that Baby is down by the river, and they immediately set out to find her. About this time, Brownie gets loose—and digging up the ground around the tent in which Baby is a prisoner, helps Baby to a nearby horse. Brownie puts a ladder against the horse, helps Baby up and follows after her. He leads the horse to mother and father—and the happy family is again united, thanks to Brownie.

Are We Right?

Does the Super-Feature Belong, in the Legitimate Theatre or the Picture Palace? The Solution is Up to the Exhibitor, Not to the Producer--Says R. H. Cochrane

"HOW are we to take care of the big pictures, encourage them, keep them within the industry?" This question was recently asked R. H. Cochrane, Vice-president of Universal, by the editor of one of the weekly trade-papers. In a comprehensive survey of the problem, Mr. Cochrane, acknowledging the debt owed exhibitors by producers, indicates the perplexing difficulties which beset the manufacturer and distributor. He says:

"Every time we have released a big picture directly to exhibitors, without a long run, we have suffered to the extent of many thousands of dollars. On the other hand, every time we have exploited a big picture with a real run in a legitimate theatre, we have found it easier to sell whether it had more or less merit than the picture which had no run.

IMPORTANT!

Exhibitors wishing to obtain an unfolded copy of the beautiful colored insert which appeared in a recent number of THE MOVING PICTURE WEEKLY may obtain one, FREE, upon applying to their nearest Universal Exchange. When framed, this insert is a distinct addition to any theatre lobby or box-office.

"Maybe the exhibitor finds the same thing is true. Maybe he finds it easier to pack his house with a picture which has had a run. If that is so, he is probably willing to pay more for it, because he feels it is worth more. That being the case, there isn't any problem to solve.

"Running the picture in the legitimate house undoubtedly gives a longer run than most of the theatres see fit to give. There is no room for doubt that this has an effect on the moving picture theatres. If we run a big picture only a week in a regular picture house, the theatres we are trying to sell our goods to do not consider this a real run. Most of them tell us the one week run has not created a big public interest in the picture; in other words, has not really exploited it.

"The result is they are not willing to pay us what we figure we must get in order to get back our cost and a reasonable profit. But if we run the picture a long time with much advertising in a legitimate house, they seem willing to pay more for the attraction when it comes to their houses. This leads to the conclusion that it is the mental viewpoint of the average picture house owner which forces the producer to use a fairly long run in a legitimate theatre.

"That's the good side of the legitimate theatre run from the producer's angle. Now for the bad:

"The long run ties up the producer's money for a long time. He can't give play dates on his big picture in the territory where he is exploiting it until the long run is ended. Therefore, if he is exploiting many big pictures in many centers and is having long runs in each case, a tremendous lot of his capital is idle. In these days this is a serious matter; but it is not so serious as having to sell the picture without profit, as is often the case when a big picture is offered to the average picture theatre without a long run to give it prestige.

"The solution is not in the producer's hands. It is in the exhibitor's. That is why, in justice to the exhibitor, we have decided not to road-show 'Foolish Wives.' Erich von Stroheim's forthcoming Universal-Jewel."

Carl Laemmle Makes Motion Picture History

Censors as Guests of Carl Laemmle, President of Universal, As They Appeared Before the Famous Monte Carlo Set Used in "Foolish Wives," Erich von Stroheim's Million-dollar Super-production.

WHAT good did the censors' visit to Universal City do? Now that the shouting and the tumult have subsided and the photodramatic pilgrims have entrained for home, the question is being given searching analysis in the motion picture industry. That Carl Laemmle has won a history making victory for the entire motion picture industry is the concensus of opinion. The idea originated with Carl Laemmle early in June. When he was called suddenly to Europe he entrusted R. H. Cochrane, vice-president of Universal, and Harry M. Berman, general sales manager, with the actual fulfillment of the plan.

The entire membership of every state board, members of various municipal boards and censors from various parts of Canada, were invited to go to Universal City as the personal guests of Carl Laemmle.

Arriving in Los Angeles Sunday, August 14th, the delegates started a week of activity varying in import from pleasure to hard and conscientious work.

Perhaps the most interesting phase of their visit was the world's premiere preview of "Foolish Wives," the super-film upon which Universal has spent more than a million dollars and more than a year's time. Because of the colorful continental setting of the story, the wide divergence from the usual theme of photodramas and the tremendous amount of notoriety which has accompanied its filming, Universal sought the frank and unprejudiced opinion of various censors.

The preview of the production was held Thursday night at the Beverly Hills Hotel, the world famous hostelry near Universal City. The showing lasted from 9 P. M. until 3.30 on the following morning. The censors watched 24 reels projected, only a portion of the 300,000 feet of film which went through the camera, under the direction of Erich von Stroheim. The story was in approximate continuity. At the end of the screening, the censors commented spontaneously upon the magnificence of the production, describing it as an artistic triumph worthy to be known as Carl Laemmle's greatest achievement.

Universal is not unaware that changes will have to be made to give the production an equal appeal in all parts of the country, but the changes suggested by the visiting censors are of an unimportant nature and will be made without interfering with the trend of the story. The wealth of material at hand in actual footage makes it easy to comply with any suggestions without detracting from the artistry, the smashing drama and the startling realism.

The week at Universal City was acknowledged to be the greatest event in the lives of most of the visitors. Surf bathing in the opalescent spray of the Pacific, meetings with other producers at elaborate luncheons, intimate contact with Universal stars at work and at play, a day on Harry Carey's ranch, a magnificent banquet at the famous Sunset Inn, and a week-end at Catalina Island, were some of the entertainment features provided by Irving G. Thalberg, general manager at Universal City, and his associates.

The expedition was composed of Harry L. Knapp, J. A. Barrier, Penn.; Dr. George Heller, Maryland; Mrs. J. M. Miller, Mrs. K. L. Short, Kansas; Henry Goldman, Kansas City, Mo.; John M. Casey, Boston; W. T. Willis, Chicago; W. D. McGuire, National Board of Review; A. S. Hamilton, Miss V. Hammil, Canada; Walter Hepburn, Jas. A. Smith, British Columbia; Mrs. I. G. Burbeck, Alberta, Canada.

Censors Approve "Foolish Wives"

Very Few Suggestions Made for Elimination or Changes Either in Scenes or Subtitles by Boards in Conference

Harry Knapp says "Consensus of Opinion that 'Foolish Wives' Will Surely Prove Highly Interesting Entertainment"

THE apex of interest of the trip of the censor boards of the United States and Canada to Universal City occurred when, in a specially constructed theatre in the beautiful Beverly Hills Hotel, the censors saw the long-awaited "Foolish Wives" production. Together with the hope of achieving a unity and standardization of censorship requirements—a hope which is on the way to realization—the viewing of the "Foolish Wives" picture lay uppermost in the anticipation of all of the members of the censorship party.

After more than a year of effort, Erich von Stroheim, the producer, with a corps of assistants, entered upon an intensive period of cutting and eliminating in order to put the film into something like its final form for this very occasion. It was a work of tremendous concentration to cut a production on which 236,000 feet of film had been shot to 17,000 feet, in which form the censors saw it last week. It required stretches of twenty hours continuous work, covering a period of several weeks, and the long-awaited showing had to be postponed at that for a day in order that the final subtitles be made. Even then, they were in "scratch" form, which is studio parlance for temporary subtitles.

This final showing was under the personal direction of Mr. von Stroheim, and specially composed music had been adapted by the leader of the orchestra which provides emotional atmosphere for Universal dramas, under Mr. von Stroheim's supervision. No one but the censors, their immediate party, those who worked on the picture, and Mr. Thalberg was admitted to the showing. As reel after reel of this master effort of von Stroheim unrolled before their eyes, spontaneous bursts of applause and gasps of amazement escaped from this selected coterie of spectators. When it was all over and the final scene faded from the screen, expressions of gratification at the magnificence of the production itself, the exceptional quality of the direction and the artistic acting of Mr. von Stroheim and his colleagues were heard on all sides.

Mr. von Stroheim had preceded the showing by a little speech in which he stated under what pressure he had worked in cutting the picture to its present form, and how care had to be exercised to leave the picture in such mobile state as to permit of incorporating any suggestions which they might make or allow for any eliminations which might be necessary in any of the localities represented by the censor boards. After the picture was over, he asked for a full and frank discussion and told them how important to him and to the Universal Company these suggestions would be. Very few suggestions of elimination were made either in the temporary subtitles or in the scenes themselves, and this is considered remarkable, owing not only to the great number of the scenes but to the fact that the picture deals with the subject of gambling in Monte Carlo, the world's most famous pleasure and gaming resort. The approval of the censors, for this reason, is a double tribute to the conception of the story itself and to the masterful direction which made it possible to bring the story to the screen without evoking any serious objections from a congress of all the censors of the United States and Canada.

It was no secret to the newspaper men of Los Angeles and San Francisco that the keenest interest of the Universal officials was centered in this pre-view of "Foolish Wives" by the censors. As was to be expected, a representative of every paper was waiting outside of the parlor of the Beverly Hills Hotel which had been made into a theatre for the occasion to ascertain what the censors thought of "Foolish Wives." All kinds of reports were current as to what the picture might contain and as to what the censors might take it into their heads to decide on the spot in regard to it. What they actually did decide is best expressed in the statement which Harry Knapp, who acted as chairman of the censors in their convention and who is also chairman of the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors, said in a statement made to the reporter of the Los Angeles Examiner:

"The consensus of our opinion," said Mr. Knapp, "is that the picture will prove a highly interesting entertainment when it is finally whipped into the more contracted shape required for public exhibition."

The morning of the showing also saw the culmination of the other object of the censors in visiting Universal

City. After a series of trips to all the prominent studios in the neighborhood of Los Angeles and a day spent in "wising up" the censors in the producing problems of the manufacturers and distributors, the producers and the censors met at a memorable luncheon at the Beverly Hills Hotel. There a definite plan of co-operation was discussed and a plan which involves a report to the full boards which were represented was finally decided upon. If this plan, which looks toward co-operative ideals and practise of censorship eliminations meets with the approval of the State and Canadian boards, one of the primal objects of Mr. Laemmle's invitation to the censors will have been achieved. The other, the pre-view of "Foolish Wives," has already been attained.

Harry Knapp, the chairman of the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors, was elected chairman of the meeting of censors and producers and led discussion. He called particular attention to the fact that when he first began his duties on the Pennsylvania Board he had made a special trip to California. He was particularly struck with the difference between this trip and the one he and Mr. Berrier made two years ago. Then he had a hard time getting into Universal City at all: they didn't see how he could possibly be interested in anything but the finished product and they thought that the interest in that should be very slight. Now he came as the guest of the president of the Universal Company and everyone was certain that he was not only a proper person to be admitted to the studio, but they were here in conference with all the producers to make censorship as effective as possible and at the same time as little wasteful of time and money as possible.

UNIVERSAL RETAINS SUPREMACY

GOLDWIN suffered its second defeat by Universal, 15-7; Paramount scored a 12-3 victory against Vitagraph, and Fox humbled First National, 7-2, in the weekly contests of the Motion Picture Baseball League. Universal remains undefeated, having scored nine "wins."

Universal	9	0	1.000
Fox	6	1	.856
First National	4	3	.571
Paramount	5	4	.555
Goldwyn	3	5	.375
Vitagraph	3	5	.375
Pathe	(Withdrawn)
Hodkinson	(Withdrawn)

Universal is well to the fore in the League line-up and looks forward to an easy victory over the Vitagraph nine when these teams meet. Following the contest with Vitagraph, Universal meets First National, and closes its season in a game with Fox, now in second place.

FOR HOOT GIBSON'S FIRST

UNIVERSAL SPECIAL ATTRACTION

HOOT GIBSON'S first Universal Special Attraction, "ACTION," is a sure-enough wonder. A corking good story—powerful situations—tremendous punch scenes and a sterling supporting cast make this one of the greatest Westerns produced in the last few years. However, we leave the praise to you and your folks.

WE want you to look carefully at the set of posters prepared for "ACTION." Fast, dazzling, burning action. That's the picture! That's what we tried to get into your paper, and that's why these posters are going to attract unusual attention. Money and time and proper ability did it.

Mr. E. B. Haines, Manager,
Universal Film Exchanges, Inc.
918 Locust Street,
Des Moines, Iowa

Dear friend Haines:-

A few days ago I received a letter from you asking me to put on a UNIVERSAL GALA WEEK. Now, Haines, how in H--- can I put on a Universal Gala Week, as for the past two years I have been running a Universal Gala Week every week, as since you have taken over the management of the Des Moines office, I have run every foot of film released by Universal, including all serials, two reel westerns, two reel comedies, single reel comedies, Monkey comedies, News Reels, Star Series and super Jewels, and if there is anything I have over-looked in your Exchange, please let me hear from you and I'll sure put it on.

In regard to your super features, I had run them all up to a couple of weeks ago, with the exception of the two Priscilla Dean Super features, OUTSIDE THE LAW and REPUTATION. By your continual harping at me, I was finally induced to put them on, and all I want to say is, that they both went over BIG. I used the same amount of advertising on both pictures and the weather conditions were the same, but almost doubled the business with REPUTATION, which goes to show the drawing power of Priscilla Dean. I had an INTERNATIONAL NEWS and a one reel comedy with REPUTATION and by the time we had run the News and the comedy, we had a lock-out, no seats left.

Now, before I forget, I want to express my appreciation for the courteous treatment I have received during my affiliation with the Universal under your management. Every employee from the Shipping Department up, have always made a special effort, it seemed to me, to give me the very best treatment, and I want you to know that I appreciate it.

Another thing, Haines, that I want to call your attention to is, that this is the only Film Company from which I have never received a miss-out or substitution during the past year.

Yours for another Successful Year.

Many Big Productions to Start at Universal

UNIVERSAL will go into action on September first with every unit shooting at rapid fire.

Commanding the principal sector on the motion picture front will be Irving G. Thalberg, general manager at Universal City, who has just outlined a schedule that will keep every outfit at Universal City busy in the campaign that has fifty-two special attractions a year and half a dozen super-features as its goal.

Harry Carey will open the season with "Man to Man," a novel by Jackson Gregory, which is to be filmed as a Universal-Jewel. The continuity has been assigned to George C. Hull by Lucien Hubbard, scenario editor.

Simultaneously with the start of "Man to Man," Priscilla Dean will begin work on "Wild Honey," a colorful drama of the African veldt, from the famous novel by Cynthia Stockley. The story will be widely different in theme from "Reputation" and "Conflict," the star's recently completed Universal-Jewel productions, but it is expected to exceed in romantic appeal anything that the noted actress has done. Lucien Hubbard himself is writing the continuity.

Gladys Walton will begin the fall season with "The Guttersnipe," a story by Percival Wilde, for which Wallace Clifton is writing the continuity. It is expected that Dallas FitzGerald will direct.

Miss du Pont's second starring vehicle will be "Ropes," to be filmed from the widely discussed one-act play of that name which appeared in Harper's Magazine by Wilbur Daniel Steele. The star has just completed "The Rage of Paris," her first Universal starring vehicle, which is scheduled for early release.

Upon its completion Miss du Pont will film "You Can't Live On Love," a clever comedy-drama by John B. Clymer, for which George Hively is writing the screen version.

Frank Mayo has a vigorous sea story for his first post-vacation starring vehicle. It is called "Dr. Jim" and was written by Stuart Paton, the Universal director.

Following that he will probably star in "The Altar Stairs," a romance of the South Seas which was written by G. B. Lancaster.

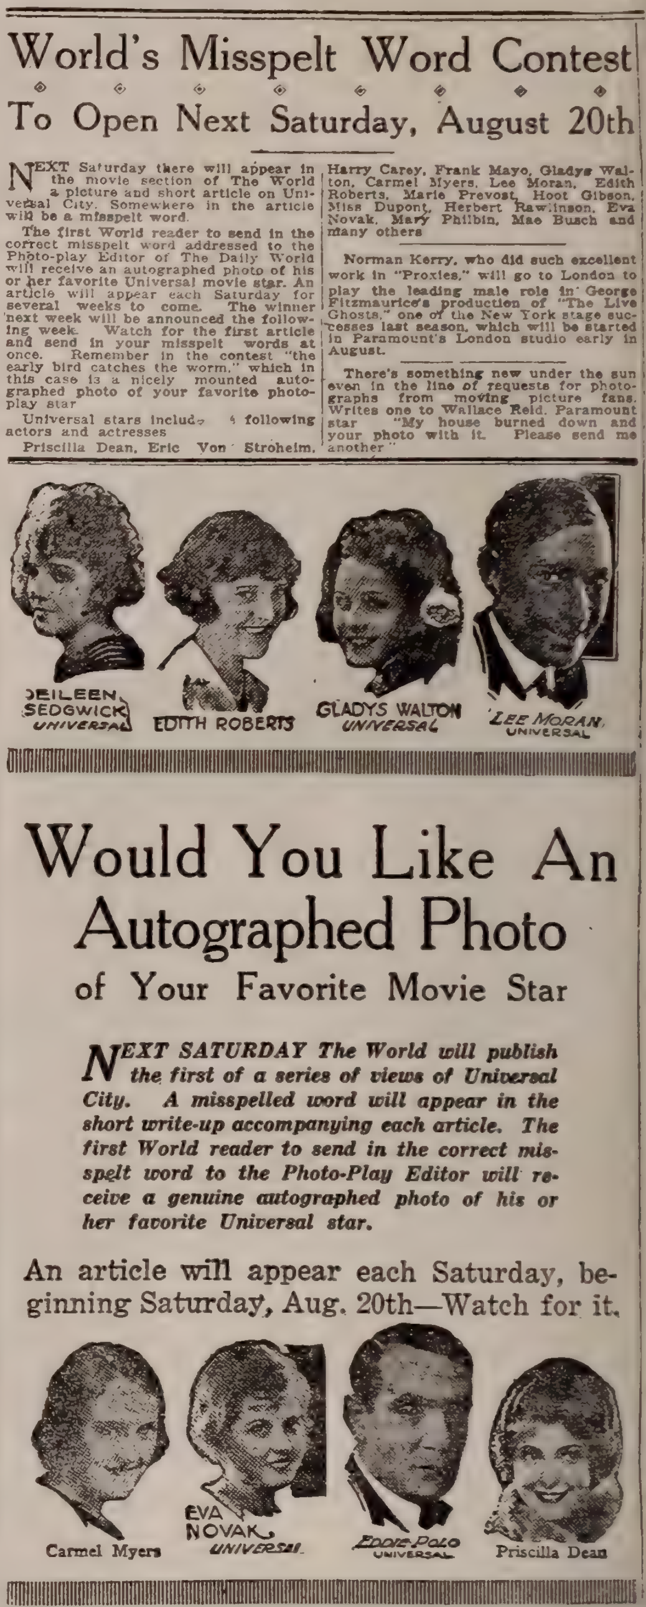
Marie Prevost will give the screen another speedy comedy-drama in "Kissed," a sparkling story by Arthur Sommers Roche, which originally appeared in the Argosy Magazine. A. P. Younger is writing the screen version. It is not unlikely that King Baggot will direct.

Herbert Rawlinson, who has just finished his role in support of Priscilla Dean in "Conflict" will start his own Universal starring career with "The Black Bag," a fascinating mystery story by Louis Joseph Vance. Then he will turn his attention to "The Substitute Millionaire," a story which was purchased from the estate of George Loane Tucker when death stopped that noted producer's activities.

About that time Marie Prevost will be ready for another vehicle and she will begin work on "Princess Virtue," a delightful comedy-drama which Doris Schroeder is adapting to the screen. While filming is in progress on "Princess Virtue," Miss Schroeder will work on the continuity for "Sandman," a magazine story which will be used by Gladys Walton for that fascinating little flapper-star's forthcoming Universal success.

Hoot Gibson's recently completed story, "Bransford of Rainbow Ridge," will be on the screen about the time when he starts "Headin' West," an original story by Harvey Gates. Jack Ford directed the Western star in his recent successes and it is probable that he will again guide him through the action when the fall barrage of films is opened at Universal City.

While Universal has enough stories in reserve to keep its battalion of stars busy for several months, Irving G. Thalberg has commissioned Lucien Hubbard, the scenario editor, to search for additional screen material. Stories are particularly needed for Miss Dean, Harry Carey, Marie Prevost, Miss du Pont and Hoot Gibson.



World's Misspelt Word Contest

To Open Next Saturday, August 20th

NEXT Saturday there will appear in the movie section of The World a picture and short article on Universal City. Somewhere in the article will be a misspelt word.

The first World reader to send in the correct misspelt word addressed to the Photo-play Editor of The Daily World will receive an autographed photo of his or her favorite Universal movie star. An article will appear each Saturday for several weeks to come. The winner next week will be announced the following week. Watch for the first article and send in your misspelt words at once. Remember in the contest "the early bird catches the worm," which in this case is a nicely mounted autographed photo of your favorite photoplay star

Priscilla Dean, Eric Von Stroheim, Harry Carey, Frank Mayo, Gladys Walton, Carmel Myers, Lee Moran, Edith Roberts, Marie Prevost, Hoot Gibson, Miss Dupont, Herbert Rawlinson, Eva Novak, Mary Philbin, Mae Busch and many others

Norman Kerry, who did such excellent work in "Proxies," will go to London to play the leading male role in George Fitzmaurice's production of "The Live Ghosts," one of the New York stage successes last season, which will be started in Paramount's London studio early in August.

There's something new under the sun even in the line of requests for photographs from moving picture fans. Writes one to Wallace Reid, Paramount star "My house burned down and your photo with it. Please send me another"

All Indianapolis Agreed!

Wrote the "Indiana Daily Times":

"'REPUTATION' is one dramatic explosion after another. Dramatic bomb-shells explode every few feet in this movie, and the result is that the Universal-Jewel people have provided their star, Priscilla Dean, with as interesting a character vehicle as one could desire. Miss Dean probably does some of the truest acting of her career. She shows to a marked degree her ability to create various types. Splendidly photographed and produced. 'Reputation' is the dramatic sensation of the summer season. Will make Priscilla Dean as famous as 'Humoresque' made Vera Gordon."

We quote from the "Indianapolis Star":

"'REPUTATION' is the sort of picture that can come unannounced and do the business, because it can stand on the appeal of its story and the acting of Priscilla Dean. She is really remarkable in her dual role. 'Reputation' is a colorful, dramatic picture, with a strong sense of reality, decidedly worth seeing."

A few lines from the "Indianapolis News":

"'REPUTATION' is intensely dramatic, excellently done and highly entertaining. Miss Dean has some emotional moments which she does superbly. It ranks among the best of her efforts."

The Big New Idea
in Sure Fire Serials

ALWAYS the leader—always breaking new trails for the advancement of moving pictures and the money-making possibilities of exhibitors, Universal will very shortly release (late in September or early in October) a big, brand-new idea in chapter plays.

A CLEAN, censor-proof dramatization of the stirring adventures of red-blooded Americans in the days of Capt. John C. Fremont and Kit Carson. A thrilling narrative of the pioneers of the early Wild West, so constructed as to make its powerful appeal to the grown as well as the young.

BEAUTY CONTEST WINNERS

THEY seem to specialize in beauty-contest winners at Universal City in California. There are half a dozen of them out there now, all learning the ropes or else, having learned, starting out as regular movie actresses on the road to possible stardom.

Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal company, has carried out a consistent policy of trying out new talent wherever it looked promising. He has done it for years past. And it has brought his company two or three really valuable finds who are repaying all the time and money spent on them by the growing popularity of their pictures.

It takes nerve to invest a five-figure check in such an unknown quanity as a girl's photograph. Photographers are mighty clever people and once in a while they can get an effect of pose, lighting and soft focus that will make a boilermaker look like a cold-cream or talcum powder advertisement.

But Laemmle has gone on the theory that if a girl's photograph shows sufficient personality, beauty and intelligence to wring a prize out of the grudging fists of professional judges she probably will be sufficiently intelligent and attractive and photographic to win approval from you and me when we see her on the screen.

His theory is that beauty prizes are not given to the doll-baby type of prettiness. That isn't likely to win the favor of the contest judges any more than it would win the favor of the fans in the movie houses. And he knows that a girl with good intelligence, given a capable director, plus a careful training in the rudiments, will repay his investment seven times out of ten.

HE takes these girls from the average, somewhat notonous American home and and he gives them a ticket straight through to fairyland —the same being the big group of studios out at Universal City. And there he leaves them to work out their own salvation, with everything in their favor if they have common sense enough to work hard and not get too much "up stage."

ABOUT a year ago the Elks in Chicago, in conjunction with one of the city's newspapers, held a beauty contest to choose a girl for queen of their annual carnival. Laemmle heard of it and sent the added inducement of a period of training at Universal City with salary attached and a long-term contract if the girl made good.

The prize fell to Gertrude Olmstead. She was seventeen years old. When she was told of her luck she was at work on the gown she was to wear at her school graduation.

Gertrude was sent to California and for eight months she went through a course of training that quickly proved to her that the life of a movie actress isn't all play by a long shot. Once in a while she was allowed to act a tiny bit, just to wear away her natural camera shyness. Then she was sent back to her round of swimming, acting, dancing, gymnastics, riding and everything else lessons.

But for eight whole months she had to postpone her dreams of quick fame and fortune.

BUT, in that contest, Laemmle took a chance he doesn't often risk. One of the honorably-mentioned girls struck his own fancy by her quaint and unusual personality. It wasn't beauty; it was just something individual, different. And she was only a kid of sixteen.

LAEMMLE offered to send her West and give her a chance. She took it. And he put her through a more tiresome test than Miss Olmstead had, for he gave her practically nothing to do. He just left her and her mother hang around and absorb movie atmosphere, paying the girl a salary all the time and offering her her fare home any time she tired of it.

She didn't tire. And the life of the studios, with its sophistication and its tendency to harden, did not in the least spoil her quaintness nor her individuality.

That was what Laemmle had ordered his people to watch. When he heard that she was coming through satisfactorily he sent word out that she was to be given a chance in parts that suited her odd personality.

Small bits in comedies introduced her to the screen. Then they gave her the big test. There was a role in Frank Mayo's picture, "The Blazing Trail," that seemed to suit her. They gave it to her and she put it across.

That little kid's name is Mary Philbin. They tell me over here in the New York offices that they are sitting back and waiting for her to cash in. They say she's going to do it and they predict that a year from now you will all be talking about Mary Philbin and loving her just because she's so sweetly different from any body else.

A MAN has to have pretty good confidence in his own judgment of human nature to gamble thousands on a bit of a girl like that. But Laemmle discovered Mary Pickford and Gladys Walton and half a dozen others. And he's still discovering.

HE has two other girls in the probationary period out at his plant now.

Lila Sue Campbell, erstwhile of Hot Springs, Ark., woke up one morning to find she had won a beauty contest. Laemmle gambled on her as he had on others.

It's too soon to tell whether he is going to win or lose in this case, but his past performances make him an attractive bet.

THE above story is especially suited to the Weekly Feature Page of your local newspaper. Tie up with the editor, have him insert the story and watch for increased attendance when you present any of the stars or players mentioned in the article. Many persons want to act in motion pictures. This story will tell them how the longed-for goal has been attained by the more fortunate ones. This article will interest that large class of screen-struck persons and your editor will be quick to realize the universal appeal a story of this kind will have on the readers of his newspaper.

GO STRAIGHT TO FAIRYLAND

Lila Sue (somehow that's an easy name to say, isn't it?) has appeared with Priscilla Dean in "Reputation" and they gave her a leading part in one of their comedies and you may be seeing her name in big letters in the entrance to your favorite theatre before you know it.

Then there's Frankie Kiolet, who won a contest in Seattle, Wash.

She was a cashier in a movie theatre in her home town when fame came and tapped her on the shoulder. Laemmle was in Europe at the time, but, knowing his theories, one of his officials sent him word about the contest. He cabled at once offering the girl a trip to the studios, a salary while she was there and her expenses home if she decided she didn't want to go into the movies after all.

But Frankie is staying. She hasn't had a chance at a picture yet, but is looks as though she intended to give it a whirl in the hopes that it spins down with "Take All" uppermost.

Marie Prevost Completes Second Universal Vehicle

MARIE PREVOST'S second Universal comedy-drama has been completed at Universal City and is on its way to the screen. It is called "The Girl Who Knew All About Men" and was filmed under the direction of King Baggot.

Doris Schroeder wrote the continuity from the story by Roy Clements, pioneer director and writer of the motion picture industry.

Harry Myers, particularly famous as "The Connecticut Yankee," played the principal masculine role opposite Miss Prevost. Other members of the cast included such popular screen players as Helen Harris, Vernon Snively, R. Henry Grey, Percy Challenger, George Kuwa, Mrs. Lucretia Harris and Lydia Yeamans Titus.

Briefly the story of "The Girl Who Knew All About Men" concerns a little flapper who sighs deeply over the troubles of her hero as they are described in the magazine frothings of a particularly sentimental author of featherweight literature. Suddenly she meets the author and finds that she is living his stories.

Rollicking flashes of humor, sparkling wit, the fascinating personality of the little star, the excellent supporting cast and the clever direction of King Baggot, makes "The Girl Who Knew All About Men" a production that will be anticipated by playgoers who like a dash of pepper with their honey.

The story is especially interesting to exhibitors as Miss Prevost's second dramatic vehicle. The famous bathing beauty discarded her bathing suit when she signed a Universal contract. Her first picture was "Moonlight Follies," a production which is scheduled for early fall release and which is expected to create a furore as one of the year's speediest comedy-dramas with a heart-punch.

UNIQUE MAIL CAMPAIGN PUTS REPUTATION OVER

JOE MAYER, Universal Exploitation expert, and Bob Eichelsdorfer, publicity manager of the Ohio Theatre, Indianapolis, put over a new one in that city recently for the showing of "Reputation." The stunt created untold interest and packed the theatre during the run.

The Scandal Sheet, a four-page miniature newspaper, was used for the stunt. Return post-cards were sent to 5,000 residents of Indianapolis reading as follows:

"The first issue of 'The Scandal Sheet' will be published on Thursday, August 12. This paper will contain a number of highly interesting stories about people you know, including a full and intimate history of the life and escapades of notorious

"We want every person in Indianapolis to read 'The Scandal Sheeet,' and in order to introduce it into every home, we will send a copy of the first issue, absolutely free. Fill out the attached postal card and mail it at once, etc."

The cards were put in the mail Tuesday evening and more than five hundred had come back signed by noon the following day. Altogether more than half of the cards were returned.

Advertisements of "The Scandal Sheet" were inserted in the local papers, resulting in many more requests for the little publication.

Several thousand more of the miniature newspapers were distributed through other agencies.

This stunt was backed by an extensive newspaper teaser ad campaign.

Followed on the fourth day by larger ads, on the fifth day by Character Study ads, and on the sixth and seventh days by big smash ads. On the eighth day of the newspaper campaign—the second day of the showing, the Indianapolis Times carried a double truck of 16 columns made up of local merchants' ads based on the word "REPUTATION" built around the theatre ad.

ANOTHER SMALL TOWN "OKAYS" EXPLOITATION

ANOTHER example of small city success with a well planned exploitation campaign is afforded in the publicity drive recently put over by Harold Zeigler of the Reliance Theatre, Orangeburg, S. C., for "Outside the Law," the Priscilla Dean production.

Zeigler's campaign had four angles, a clever street stunt, a big newspaper merchant tie-up, a window-display tie-up and punchful lobby.

His street stunt was simple but effective. It consisted of dressing two men, one as a policeman and the other as a convict, hand-cuffing them together, and sending them on their merry way through the streets of Orangeburg. On the breast of the "convict" was a sign reading:

"I AM ON MY WAY TO——."

And on the back of the "policeman" the reminder:

"SEE 'OUTSIDE THE LAW' RELIANCE—TO-DAY."

This stunt attracted much attention.

Zeigler's newspaper tie-up consisted of a double-truck in the Orangeburg Times and Democrat, built around his theatre ad and consisting of a score of merchant ads each using the word REPUTATION in a striking black cut. In connection with this page was a mis-spelled word contest, using words in various ads. This proved very popular. Prizes for those detecting the mis-spelled words consisted of tickets to the picture.

A number of attractive window displays were arranged with various merchants, advertising the reputation of their merchandise.

Death-bed Pact Saves Brother From Prison

"The Call of the Blood"

Featuring ART ACORD

BOB MELTON, foreman of the Melton ranch, is in love with his boss's daughter Ruth. His horse, Pal, is Ruth's only rival for Bob's affections, excepting his brother, Dick, who unknown to Bob, is running into debt and gambling away whatever money he has been able to get from Bob from time to time.

A rancher offers to buy Bob's horse, Pal, for five hundred dollars. "I wouldn't sell old Pal for all the money in the world," Bob replies. Soon afterwards Bob receives a telegram from Dick asking for fifteen hundred dollars to pay for an operation necessitated by an injury received in a mine wreck.

Bob sacrifices his love for Ruth to his obligation to his brother. He takes his earnings, saved to furnish a home for Ruth and himself, and sends the money to Dick. To this he adds $500 for which he has sold his best friend, Pal. He makes this great sacrifice for his scapegoat brother.

Dick, the weakling, squanders the money wrung from Bob's happiness and, unable to secure more, arrives at the ranch. Ruth, fascinated by him, agrees to elope, as she thinks Bob no longer cares for her. Bob feels it his duty to interefere and halts the elopers. Dick resents his interference and goes his own way.

Universal Film Exch.,
Chicago, Ill.

My Dear Mr. Leserman:

It is not the policy of the Woodlawn Theatre to make written comment on pictures, but we cannot help doing so on your comedy, "Society Dogs," which we showed for four days last week.

Never in the history of the theatre have we received such favorable comments on a short feature. (You will note we are classing this as a feature.) You certainly are to be congratulated. So pleased and impressed were we that we have set in the next Brownie comedy, "Golfing," for a week's run. It is our intention to give this as prominent a place in our publicity as we do the big picture.

Sincerely yours,
WOODLAWN THEATRE COMPANY,

Gentlemen:

We ran your big special "Outside the Law" last week to the biggest houses we have had since we have been in business. We ran this picture two days and the last show we turned away two hundred who could not get in; people were lined up a half block, trying to get in. This is the biggest and best production ever shown in Paris. Our population is only 1400 and we had strong competition, but nevertheless we did the business. We are writing this to let you know that "Outside the Law" is some picture.

"Heart vs Honor" Duel Ends With Love Loser

"The Fight Within"

Featuring GEORGE LARKIN

TED JOYCE and Jack Raymond have been pals from boyhood. Ted is in love with Jack's sister. Ted tells of his hopes to become a member of the Northwest Mounted Police and urges Jack to join him in this career, but Jack is hesitant.

A year later Ted has become an honored member of the Northwest Mounted Police and stands in line for rapid promotion.

While Ted pursues the straight and narrow path, Jack chooses the broad and easy road and gets into bad company.

Ted has kept an eye on his pal and sees with sadness that Raymond's weak character leads him constantly into temptation, and warns him to be careful of the company he keeps, but to this advice his pal shrugs his shoulders cynically.

Ted visits the town of his birth on his rounds as a policeman, and calls on Jack's sister. He is shown with joy a new silk dress which Jack has bought for his mother, and other adornments for the sister. Jack is undoubtedly successful in his prospectings, for they have many comforts which they did not have before. Ted suspects these comforts have been bought with ill-gotten gains, but does not dare tell the mother and sister what he fears.

A band of horse-thieves has been terrorizing the country-side and the policeman gets closer and closer on their trail. Finally he comes unexpectedly upon the men, overcomes two and gives chase to the third. These men are masked. He gains upon the masked, fleeing figure of the sole remaining member of the band. He overtakes him. They fight furiously and the bandit is overcome. The policeman tears the mask from the face of his pal Jack.

Ted, sworn to uphold his duty and sternly suppressing all love for his former pal, conducts him to the town, where the boy is lodged in jail.

With unwilling feet Ted repairs to the home of the mother and sister of Jack to break to them the news of what the boy had been doing. The mother pleads for her son in vain.

There is a saloon brawl down the street and the policeman in the struggle is shot through the shoulder. Coincidentally the girl determines to help her brother escape from jail.

After the policeman has subdued the brawl and is about to have his shoulder dressed he is sent word that Jack has escaped from jail. Half fainting from the loss of blood, but determined that the law shall be enforced, he goes direct to the home of Jack's mother and sister and finds him there. He has been hidden in a closet by his sister. Ted demands that Jack be given up. The girl bids him choose between her and his office.

The policeman is torn between conflicting emotions, but his honor is supreme and he places the handcuffs on Jack. As he does so he falls fainting, for his wound has overcome him. When he recovers he finds that the inherent manhood of Jack has come to the fore, and he has resolved to pay his debt to society; also that the girl, admiring the policeman's true manhood and loyalty to the service has forgiven him.

Waylays Policeman Steals His Clothes

"No Clothes To Guide Him"

Featuring MARY PHILBIN

EGBERT, a dead beat, is A. Pancake's rival for the hand of Mary. As A. Pancake is calling on Mary, Egbert intrudes, but is kicked out by Marys' father. Pancake arranges to elope with Mary. His plans are overheard, however, and the police are notified.

On the morning of the wedding Egbert is beset by a horde of creditors and bill collectors. He manages to elude them, but meets his Waterloo when Go-get-'em Charlie, King of Bill Collecters, takes a hand. Charlie enters Egbert's room and literally cleans up the place, and Egbert, who is left with nothing but his underclothes.

Egbert sneaks out and waylays a policeman whose uniform he appropriates. Two negroes are having a razor duel and Egbert's uniform is neatly sliced off him as he gets within range of the blades. In the meantime Pancake and Mary are about to elope when arrested by the police.

Egbert meets Mary in the police station and presses his suit. She consents to marry him and they leave, arm in arm, after Egbert sees his rival secure behind the bars of a cell in the local jail.

Crooked Milk Dealer Sours Rival's Product

"Teddy's Goat"

Two-reel Century Comedy

Featuring

Charles Dorety and Teddy, the Great Dane

TEDDY, our great Dane friend, is awakened by the inevitable ringing of the alarm clock. He throws it out of the window, but it is thrown back. In his anger he stamps upon it, and breaks it into pieces. Then he goes back to bed.

His master, an ambitious milkman, who allows his little son to do all of the work, realizes that a milkman's duty is to deliver milk—and he gets out of bed. He calls Teddy and instructs him to get the goat ready for milking. This goat, by the way, gives forty quarts without a prescription.

On his route he calls on his sweetheart, who is also the sweetheart of the cop. Then he delivers his milk. His rival plans to spoil his business, and opens the milk bottles. He squeezes some lemon into each one. But Teddy, always on the alert, sees this and changes the bottles.

In desperation the villain steals Teddy's goat, but again Teddy is on his guard. He rescues the goat, and when he returns to his master arrives in time to see him win the cop's sweetheart.

Trio of Ingenious Lobbies for Universal Photoplays

Charles Rosenzweig, Now Big "U" Sales Head, Will Co-operate With Every Exhibitor

CHARLES ROSENZWEIG, heretofore sales manager for Jewels and features in the Big "U" (New York) branch exchange of the Universal Film Exchanges, Inc., has been made General Sales Manager for the Big "U" and hereafter will have complete charge of the Universal sales force in the New York territory. In line with his new position he has taken over the sale of all Universal short subjects, including Century Comedies, two-reel Western dramas, serials, Star Comedies and International News reels.

When questioned recently as to his plans for the combined sales operation of the Big "U" Exchange, Mr. Rosenzweig announced that he will extend to the selling of short subjects the same successful policy he has pursued in handling Universal-Jewel productions and Universal special attractions.

"This policy is based on co-operative service," explained the new sales chief. "I am confident that we can help the exhibitor. I want not only to sell pictures to the exhibitor, but also to assist him to sell these pictures to his audience.

"Our results have been unprecedented. Not only have we made many friends, but we have made success for our exhibitor friends with our output. This is shown by the ever-increasing distribution we have. This is the kind of success I mean to put over with Universal short subjects.

"My door is always open. No cards of introduction are necessary. I am ready to help an exhibitor with any Universal subject, whether it is a Jewel or a news reel.

"Having been in personal touch with more than 95 per cent. of the exhibitors in the New York territory and having been in their houses, I feel that I am familiar with their wants and needs. It is on this basis that I try to supply service and co-operation that actually is useful to them.

"That is the policy that will govern the Big "U" sales force. We have found that exhibitors appreciate it. It is the surest step towards exhibitor-distributor prosperity," he concluded.

"The Desert of Despair"

IN the desert the fury of the simoon spends itself, just as Elaine and Bruce have about given up hope. They become separated, blinded by the whirling sand. Elaine falls near a dune and is partially buried. Bruce seeks her but cannot find her. He is nearly dead from thirst, when the band of traders again find him. He discovers Elaine and revives her. The traders promise to help them get to the seacoast where they can catch a ship for America.

At the palace of the Ameer, Vera, who has entered the place posing as Elaine, finds that the fate intended for Elaine is to be hers. So, in order to escape, she removes her disguise as Elaine and appears in her own black hair, with her clothing torn as from a struggle. When the Ameer and his guards come in to get her, she tells of how she was brought there by a man who left her in place of a blonde girl whom he took with him. Her story is believed, and while she is not allowed to depart, she is given the freedom of the palace.

Hunch and Holmes come to the palace. Vera avoids Hunch, as he would recognize her as the black-haired woman who previously trapped him. But she does see Holmes and because of her hold on him gets him to promise to help her escape.

Elaine and Bruce make for the steamer about to sail. At the dock they are caught by local officials and imprisoned in a cell-like room in a warehouse, while Hunch is notified of their capture. With Hunch on the way, Elaine and Bruce escape by forcing the bars and making their way along a narrow ledge to another window. They evade the guards, seize a motorboat and overtake the steamer, which has sailed. Hunch sees them catch the steamer, but he gets orders from the Ameer to stop the two at any cost. So he commandeers a submarine and pursues. The steamer refuses to stop and when a torpedo is fired at it puts on more steam. The boilers are overloaded and explode. Elaine and Bruce are trapped in their stateroom as the ship goes down.

"DO OR DIE"

Episode 16

"The Crystal Lake"

JACK escapes with Dolores from the clutches of Satan's men by a clever ruse. While Satan's men are searching the island he sneaks back and seizes the bandit chief. While he struggles with Satan, Jack manages to snatch the ring and gives it to Dolores. As Merton is telling Dolores to run off in the boat with the ring Satan frees his gag and yells for help.

The gangsters race up and rescue their leader and overpower Jack whom they tie to a tree. They then set out to overtake Dolores who has reached the boat and is frantically rowing to the mainland. The bandits obtain a boat and slowly but surely creep up on Dolores' skiff. Jack is left on the island securely tied to the tree.

The Mystery Woman again comes to Jack's rescue and frees him from his bonds. They both race toward the bridge to the mainland in an effort to head off Satan and his men before they can overtake Dolores, who has the ring in her possession. The pair reaches the bridge just as Satan and his men draw up alongside the boat containing the terrified Dolores.

The Mystery Woman begs Jack not to attempt a rescue as he faces almost certain death in battling four desperate men. Jack shakes her off and dives from the high bridge into the water. He swims to Satan's boat and over turns it. Dolores rows away and reaches the shore but is captured by two of Satan's men who have been sent to look for her. The bandits who are floundering in the water attack Jack, who goes under.

U. S. Revenue Cutters Hunt "Booze" Runners

EXHIBITORS' HERALD: "A soul-stiring drama, a fine achievement, a page out of the book of life, done in a big way."

NEWS: "There is no question about this picture being one of the best sure-fire box-office bets of the season. In fact, the exhibitor who books it is certain to put up his S. R. O. sign. A picture of mother love and sister love but it is the marvelously human incident which offers the greatest appeal. The acting is highly commendable—the types are perfect."

TRIBUNE: "Going to be a great success."

GLOBE: "A plaintive picture of self-sacrificing youth."

TRADE REVIEW: "It grips and tugs at the heart-strings—one of the most interesting and entertaining photoplays of the season. A beautiful love element is interwoven into one of the greatest human documents ever screened. Tears and laughter are intermingled in a most pleasing fashion and every one should enjoy seeing it. Mabel Julienne Scott is exceptional and her supporting cast all that could be asked. Truly, an all-star cast is in this production."

WHEN you see Marie Prevost in her first Universal Special Attraction, "Moonlight Follies," you'll know why Exhibitor's Herald said of it:

"KING BAGGOT has built up an interesting and entertaining little narrative, pictorially above the average. It serves, too, to introduce Marie Prevost as a star and the little Sennett beauty proves that the judgment of the Universal officers was not misplaced in her selection for this high honor.

"SHE has youth, beauty and a winning personality. A very clever cast was furnished to support her. Surefire stuff. Marie Prevost's success as a star is assured."

ves You 52 Times a Year !

Regular Universal Weekly Program Pictures--Others Would Call 'Em Super-Features -- and They Are.

WE honestly believe that no other producing organization on earth can even match the program of pictures that Universal is offering you this year in its Special Attractions—one fine picture at a reasonable price every week right straight through the year.

FOR first-class stories and talented casts —for luxury settings and quality productions—for all-around pulling power at the box-office of any theatre anywhere in the world, we challenge the producers of the country to equal the weekly Universal Special Attraction.

TO every exhibitor who holds a contract for 52 Universal Special Attractions, or even half that number, we extend congratulations. For this mighty good reason—he is getting weekly features from Universal which any other company in the world would instantly withdraw from its weekly program and boost as "super-features"—and he's getting them at regular program prices.

SIGN that contract to-day—and get the benefit of the program price.

Renewed Activity at World's Film Capital Assures Exhibitors of Banner Season of Successes

HOOT GIBSON, Universal's famous young cowboy star, is in 'Frisco, where he is scheduled to make a number of personal appearances at the Frolic Theatre. The Frolic is being managed by Noble Hearne, formerly manager of the Superba Theatre in Los Angeles, and he has promised his patrons to give them a look at the young rodeo king for some time. His personal appearance will accompany the showing of "Action," his recent Universal Special Attraction.

GLADYS WALTON, who is to start work this week at Universal City on "The Guttersnipe," will have to get rid of her dog, or at least keep him out of camera range. The clever story by Percival Wilde shows the famous little star as a waif of the streets and her dog is a high-stepping, aristocratic Irish setter. Dallas FitzGerald, Miss Walton's director, sympathizes with her desire to have a puppy-dog around to pal with, and he is going to find a muttie in keeping with the atmosphere of the story.

FRANK MAYO is scheduled to begin work this week on "Dr. Jim," a vigorous sea story well suited to the young star's dramatic capabilities. Stuart Paton, the Universal director, wrote "Dr. Jim" especially for Mayo. The cast is now being assembled, and William Worthington will direct the action, most of which takes place up and down the colorful coast of Baja California.

ERICH VON STROHEIM is making unusually good progress in editing "Foolish Wives," Universal's million-dollar super-film, which has been over a year in the making, and will be several months more in the cutting. The world-famous director-star is confronted with the problem of reducing 159,000 feet of usable film to the 12 reels which will go to the screen as Carl Laemmle's greatest achievement.

MARIE PREVOST, Universal's fascinating new star, has a zippy comedy-drama ahead of her. She has returned from a vacation and will soon start work on "Princess Virtue," a Universal Special Attraction, in which she will be directed by Hobart Henley. The cast, of more than unusual popularity, is being assembled for her support.

EDDIE POLO will be entitled to a vacation when he finishes "The Secret Four," the serial which is engaging him now at Universal City. In no other production has the famous screen Hercules been called upon for so many feats of daring and examples of his colossal strength. "The Secret Four" was written by Anthony W. Coldeway, and is a story based upon an international scramble for oil. Katherine Meyers is playing opposite him. Albert Russell is directing.

LON CHANEY is considered by the observing to be doing the best work of his career in "Wolfbreed," the picture for which he was especially engaged by Universal. Robert Thornby is directing. Irene Rich, who did such remarkable work in support of Harry Carey in "Desperate Trails," gives Chaney remarkable support in the leading feminine role. The story was written by Chaney himself in collaboration with Lucien Hubbard, scenario editor at Universal City, and Irving G. Thalberg, director general at the world's film capital.

Universal Laboratory Workers Accept Voluntary Wage Cut

Industrial Democracy Cuts Working Hours From 48 to 43, An 18% Saving in Payroll

ANOTHER instance of the remarkable working of Industrial Democracy at the Universal Laboratory at Fort Lee, N. J., has just been disclosed by the announcement from the Universal office of the adoption of a joint Senate and House bill which has the effect of reducing the payroll of the factory eighteen per cent.

The action taken by the Universal employees in the laboratory was a voluntary one, and followed a plain statement of the laboratory situation from the labor standpoint made to a mass meeting of the laboratory workers by R. H. Cochrane and Thomas Murphy.

So sincere has been the interest of the workers in the success of Industrial Democracy and of the practical benefits which it was exemplifying at the Universal plant, that they realized with very little explanation the acute situation which demands a reduction in the wages of all departments to meet conditions, which have come about through unusual competition in the laboratory field and national conditions, necessitating the downward readjustmet to put business on a stable basis.

After a thorough discussion following this mass meeting it was proposed to cut the working hours of the employees from 48 to 43, thus eliminating all Saturday work in the plant and permitting a complete shutdown of the factory from Friday night until Monday morning. There was no cut suggested or required in actual wages, and, as a matter of fact, the arrangement under which the employees are working with the bonus system will result in very little actual reduction of their individual pay.

The elimination, however, of this Saturday work means a reduction in the payroll to the Universal of a little more than eighteen per cent, a saving which is extremely gratifying to the officials of the Universal, as well as to the officers and members of the Industrial Democracy at the laboratory.

The mass meeting also passed unanimously the following resolution, which shows the splendid spirit of co-operation which exists between the Universal officials and employees:

Whereas, the general conditions of business are unsettled and unsatisfactory, and, to all people who think, it is quite evident that prices should and must come down; and

Whereas, many plants in our industry are either shut down or running part time, and those operating are now, and for some considerable time to come will continue doing business at no profit; and

Whereas, such condition, and the destructive competition which is sure to follow jeopardizes steady work for the members of the Universal organization and tends to lessen the confidence of the investor in the stock of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, be it

Resolved, that we, the employees in mass meeting assembled, do hereby pledge our earnest, individual and collective support to our company in the plans for turning these difficult times into mutual good. Good for the employees, for the stockholders, and for the public through more intelligent, individual and collective service; be it further

Resolved, that we tender our sincere thanks to the officials of this company for extending to us their full confidence in business matters.

Six months ago, in a report to Mr. Laemmle of the progress made under Industrial Democracy, a great deal of emphasis was laid upon the saving effected in the plant, the reduction of waste and the greater producing power of the average employee. It was considered that a waste of only 3.01, representing over 100 per cent of saving in this particular, was a remarkable evidence of the efficiency of the new system. So it was, but even that reduction looks infinitesimal in comparison with waste as it exists in the plant to-day. On last week's report, waste in all departments is .82, and for several weeks during the Summer it was as low as .68, an unheard of percentage in the laboratory business. In addition to this, the production per man in January, after a six months' trial of Industrial Democracy, had been increased exactly 25 per cent. In August there had been a 25 per cent increase over that of January.

Revolutionary as it may seem, with less employees than ever in the factory and working five days instead of six, the factory is now able to turn out 7,500 feet a week more than they did in January.

As soon as the workers grapsed the salient features of the Industrial Democracy plan and realized that the increasing efficiency of the plant increased the dividends which they drew individually on the basis of production, there came about a gradual but constant weeding out of inefficient workers. Clock-watchers were very soon dispensed with, and inefficiency, waste or carelessness of any kind was promptly punished by penalties or dismissal, all of this being attended to by the employees themselves.

The latest development at the factory is the decision on the part of the employees to petition the company to install the very latest Spoor-Thompson developing machines, to enable the factory to keep abreast of the very latest invention in efficiency in the laboratory work.

When these machines are istalled there will be an even greater incentive to the employees to demonstrate their efficiency, because the machines will effect a still greater percentage per employee than was possible heretofore.

PROSPERITY IS HERE!

Universal Distribution Officials Point With Pride to Concrete Evidence in Shape of Actual Contracts

EVERY releasing company in the industry is looking toward September with the hope that it will bring the expected prosperity to the motion picture business. While they are looking, the officials of the Universal have found that it is here. Prosperity has already arrived. From four points of the compass the answer has come in the shape of the most concrete evidence—contracts. New York, Los Angeles, Chicago and Atlanta each have added their quota to the sum total. The answer points not only to the fact that conditions have returned to normal, but that this coming year will be the best that the moving picturn industry has ever experienced.

Charles Rosenzweig, who has just been appointed general sales manager of the Big U exchange, New York, reports that last week was by far the biggest week the exchange has experienced since it was established nine years ago. After the check-up Saturday night it was found that his salesmen had brought in between seventy-five and eighty thousand dollars of new business. The record week's business before was forty-five thousand. Among the big circuits signed up for Special Attractions were Loew, Fox, Meyer-Snyder, Sydney Cohen, Rachmel & Rinzler and Herring & Blumenthal.

"This encourages me to believe," said Mr. Rosenzweig, "that this depression stuff is all off. This kind of business seeems to indicate that the exhibitor is not afraid of the future. Of the one hundred and twenty-seven houses which closed during the summer, more than half are now open again and the rest are preparing to open. And there are several new ones opening in September. The fact that my salesman secured without effort a higher price for the new series of Special Attractions means either that the six stars now in the Attraction program are more popular or better known, that the product is better, that prosperity has returned as never before, or that I have a cracker-jack sales force. Perhaps it is all of these reasons. At any rate we are feeling very much encouraged at 1600 Broadway. Our first Fall Special Attraction, Frank Mayo in 'The Shark Master,' won't be officially released until September 4. But it has already played twenty-six days pre-release in big houses and has been a wonderful send-off to the entire program.

'One thing that encourages me particularly is that this record business was secured without the offering of one single new Jewel contract. It was all written on Special Attractions, serials, comedies, short features and International News reels. When we have the chance to offer 'No Woman Knows,' Harry Carey in 'The Fox,' and Priscilla Dean in 'Conflict,' I expect some more evidences of prosperity."

From across the continent in Los Angeles, where H. M. Berman, general manager of Universal Exchanges, is conferring with Irving G. Thalberg, comes the same story. Mr. Berman has just finished conducting the censors through Southern California and has been busy observing the condition of exhibitors in the golden West, as well as getting an eyeful of coming Jewels and Special Attractions.

Speaking of "Foolish Wives," Mr. Berman said:

'The picture goes to the screen as Carl Laemmle's greatest achievement and a mile-stone along the highway of motion picture progress. It will smash precedent in that it is both an artistic triumph and a commercial success. Universal has spent exactly $1,256,190.80 to date on this production. Within two years it will have returned a handsome profit on the investment."

Admitting that it is difficult to predict the success of a picture as yet unreleased, Mr. Berman added:

'I am not given to unduly optimistic statements, but the requests of big exhibitors who want to book the picture without seeing it and offer their checks in proof of their sincerity is the point upon which I base my prediction.

"But 'Foolish Wives,' in spite of the huge publicity it has received, is not all they are talking about here. Special Attractions are booking in a way that assures me that the Universal's confidence in the future was not misplaced. Last Spring we did not slow up one moment. Mr. Laemmle tried with might and main to inject his own confidence into others—exhibitors and producers alike. And he took his own medicine. He practiced what he preached. The result is that Universal has a wonderful product to offer right now when the exhibitor is most in need of it. I find that our production manager, Mr. Thalberg, with justifiable business sagacity, has been able through the unemployment of many fine players to make our pictures much better in qaulity without increasing to any great extent the cost per negative foot. I have seen every one of the first five Special Attractions and the same high quality goes all the way through."

From Chicago comes word from I. L. Leserman, manager of the Universal Exchange, that the big circuits of theatres—the Chicago territory, Lubliner & Trinz and Ascher Brothers had signed contracts for all their theatres for Special Attractions, many of them for full week engagements. "Contracts," according to Mr. Leserman, "are coming in a full month ahead of last year at the same time. I attribute this to the fact that Universal was prepared with their Fall plans earlier and had the pictures to show exhibitors. Frank Mayo in 'The Shark Master' and Hoot Gibson in 'Action' have taken Chicago by storm."

William Oldknow, veteran film man and president of the Consolidated Film Company of Atlanta, with offices all over the South, is now in New York on one of his regular business trips. He is in a more optimistic frame of mind than he has been in the last two years. The Consolidated distributes the Universal product in the South.

"Confidence has returned to the South," said Mr. Oldknow in the Universal offices this week. "You won't know what that means unless you have lived south of the Mason-Dixon line. But to me and to every southerner it means a heap. You know cotton is our barometer. When it goes up we have fair sailing; when it goes down, look out for storms. Cotton has been down. Banks were all loaded up with planters' committments. Nobody could borrow any money or get credit; nobody had any money and nobody had any confidence. Now cotton has started to go up, point by point. And every point means twenty-five million dollars to the South. The banks can pay the planters for the crop and the planters can pay their obligations. In a word, confidence has returned to the South. I look for a tremendous year of real prosperity."

North, South, East, West—all over the United States, there is a gradual improvement under way. Some time ago Carl Laemmle sent word to the entire industry: "For the Love of Mike—Cheer Up!" He predicted a marked improvement in conditions this season, and prophesied a boom.

AND, AS USUAL, CARL LAEMMLE WAS RIGHT!

CENSORS THANK LAEMMLE

Draw Up Set of Resolutions Expressing Gratitude and Appreciation—Loud in Praise of Motives Prompting Calling of Conference

TO show in a fitting manner their appreciation of the whole idea behind Carl Laemmle's invitation to them and the interesting way in which they had been entertained, the Censors before their return to their homes drew up a set of resolutions. These resolutions, properly engrossed and signed, will be sent to Mr. Laemmle. But in the meantime copies were handed to H. M. Berman and Irving G. Thalberg, his lieutenant, and representatives.

The Censors went about it in business-like style. They appointed a committee consisting of Harry L. Knapp, chairman, W. D. McGuire and A. S. Hamilton. The resolutions were sent in the following letter to Harry M. Berman:

My Dear Mr. Berman:

At the last informal conference of the various officials whom Mr. Laemmle invited to visit California as guests of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company. by unanimous vote a committee was appointed and authorized to convey to Mr. Laemmle as their host an expression of the sincere appreciation of all attending the series of conferences which have been held and the trips of inspection to the studios which have proven of such distinct benefit to everyone.

In accordance with this action, we place in your hands, and in the hands of Mr. Irving G. Thalberg, chairman ex-officio of your reception committee, a copy of resolutions as drawn and unanimously approved by your guests.

May we not also take this opportunity to express to you our hearty appreciation of the uniform courtesy extended to each and everyone of us, not only by yourself, who have been untiring in your efforts to make our visit a pleasant one, but to all of your representatives in California acting on your reception committee as assistant to your very capable reception committee chairman, Mr. Thalberg.

We are glad to emphasize that nothing has been left undone to make our visit not only pleasant and enjoyable, but at the same time of such educational value as will result in ultimate benefit to the various communities we represent.

The resolutions, of which we enclose a copy, will be properly engrossed and mailed to your New York office.

In the meantime may we ask you, on the part of the visiting officials and their committee, to extend to Mr. Thalberg, chairman of your reception committee, and your various assistants, our sincere thanks for their untiring efforts in our behalf as expressed in these resolutions:

Resolutions adopted by officials visiting California, August 14th to 21st, 1921, on invitation of Mr. Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, Universal City, Hollywood, California.

Whereas, Mr. Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal City Manufacturing Company, has shown wisdom and foresight in affording us as his guests the opportunity to inspect the motion picture studios of Universal City and Southern California, and thereby we have obtained a knowledge of the technique of motion picture production calculated to assist us in the better discharge of our official duties; and,

Whereas, through the courtesy of Mr. Laemmle and his associates in Southern California we have been unable to meet with officials and members of the Motion Picture Producers' Association of California for the general discussion of such steps as may be taken to further improve the character and excellence of motion pictures generally; and,

Whereas, we believe that a better understanding of public tastes and desires has resulted from the frank discussion of the particulars in which some motion pictures have failed to attain that high standard of excellence which we all agree is most desirable; therefore, be it

Resolved, that we, the undersigned officials, representing the States and municipalities of the United States and Provinces of the Dominion of Canada, and the National Board of Review, hereby convey to Mr. Carl Laemmle, the Universal Film Company, and other motion picture producers, our hearty appreciation of the cordial hospitality extended to us during our inspection of the Southern Californian Motion Picture Studios.

Universal to Film Serial of Darkest Africa

This time the famous expedition of Henry M. Stanley into Africa to find Dr. David Livingston is to be told in eighteen episodes.

Irving B. Thalberg, general manager at Universal City, has just approved the screen adaptation of the famous event as it was written by George Plympton and William Lord Wight, chief of the serial and short reel feature departments at the world's film capital, is completing production plans.

The serial will feature Eileen Sedgwick under the direction of Edward Kull and will be a valuable contribution to visual history as it is taught on the motion picture screen.

While the screen story will be elaborated and the dramatic action intensified, it will follow the historical facts closely.

The event is familiar to millions. In 1871 James Gordon Bennett, owner of the New York Herald, assigned Henry M. Stanley, his Paris correspondent to find Dr. David Livingston, who had then been lost in the depths of the Black Continent for ten years.

Augmenting the original theme will be the screen story of a young girl, a newspaper writer, who joins the expedition, uncovers an amazing plot to revive slavery, and of a young agent of the United States Department of Agriculture who seeks a priceless soil stimulant and a rare species of the octupus plant.

Three Big Directors Signed by Universal

Paul Scardon, Hobart Henley and Dallas Fitzgerald Will Start Work At Once On Productions At Coast Studio

UNIVERSAL has signed Hobart Henley, Dallas Fitzgerald and Paul Scardon as megaphone kings.

The three famous directors will report this week to Irving G. Thalberg, general manager at Universal City, who will assign them to work on scripts now ready for them.

With their arrival Universal City will start the fall production season with fifty-two special attractions and approximately ten big Universal-Jewels scheduled for the year's output.

PRISCILLA DEAN
OUTSIDE THE LAW
LON CHANEY
PRISCILLA DEAN

Beaverboard Jail Front Designed By Luna Lite Theatre, Marion, Ind., For "Outside the Law." By Using Cutouts From the Six- and Twenty-four-sheets Manager Wm. Connors Obtained a Striking and Effective Display For His House.

Paul Scardon will be the first director to start work. He will guide Miss duPont, Universal's spectacular new star, through "Ropes," a photodrama which will be filmed from the one-act play by Daniel Wilbur Steele, which created such a sensation when it appeared in Harper's Magazine. Many critics acclaimed it as "The Novel of the Year."

Scardon began his stage career in Melbourne, Australia, where he was born, appearing for twelve years with such stars as Nance O'Neil, Kyrle Bellew and E. H. Sothern. His screen work began with the old Reliance-Majestic, from where he went to Vitagraph. His best remembered work was "Asene Lupin." Following that he piled up a number of big screen successes, and rapidly became regarded as one of the best directors of the profession.

Almost simultaneously with the starting of production on "Ropes," Dallas Fitzgerald will begin work with Gladys Walton on "The Guttersnipe." The famous little flapper-star will interpret the role of an alley-waif under his guidance and give additional charm to the story of Percival Wilde.

Fitzgerald, besides his ability, has something else in common with another great Universal director — Tod Browning. Both FitzGerald and Browning were born in Louisville, Ky.; both served their apprenticeship as "performers," and both have attained supreme eminence as wielders of the megaphone. FitzGerald's career has been a noteworthy one of which he may well be proud.

Fitzgerald is admirably suited to direct Miss Walton. He began his dramatic work in Louisville, Ky., and recently produced such successes as "The Open Door," "Chains of Evidence" and "Blackmail," the last being a Metro production with Florence Turner playing one of the important roles.

Hobart Henley is en route to Universal City from New York and has not yet been assigned to a star. It is understood, however, that he will be given one of the most important units at the world's film capital. Universal claims to have the best assortment of directors in the motion picture industry, and all of them will contribute their talents to the list of big productions which Carl Laemmle has promised exhibitors for the year.

Jack Conway will start production almost immediately on "The Substitute Millionaire," a clever society drama which will serve Herbert Rawlinson as the popular young star's first Universal starring vehicle since his return to the big studio.

Frank Mayo will return from an extended vacation in time to join the production barrage with "Dr. Jim," a smashing sea-story which will be directed by William Worthington. A strong cast has been engaged.

Edward Kull will again direct Eileen Sedgwick when the famous serial star completes the vacation to which she is entitled after the strenuous work on "Terror Trail," the serial which she has just finished under Kull's direction. The subject chosen for Miss Sedgwick's next vehicle is the search for Dr. Livingston, lost African explorer, by Stanley. Forming one of the most heroic exploits in modern history, this serial will afford Miss Sedgwick a unique opportunity to display her dramatic prowess.

Lee Moran will resume his merrymaking with a short feature comedy in which he will be directed by William Watson.

Irving G. Thalberg, acknowledged to be the keenest judge of production problems on the west coast, is holding several excellent directors in reserve. When they are assigned Stuart Paton, King Baggot, Reaves Eason, Robert Thornby, Jack Ford and others will have units to which they are best suited.

In the meantime production is under way at Universal City on "Winners of the West," a historical serial in which Art Acord is starring under the direction of Edward Laemmle and "The Secret Four," Eddie Polo's forthcoming serial with Albert Russell directing.

Broadway Stampedes "No Woman Knows"

"NO WOMAN KNOWS," Tod Browning's latest Universal-Jewel production, had its premiere last Sunday evening in the Central Theatre, Forty-seventh street and Broadway, and was received with great enthusiasm by an audience which jammed the new Universal playhouse to its doors. The Sunday showing was the beginning of a year's run of Universal pictures in the Broadway house, marking the first time Universal has had its own theatre on Broadway in many years.

The presentation of "No Woman Knows" was arranged by Hugo Riesenfeld, director general of the Rivoli, Rialto and Criterion theatres, New York. His prologue arrangement was simple and tasteful. It consisted of a violin solo, "Kol Nidrei," rendered by Isidore Berger, in keeping with the theme of the picture; while the picture itself was accompanied by special organ music also arranged by Riesenfeld.

THE MAN TAMER

Accompanying the Tod Browning production on the program was an "Out of the Inkwell" comedy by Max Fleisher and a "bubble dance" interpreted by Lillian Powell.

"No Woman Knows" is a picturization of Edna Ferber's famous book, "Fanny Herself." The principal role, "Fanny," was taken by Mabel Julienne Scott, who, it is said, gained new laurels by her interpretation.

In announcing the acquisition of the Central Theatre, Universal made it known that the lobby displays, prologue and special exploitation used in conjunction with the pictures playing at that theatre would be devised to suit every exhibitor in the country. The presentations have been promised as models for exhibitors who later book the picture.

That this policy is sound and is being adhered to was apparent, it is said, at the opening of "No Woman Knows." The prologue was neither elaborate nor over-ornate. The lobby was strikingly decorated with lobby cards from the feature, augmented by pages taken from the book, "Fanny Herself," and by oil paintings.

The picture will remain in the Central Theatre for two weeks, when it will be followed by another Universal, "Moonlight Follies," starring Marie Prevost. Later in the season the theatre will be given over to the presentation of "Foolish Wives," the million dollar von Stroheim picture, now being cut and edited at Universal City.

Harry Carey Ready for Big New Story

HARRY CAREY will start production immediately on "Man to Man," Jackson Gregory's big dramatic story, to be filmed as a Universal-Jewel.

Stuart Paton has been assigned to direct the star by Irving G. Thalberg in recognition of Paton's work as the director of "Reputation" and "Conflict," super-features starring Priscilla Dean.

Continuity for "Man to Man" is being written by George C. Hull, who demonstrated sufficient dramatic speed to suit Carey in several of the star's recent successes. He was assigned to the task by Lucien Hubbard, scenario editor at Universal City, and has the screen script in readiness for the start of production.

"Man to Man" will give Carey an unusual vehicle and one admirably suited to his dramatic power. Briefly it concerns a westerner who goes to the South Seas. He falls as low as it is possible for a gentleman-born to fall and then regains himself magnificently through the influence of a woman.

Universal Again Leads the Way

Continued Feature New Form Serial Based On Actual Thrills In United States History

THOUSANDS of readers of The Saturday Evening Post are endorsing the editorial appearing in the recent issue of August 27, advocating the use of histrical characters and incidents as the basis for photoplays.

Again Universal has served as the trail blazer for this epochal step in motion picture history. Throwing off the shackles of conventionalism and motion picture precedent, Irving G. Thalberg, general manager of Universal City, startled the film world by producing the first continued feature based altogether on authentic historical data.

"Winners of the West," with Art Acord in the starring role, is based on the actual experiences of Capt. John C. Fremon and the gold rush to California in the stirring days of '49. The San Francisco that used to be is graphically pictured in this historically perfect chaptered drama. Months were spent by Edward Laemmle, who is directing the production, in preparation, colllecting data, relative to the costumes and history of the early period in the history of the Golden State.

It is interesting to note that the public taste, as evidenced by The Saturday Evening Post's editorial, is following the lead of Universal for historical drama. It is expected that many other companies will soon fall in line.

In part, The Saturday Evening Post editorial of approval is as follows:

'The substitution of pictures portraying some of the picturesque figures and more striking and significant episodes in American history should certainly be a welcome relief from the artificialties thus far considered as measuring the public taste, and not improbably pictures of this kind would prove to be profitable enterprises. Incidentally, if properly handled these pictures should be an effective agency in the interest of Americanization. To the man not technically informed, but who enjoys the diversion of a good picture, the names of Daniel Boone, Israel Putnam, Marion the Swamp Fox, Paul Revere, Ethan Allen, Nathan Hale—to mention only a few of the conspicuous figures of our early days—certainly suggest the daring deeds of fine spirits which are suitable for reflection on the screen; and Washington, Franklin and Alexander Hamilton not less definitely offer themselves as heroes for treatment in moving pictures which would amply supply the interest aroused by the clash of high purpose and intellect against opposing will and circumstances."

Address of Miss Ferber After Presentation of Tod Browning's Universal-Jewel Screen Adaptation of Her Story, "Fanny Herself," At Trade Showing in Chicago, Ill., Sept. 1.

"A FORCIBLE truth, regarding the improvement of motion pictures comes to my mind, after seeing my own story, 'Fanny Herself,' on the screen." It was Edna Ferber who, speaking not from the standpoint of a "fan" which she says she is not, but from the cold, unbiased viewpoint of the student, was commenting on pictures in general and in particular upon "No Woman Knows," which had just been shown privately in Chicago at the Aryan Grotto Temple, September 1.

"Five years ago the type of picture which has of late made the most decided hit—which as we all know is the story of the home, the story of 'just folks'—would have lost in the reels of sensational, hectic (often unwholesome) films that were considered the only acceptable form of screen entertainment. Five years ago, this story of mine, which Universal has called 'No Woman Knows,' would not have appealed to a producer. It would have been considered too commonplace, too simple, too much like life. But with the success of some of the fine human pictures of family life, a success that has in some cases been a surprise even to the producers, a closer, more accurate understanding of the sort of entertainment that the world wants, has been gained.

"I am pleased with 'No Woman Knows,' which I saw for the first time to-day. I did not feel the disappointment which is said to be usually experienced by authors when being introduced to the picturization of one of their own 'children.' The sincerity of the story, the primary motive of the plot has been recognized beautifully by the director, Tod Browning. In writing it, I was anxious that the idea of a modern woman in the business world, finding that the forces for character-building within herself are more potent than all the undermining influences and petty discouragements that would drag her down even with her own consent at times, would be the dominating impression. I am glad to say that the screen version does promote the same idea."

Her approval makes it unanimous.

HARRY CAREY LOST --- RESCUED FROM SEA!

SEA PLANES and submarine chasers joined in the search for Harry Carey when the famous Universal star's small sailing boat disappeared over the horizon late Saturday night on its way to Sam Clemente, failed to make the island and did not appear over Sunday.

Carey scudded toward Santa Catalina Island all night Saturday, intending to put in for provisions. Near the island a squall snapped off the mast and tore out the rudder. His small boat was whirled along the shore until it reached Squirrel Rocks; then it struck out for the open sea and traveled briskly toward San Clemente under the force of the wind.

There was no water and no food aboard, and the star entertained grave fear for his wife, Mignonne Golden, his sister-in-law and Joseph Harris, a member of his flying squadron, who were with him.

Burning oilsoaked rags from a tin can as a signal flare, Carey attracted the attention of the Juanita, which put to and towed him back to Balboa.

Alarmed at the star's absence, a hurry call was sent for sea-planes to search the coast from the Mexican border to Monterey for the party.

Carey's unusually robust physique enabled him to withstand the trip, but Mrs. Carey and her sister are suffering from the exposure and the anxiety of the cruise. Production on Carey's next Universal-Jewel, "Man to Man," will not be delayed, however.

We Told You So

"Blind Husbands," Von Stroheim's production (six reels). This is good; story, scenic backgrounds and acting are all high-class.—Pastime, Mason, Mich.

"Outside the Law," starring Priscilla Dean (six reels). This is a crackerjack; in my opinion the best Universal has released in a long time. —Happy Hour, Ewen, Mich.

"Reputation," starring Priscilla Dean (six reels). The star in the double role does the best acting of her careeer; the play is exceptionallyg dood and maintained Priscilla Dean's popularity here.—Pastime, Mason, Mich.

"La La Lucille," starring Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran (five reels). Good; kept my patrons laughing all through; it's the kind of picture that makes them come back for more; film good. —Doric, Hannah, N. D.

"Adorable Savage," starring Edith Roberts (five reels). This is a good picture and took fine here; all satisfied.—Happy Hour, Burke, S. D.

"Outside the Law," starring Priscilla Dean and Lon Chaney (Multiple reels). An excellent picture; played here Saturday and Sunday to good business; a big box office attraction; Lon Chaney is worth seeing at any time and Priscilla Dean is a wonder. —Grand, Bemidji, Minn.

"Reputation," starring Priscilla Dean (Multpile reels). A masterpiece; all we can say is there isn't a picture that we have seen that can begin to compare with this production. —Victor, Minocqua, Wis.

Dear Sirs:

"Marking time? Hell, no. Going ahead." You said it, and you have done it.

Your last two releases which we have played here, "The Fighting Lover" and "Desperate Trails," show a thousand per cent improvement over any former pictures with the same two stars, Mayo and Carey, respectively.

After having seen them, and played them to satisfied audiences, I don't worry a bit about my new season's Universals. I know I'm sitting pretty with a list of business building pictures lined up from Universal.

"Going ahead? Damn right. Full speed."

Sincerely,

Gentlemen:

Our new serial, "The White Horseman," of which we have run three episodes, is the best serial we have had from Universal. It exceeds Art Acords' former effort, "The Moon Riders," and up to the present is far ahead of our expectations as a business getter during the hot weather.

The fact that each episode, so far, has closed with three of the principals in precarious and dangerous positions, keeps our audience on the jump and maintains their interest and curiosity for the following installment.

If this serial keeps up this pace we can only say it's a "humdinger."

Sincerely,
M. LOEWENSTEIN, Mgr,

"FOOLISH WIVES." Looks like a big picture. Saw it in 25 reels. With 42 more to be cut. Lot of film. But Universal has hope. Of release around November. And then you'll see. What I did. Only in better shape. Y'u never can tell. What it's gonna look like. When they cut it. But this is sure. Yep. Sure: unless somethin' goes wrong when they do "Foolish Wives" will make 'em sit up. An' take notice. An' somethin' else. Not only because of th' sets. 'Cause sets never made a picture. Not only because of th' story. Altho' there never was a picture worth a darn without one. Not only because of th' direction. Tho' everybody knows y'u can't have a picture without it. Not only because of th' actin'. Tho' you'll see some that'll make y'u sit up. But——

Because all in all Von Stroheim has proven that he knows his job. There are thrills and story and touches! Boy, what touches. Full of 'em. Cutting may force some of 'em out. But unless it does you're gonna see some that register 100. An' hit th' bull's eye. Where it counts th' most.

POLITE STUFF

F'R instance. There's an American Marine officer. Who is folded in a cape. An' when th' hero-ine, th' wife of the American Ambassador, drops her book he never moves to pick it up. Which gives Stroheim th' chance. To show his polished Russian manners. Y'see he's a Russian Prince in this. He picks up th' book. An' both give that American officer a look. Which would kill off anything except Harry Reichenbach's nerve. Then later th' same officer. Still in the cape. Fails to pick up th' gloves lady hero-ine drops. In an elevator. Givin' a French officer the chancst. An' again she withers him. With a look. Y'know th' kind.

An' then later Missus Hero-ine is in trouble. Th' Russian Prince has decided to pull some dirty work. Yep. Ruff stuff. An' she falls for it. An' is on her way. To his villa. An' again she meets that American Marine Officer. But his cape has fallen from his shoulders. An' he stands stiff. Upright. Waitin' for someone to pick it up. She looks close. Sees he hasn't any arms. Shot off at th' elbow. An' then—while your eyes blur. An' your throat gets thick. An' y'u have trouble swallowin', y'u see her lift up th' cape, put it around him and then lean over and kiss th' wound stripes on his empty sleeves.

MORE OF 'EM

BUT there's a bunch more. All good. All unusual. Some'll have to go in th' cuttin'. But there'll be enuff left. Don't worry. An' th' women'll surely love that stuff where they sees Missus Hero-ine puttin' gloves on as she goes to bed. To keep her hands in shape. Just like homesweethome to 'em.

Then there's th' young woman gettin' her back massaged. Wait till that hits Broadway!

An' th' fire stuff! With th' jump! Hey, boy; let 'er go!

THOSE SETS

LOOK like th' real thing. There's Monte Carlo f'r instance. Man with me had been there. Lost a lot of kale. Knew. Said no one could tell th' diff'-rence. Either outside. Or in. That one set cost $175,000. They had to cut down a young mountain. To build it. An' then had to duplicate it further up th' Coast. That's spendin' money. In skads. But you'll like it. 'Cause Stroheim has planted enuff real foreign atmosphere in and around it. To make y'u forget it was made here. That gamblin' stuff is sure great. It's so true to life y'u wanta yell out: "Put a buck on th' red for me."

(Editor's note: It got me so hard I just hadda quit work. An' go down to Tia Juana. An' boy, it was a good visit. Good f'r everybody but th' bank. Yep. Trimmed 'em.)

But gettin' back to th' picture: Didja ever want to touch a humpback when you were gamblin'? Well, Stroheim has even thought of that. But th' hump didn't work.

SOME WILLUN

WHAT a fine young yeller pup of a willun he makes, too. Y'u get so sore at him you would like to choke him. He's just a no good bum. Even if he does wear corsets. An' th' white uniform of a Russian Prince. He starts off as one of a band of crooks. But as he goes along his crook stuff fades away. An' he shows you th' meanest dod gasted sour imitation of a man ever screened. So that when he is killed. At th' end. An' his dead body starts floatin' out to sea, you're glad. An' gladder still that th' cat he kicked to death is floatin' out with him. Th' face of th' dead cat alongside his own.

It's a fittin' finish.

But that characterization will go down in screen history. It's as fine a bit of work as the great Richard Mansfield gave as Chevral in "A Parisian Romance."

An' that's about as fine as they come.

IS IT THERE

"FOOLISH WIVES" cost over a millyun. An' that's a lot of dough. Yet th' cost doesn't stick out at y'u. Rather it seems to have been spent for th' purpose of building atmosphere. And in that it has been successful. Th' big shots are impressive. But they don't knock you out. They just seem to fit in. To belong. Of course everything is in harmony. Th' villa; th' Opera House; th' pigeon shooting; th' water carnival. All are beautiful shots. Everything is exquisitely done.

An' unless th' dope goes all wrong it'll make money. 'Cause it's a box office. That means money for you, Mister Exhibitor. And in th' end for you, Mister Universal.

DANNY.

LON CHANEY TO STAR IN UNIVERSAL-JEWEL

Production Planned for "Wolf Breed," a Dynamic Narrative of the North Woods

LON CHANEY, one of the most noted character actors on the screen, has been signed by Universal to star in Universal-Jewel pictures, it is announced at the Universal home office. His first feature will be "Wolf Breed," a strong picture of the North Woods, in which he will be supported by a special cast of unusual talent, including Grace Darmond, Irene Rich, Alan Hall, little Stanley Goethals and others equally well known.

Strangely enough, this will be the first feature picture in which Chaney has ever been starred. Although he has played supporting roles of starring importance, including such masterful characterizations as his roles in "The Miracle Man," in "The Penalty" and in "Outside the Law" it remains for Universal, for whom he played in short subjects many years ago, to give him his first star role.

Robert Thornby will direct Chaney in his coming Universal-Jewel. It is said that production will start right away. Thornby has just completed "The Fox," the first Universal-Jewel production of Harry Carey, long a popular favorite in the Universal Special Attraction schedule. Thornby's excellent work in handling "The Fox" is said to have resulted in his choice for the big Chaney picture.

The story has been prepared especially for Lon Chaney, and adapted especially to his unusual abilities as a character delineator. It is said to include an appealing child role, for which little Stanley Goethals, the youngster in "Outside the Law," is eminently fitted, and which will be the featured role next to that of the star.

Of the three important events which have transpired at Universal City during the last ten days, Universal officials say that Chaney's engagement is perhaps the most important by far.

Word of Chaney's engagement, wired to New York from Universal City, came as the climax of a week filled with progressive activities at the big studio. The film censors visiting the Universal plant viewed and gave their O. K. to "Foolish Wives," Erich von Stroheim's million dollar picture. A day or so later Irving Thalberg, Director General at Universal City, engaged three new directors of national reputation, Hobart Henley, Dallas Fitz Gerald and Paul Scardon. Chaney's contract followed.

Immediately after the famous actor's engagement, an all-night conference was held at which Chaney, Thalberg, Harry M. Berman, General Sales Manager for Universal, and Lucien Hubbard, Scenario Chief at Universal City, decided the details of production, cast and direction.

Many elaborate sets are called for by the story. While these are being constructed Chaney's company will go up into the mountains and film certain big out-of-doors sequence of the feature.

The romantic northwoods atmosphere of "Wolf Breed" is being assisted by the work of three snarling wolves from the Universal City arena.

HERBERT RAWLINSON has started work under his new Universal starring contract.

Irving G. Thalberg, Director-General of Universal City, sent the unit into action with Jack Conway directing and "The Substitute Millionaire" as the star's premier starring vehicle.

Lillian Rich, the unusually gifted young British actress, appears opposite the famous star as his leading woman, heading a supporting cast which includes Bert Roach, William Courtwright, Mary Huntress, E. A. Warren, Verne Winter, Frederick Vroom and Doris Pawn.

The story was originally written by Hulbert Footner and purchased by the late George Loane Tucker who planned to film it as a super-feature when death cut short his brilliant career as a producer.

Impressed with the dramatic speed of the story and its particular suitability to Rawlinson, Thalberg authorized Lucien Hubbard, scenario editor at Universal City, to purchase it from the Tucker estate. Wallace Clifton, of Hubbard's staff, wrote the continuity which considerably enlivens the story and gives it one of the most amazing climaxes ever brought to the screen.

Marie Prevost in "Moonlight Follies"

NAN RUTLEDGE was probably the first baby vamp. She started when she was in pinafores. When Nan sauntered through school her flirting abilities increased. She missed the joy of carrying her own books, for the boys lined up like flunkies at her command and then waited to do her home-work.

At eighteen Nan grew no better, and was continually surrounded by a crowd of young men who eventually hoped to assist her father in the management of his money.

Among the perpetual house guests was Rene, an interior decorator, whom Nan tolerated because he danced well and smoked adorable violet cigarettes. Old Man Rutledge, Nan's tempestuous father, was not such a bad old bird, and besides he wrote a mean check, so Nan allowed him to hang around.

The Major was reasonably patient until he learned of a midnight bathing party at his home where the guests carried Rene to the water so he wouldn't bruise his feet. Then he wrecked his private office and sent a message to Nan to report to him immediately.

Behind the glass partition of the door into her father's private sanctum she saw the silhouetted profile of her father in animated conversation with another man.

"Young lady!" shouted her father, as the door swung open, "You've got to marry someone immediately; someone who will hold you down to earth."

"All right," said Nan, "I'll marry the man you were talking to. Was he the janitor or a client?"

"My God—you've never seen him," stormed the Major.

"All the more reason for marrying him," answered Nan. "Trot him in."

In came Anthony Griswold. Anthony bowed affably to Nan and immediately resumed his interest in a piece of fishing tackle which he had in his hand.

Nan rushed back home and told Crissy, her pal, about it. They decided to make Tony love Nan. But Tony was as hard to land as a wrathy whale. But Tony was too bulky through the chest not to feel a thrill when Nan cast herself into his arms — figuratively speaking, of course — and he asked her to marry him. Nan had planned to turn him down, but she forgot her lines and said "Yes."

Then she rushed to her room and began to worry about it. Rene was so sweetly languid that he wouldn't hurt a weasel. He danced adorably and when he did smoke it was always a violet cigarette. Nan decided to elope with Rene.

Two hours later she was skimming over a moonlit road with Rene driving. He drove happily, not knowing that Tony had drained the water out of his radiator against such an emergency. The car boiled, steamed, hissed, wheezed and blew up. Rene went for water. Then in about a minute came Tony in his car. He scooped Nan into the seat beside him and swung up the road at sixty. Seven hours later he lifted Nan out at his Maine woods fish-fishing shack and told her to go to bed.

Rene followed and persuaded a small boy to hold Tony at bay with a waving gun while he took Nan back into his car and rushed her back home. Again in her boudoir Nan began to think of the odor of frying bacon on a crisp morning; of Tony, who could handle himself in any situation and of Rene, who looked like a corset model. She jumped into her car, turned it north and scooted back to Tony.

MARIE PREVOST in "MOONLIGHT FOLLIES" IT'S A UNIVERSAL

"Cuddle up to Universal—you'll be needing us"
52 Universal Special Attractions this year.

Regarding Marie Prevost, the Star of "Moonlight Follies"

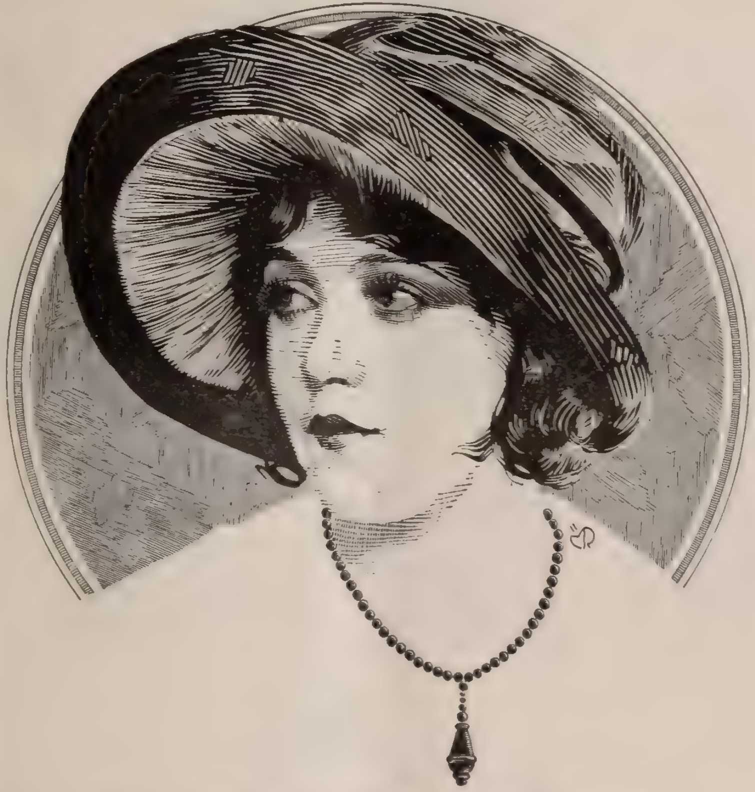
THE girl who made the California beaches famous! The girl who made papa pop-eyed and mama sigh for envy of her beauty.

The bathing queen no more—Marie Prevost, dramatic star and comedienne.

The former Sennett comedy queen has accepted a long term starring contract with Universal, to appear in a series of comedy dramas, the first of which is "Moonlight Follies," an adaptation for the screen of Percival Wilde's scintillating story, "The Butterfly."

Sarnia, Canada, is the birthplace of Marie Prevost, but Los Angeles is her home. Her early schooling was at the Glen Taylor School in Alameda, California, and for a time she attended the Loretta Heights Seminary, just outside of Denver. Later she attended St. Mary's School in Los Angeles, California.

Swimming on the hot days and golf on the cool, is the athletic program set down by the Universal star for keeping herself in the pink of physical perfection, and is the secret which has made her the most admired figure on the motion picture screen. Artists say she has the perfect form.



Marie Prevost, Universal Star, In "Moonlight Follies."

Marie Prevost just "happened into the movies." Visiting a girl friend at Mack Sennett's studio, her unusual type of beauty attracted the producer's attention and she was given a chance. Her success was immediate—and together with Gloria Swanson, Phyllis Haver and Mary Thurman, she formed the beauty squadron. And like her Sennett sisters, she has deserted the comedy for the drama, where her latent dramatic talents as well as her physical beauty may be fully appreciated.

Saucy black eyes, bobbed auburn hair adds a crowning glory to the modern Psyche who has forsaken the limpid pool for the more serious drama and is now thrilling hundreds at the .... Theatre in "Moonlight Follies."

Miss Prevost gained considerable prominence a short time ago by rescuing King Baggot and his assistant director from drowning. While photographing some scenes in the magnificent swimming-pool at the Coffin estate, Pasadena, Nat Ross, the assistant director, lost his balance and fell into the pool. Baggot was stunned by his dive to save him. Miss Prevost succeeded in rescuing both of them.

"CAVE-MAN" ALWAYS WINS, BATHING BEAUTY DECLARES

"AS a general rule, the man who pays no attention to women is the most sought after. I guess it's the old story of wanting what you can't have," sagely comments Marie Prevost, appearing in her first Universal feature, "Moonlight Follies," at the .... Theatre.

"Percival Wilde certainly understood women when he wrote 'Moonlight Follies,' and created the role of Nan Rutledge. Nan is the modern young flapper with too much money and too indulgent a father, whose chief amusement in life is to see how many men she can make fall desperately in love with her. And then just as soon as she has them safely corraled, she loses all interest in their affection.

"Nan is a type that I have enjoyed portraying. It is a characterization that I would like to follow all through my Universal features," added the former bathing beauty.

"Then along comes the man-who-doesn't-care-about-women — Anthony Griswold of Moonlight Follies. Immediately Nan tries her wiles on him, and finding that they do not work, she becomes interested. Here is a new species—a man who can't be vamped."

"But Tony is adamant—he doesn't crumble—and Nan becomes more interested. The colder Tony is, the warmer is Nan's devotion. She is falling in love."

"And then Tony opens his eyes—he finds out what he has been missing all his life—his heart goes pitty-pat for Nan. And they all live happy ever after."

"All of which only goes to show," concluded Miss Prevost in her advice to young men, "if you want them, you've got to keep them guessing. The meaner you treat them, the better they like it."

Marie Prevost and her bathing suit have separated. Henceforth this bewitching little star will appear only in the robes of a full-fledged dramatic star.

Miss Prevost seems to have the happy faculty of injecting her own buoyant personality into her screen work. Even in her Sennett comedies, her effervescent originality and pep gave her a screen distinction that stands her in good stead in her more serious starring roles.

In "Moonlight Follies," which King Baggot directed from an original story by Percival Wilde, Miss Prevost creates a type for which she is peculiarly gifted by a kind nature—the appealing, luring, innocent "baby vamp" with the "come-and-get-me" eyes.

Those who decry the loss to the screen of the movies' most beautiful figure will be silenced when they see "Moonlight Follies," Miss Prevost's first Universal comedy drama, which is now showing at the .... Theatre ....

WHAT makes a good motion picture?

Is it the star, the director, the cameraman, the author, the continuity writer, the property man, or a happy combination of all of them?

The public taste in the last few years has changed. Formerly all that was necessary to fill a theatre was to announce a sex drama. Now, happily, the bright, sparkling comedy drama is in vogue.

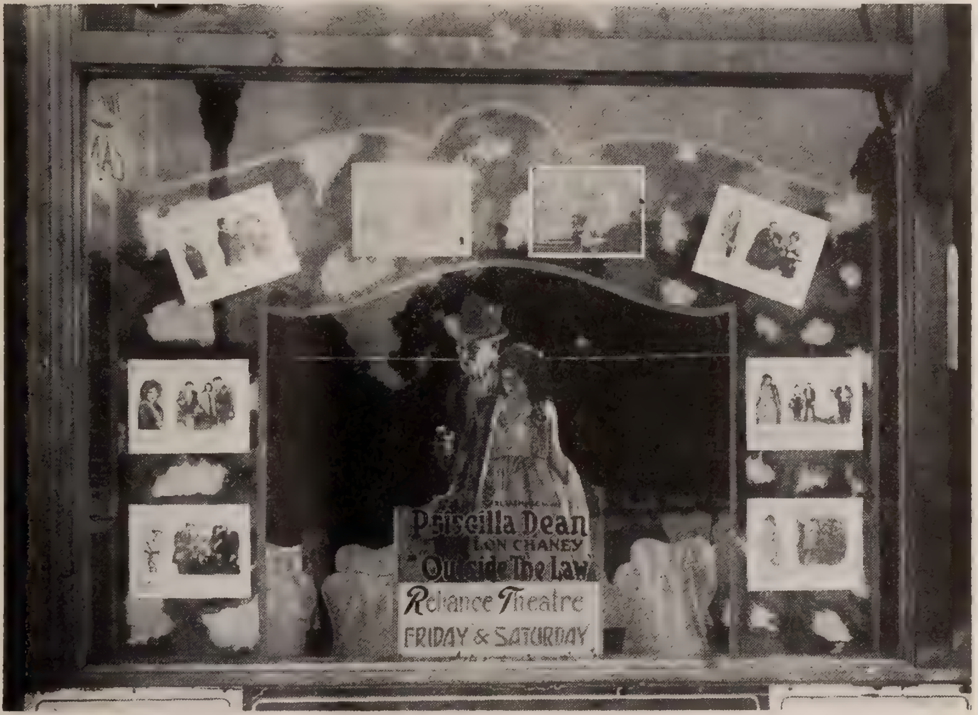
Harold Ziegler Orginates Effective Window Display

COMBINING paint and a cutout got a very pretty design for H. Ziegler, of the Reliance Theatre, Orangeburg, S. C., for Priscilla Dean in the Universal feature, "Outside the Law." Generally a window is all paint or all paper, but the combination is attractive, if you know how to get the paint on.

First the stills were pasted down, and this was the most delicate part of the job, for the print must be well soaked and then squegeed to the window, so that no air bubbles are left. Any bubble will give an apparently opaque spot. A photographic squegee will do the work nicely with a little starch paste, but if you cannot get one, try a piece of weather stripping; the sort with a rubber loop set into the wood.

After the prints had dried down, the arch design was painted on with water colors, and the cutout set in.

This display was made in a drug store window and attracted much attention because of the advantageous location of the store.



An Effective Combination Display from Harold Ziegler, of the Reliance Theatre, Orangeburg, S. C., for Priscilla Dean in "Outside the Law", the Smashing Universal-Jewel Success. The Stills Were First Pasted on and the Arch Design Later Put in With Water Colors.

SPIRITS DIRECT PHOTOPLAY THROUGH ASTRAL IMPULSES

DURING the filming of "No Woman Knows," the adaptation of Edna Ferber's novel, "Fanny Herself," there existed continuously a peculiar, mysterious and intangible influence of actuality about the picture which impressed every person connected with it.

"The story was more than a story and the characters were more than merely roles to be portrayed by clever actors," declared Tod Browning, the director.

"As we progressed with it, we became impressed with the fact that we had all lost sight of the idea that we were trying merely to make a picture and had become imbued with the thought that we must make the various people in the story live and breathe and feel as they would in real life.

"Some time more will be known concerning that occult thing now called the Fourth Dimension, but I am sure that every person who has worked in the making of moving pictures has felt the possibility of leaping over the tangible barriers that constitute the material world into that vague realm in which solid objects lose their significance and thoughts become things merely by thinking them."

EDNA FERBER COMMENCED WRITING CAREER AS "CUB"

KALAMAZOO, MICH., is the birthplace of Edna Ferber.

The famous authoress, who overcame almost insurmountable difficulties in reaching her present literary heights, began her journalistic career as a reporter on the Appleton Daily Crescent, of Appleton, Wis., at the age of 17. Later her newspaper work took her to the Milwaukee Journal and The Chicago Tribune. It was at this time that she attracted national attention by her realistic, vivid short stories which were appearing in different magazines.

"'Fanny Herself" is considered by many her greatest achievement. Other notable successes are "Buttered Side Down," "Roast Beef Medium," "Emma McChesney & Co." and "Cheerful By Request."

Realism is the vital element in all Edna Ferbor's works. Her characters breathe and feel and love—they are human. She paints life as she sees it—not as it should be. She is possessed of that magic gift of knowing the human heart. Under the skin lies humanity, believes Miss Ferber. Laughter and tears run the gamut of emotions in her stories.

Perhaps her greatest forte is the portrayal of the true Jewish family life, with all its tenderness, its devotion and sorrows.

"Fanny Herself" has been interpreted on the screen by Mabel Julienne Scott, heading an all-star cast in "No Woman Knows," a drama of love and devotion, which comes to the .... Theatre on .... as a Universal-Jewel production.

PITY THE POOR "FILM-HEAVY," HE HASN'T A SINGLE FRIEND!

HE is the most despicable creature on earth—he is universally hated—the man who has no friends.

Stuart Holmes lay claim to that distinction, but only because of his refined, polished villainy on the screen. He is perhaps the most famous of the movie "Social bad-men."

Villainy and Stuart Holmes are always associated together. Even during his successful stage career, his splendid throttling of the heroine drew down the approving hisses of the gallery enthusiasts. "Judas" in "The Holy City" was one of his most noteworthy roles.

Off the screen, Holmes is the meekest, most amiable fellow—the exact antithesis of the screen Holmes. A regular "Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde" is this noted actor.

Another disconcerting fact, upsetting the best of the public's ideas concerning villains, is Holmes' hair. It is red. A fact very difficult to associate with murder and other tricks of the villain's art.

As "Fenger," the suave department head of a Chicago mail-order house in "No Woman Knows," the Universal-Jewel Heart-drama, Holmes is superb.

The production, adapted from Edna Ferber's best seller, "Fanny Herself," is to be shown at the .... Theatre on ....

The Story of "No Woman Knows" Based on Edna Ferber's Story "Fanny Herself"

IN the small town of Winnebago, Wisconsin, Molly Brandeis is confronted with the problem of wresting a livelihood for herself and her children, Fanny and Theodore, out of the Brandeis bazaar, the only asset left to her after the death of her impractical, day-dreaming husband. When he lived, he believed a woman's place was the home, and he denied Molly the right to help him about the store. However, a natural born business sense develops rapidly, and before another winter passes Molly has changed what was an insolvent business into one that more than paid expenses for them all.

Fanny, the heroine of the story, is a girl of many moods, a strange mixture of tom-boy and bookworm—inheriting the poetic nature of her father, with none of his weaknesses, and much of her mother's courageous spirit.

Theodore develops at this early stage the promise of talent as a violinist. He is heard by the great genius Schabelitz, causing a mingling of joy and sorrow in the heart of Molly when he informs her that Ted should be sent to the great teacher, Auer. The joy, because of her own great belief in the genius of her boy, the sorrow because of the sacrifices to be made to foster this promise of genius. She does not think entirely of herself, but rather more of Fanny. Fanny, however, is courageous and generous as she expresses her childish willingness to give up everything dear to a girl's heart and convinces her mother nothing must stand in Ted's way

MABEL JULIENNE SCOTT in "NO WOMAN KNOWS"

So the years pass and Ted is still in Europe. His first step is completed. His study days are over. And back in Winnebago, Fanny has taken over the management of the bazaar, developing unusual business genius in her efforts to make the shop meet the continual drain of Ted's increasing demands. Three years pass after many sacrifices and tears; and through all of them Fanny gives and gives. One night Fanny goes ice-skating with a group of boys and girls. Fanny does not want to go, due mainly to her mother's steadily declining health. Fanny is puzzled, but she does not know that Molly has received a shock from which she never recovers—the news from Ted of his marriage to a cabaret girl in Vienna. At the ice-pond, Fanny renews the acquaintanceship of Clarence Heyl, a former schoolmate. But Fanny's thoughts are back with her mother—and intuitively she feels she should be there. Had she only known! For even now the doctor has put Molly to bed, warning her that she is dangerously ill. The doctor understands and sends for the rabbi. When Fanny returns, Mollly is on the verge of death, holding off the last moments until Fanny arrives. Watching her mother being taken away from her, strikes a new note in Fanny's heart. After the funeral and the subsequent discovery of Ted's letters and the news they contain, Fanny undergoes a startling change; she disposes of the bazaar and prepares to tear herself from every tie in Winnebago, and is on the way to Father Fitzpatrick to say good-bye to him—the last of the farewells before she leaves for Chicago to start her new career. She swears she will kill all sentiment, all love—all that is fine—to achieve commercial success.

Father Fitzpatrick is considerably worried as he hears Fanny outline to him her plan of action. She wants money, position, success. She is done for all time with sacrifices and self-denials. She will drive out of her blood the generousness, the warm-heartedness and make of herself a cool, calculating business woman, seeking but one thing—success. She departs from Winnebago to accept a position in the infant's wear department of the world's largest mail order house in Chicago.

The materialistic gathers as an ally Michael Fenger, the general manager of the big plant; the spiritualistic takes Clarence Heyl. And the fight begins.

Fenger, a man whose business life is written in the words, System, Efficiency, Results; a man whose private life is one hideous night-mare, sees the business genius in Fanny at a glance. He fully realizes the heights he may reach with Fanny as his mate, and he offers Fanny all of this, believing she will jump at the opportunity. But she resents Fenger's proposal. Her fate intervenes and a telegram arrives announcing the arrival of Ted on the following morning. Once more the spiritualistic and the materialistic struggle to win her—and the real Fanny again asserts itself. She destroys the letter of resignation, refuses to accept Heyl's generous offer of assistance, if she will only marry him, and sends him away telling him that it is her burden, not his. She glady reverts to the old Fanny, the real girl ready to sacrifice everything for her brother. But she reckons without Fenger. He is not the sort of man accustomed to accepting defeat so easily and persuades Fanny to let him help Theodore. The first concert is over and, thanks to Fenger's aid, Ted is a huge success. Fanny cannot help but think it is due entirely to what Fenger has done and her heart softens. On the afternoon of the second recital Fanny returns home and discovers Ted and the baby gone. A brief note attached to a telegram from Ted's wife tells her everything. His love for his wife was too great—he gives up everything to go back to her. This breaks Fanny's spirit so that, when Fenger calls to take them to dinner, he finds it a simple thing to mould Fanny to his way of thinking. Fanny, despairing, is ready for anything—and Fenger persuades her to get dressed and "step-out" with him for once in her life. Her mind is still too dazed to know exactly what she is doing—and she is a picture of beauty as she steps out of her bedroom, takes Fenger's arm, and starts for the doorway—when it suddenly opens and Heyl stands looking at them. At sight of him the real Fanny asserts itself once and sinks to a chair calling pleadingly to Clarence—finding comfort at last in his embrace. Fenger can do no more than turn away. The story ends.

UNIVERSAL - JEWEL COMEDY DE LUXE

Newspapers Enthuse Over "No Woman Knows"

SAYS the Wisconsin News, September 1, 1921, regarding Tod Browning's Universal-Jewel, "No Woman Knows," adapted from Edna Ferber's story, "Fanny Herself":

"If I'm any prophet, the Milwaukee manager who plays 'No Woman Knows' will have a big week's business.

"'No Woman Knows' is Universal's picture play version of Edna Ferber's novel, 'Fanny Herself.' If anything the picture is more graphic, more entertaining and has more vitality than the novel. It was shown yesterday by Universal to a handful of invited guests and all were enthusiastic in its praise.

"Milwaukee and Wisconsin will doubtless be even more interested than the rest of the world in the production, for Miss Ferber began her professional career on an Appleton newspaper, following that with three years in general reporting in Milwaukee before she graduated to a New York journal and then drifted into story writing.

"But 'No Woman Knows' will not be dependent upon such superficial reasons for favor. It is a striking picture of a certain phase of Jewish life in America, and it is presented so sincerely and so naturally that it must impress those who see it as a true chronicle. Artificiality has no place in it. There is no dependence upon strained effects, or the unusual, to gain interest. And because of this naturalness and sincerity I make my prophecy that the picture will find popularity.

"The cast is headed by Mabel Julienne Scott as Fanny, Stuart Holmes as the tempter, Mr. Fenger; E. A. Warren as Fanny's father, and Max and Joe Davidson as Theodore in childhood and Theodore as a man, respectively.

"As those who have read the story will recall, the first scenes are in a Wisconsin town, showing the small shop kept by a Jew and his wife, who with their two youngsters, Fanny and Theodore, live in rooms back of the store. There are many little touches that suggest 'cribbing' from life. One of these is the disgust of the old shopkeeper when his customers reject his wares because they can get them cheaper through a mail-order house in Chicago.

"As Miss Ferber's parents kept a small shop in Appleton, it is not unbelievable that she heard those same plaints in her youth. Another was the call of the rabbi and his interest in the affairs of the family.

"One of the most appealing bits in the picture is when a great musician is brought by the rabbi to the little home to hear Theodore play on his violin and pronounces him a genius. Fanny, with an equal talent for drawing, makes a picture of the musician, and the child's acting is delightful as she mischievously caricatures the old chap.

"The tender affection of Jewish life is given expression in many unimportant incidents. Later when Theodore is sent to Berlin to study violin, and the life of sacrifice for mother and sister begin, the characteristic patience of the Hebrew with an object to attain is exemplified in the ceaseless grind of the two women to provide funds for the boy.

"When the mother dies, Fanny attempts to free herself of the burden of Theodore's care, but struggles in vain, and at one point seems about to yield to the blandishments of her employer, Mr. Fenger, when fate in the form of her oldtime lover provides a bar to her downfall and a foundation for a happier life in the future."

The Milwaukee Journal, September 1, 1921, writes as follows:

"Some time this fall a theatre in Appleton, Wis., will run a certain motion picture for ten days. And Appleton has never booked a picture for longer than a four-day run.

"The reason for the exception?

"Because that picture is 'No Woman Knows,' the film version of a story written by one of Appleton's own daughters, Edna Ferber.

"All Milwaukee knows Edna Ferber. 'Dawn O'Hara,' her first story, is a faithful description of local newspaper life as she saw it while a reporter on the Milwaukee Journal. 'Fanny Herself,' from which 'No Woman Knows' was screened, is rumored to be the writer's own story.

"We saw the picture run off yesterday at the Toy Theatre. And as a true chronicle of Fanny's unselfish sacrifices and her development through them, it is a splendid production.

"To Milwaukee theatre-goers, who are readers as well, 'Fanny Herself' is undoubtedly too familiar to bear retelling in detail.

"The locale is Winnebago, Wis.

"The role of Fanny is a tremendous undertaking. But Mabel Julienne Scott, the girl in the picture, acted it and apparently has made a success of it.

BABY PEGGY is a litle waif, without a friend in the world. When she loses her doll, Brownie the friend to the homeless, rescues it for her. Then a lifelong friendship is the result. Brownie and Baby Peggy find a pocketbook with a wad of bills in it.

The wallet has been lost by a foppish dude who had secured it to his pocket by means of an elastic. The rubber band causes the billfold to snap back and hit the dude in the back every time Baby Peggy starts to walk off with it. Brownie cleverly severs the elastic by holding it against the rim of a knife-grinding wheel and brings the wallet back to Baby Peggy.

The waif and her guardian, Brownie, see to it that the waif is outfitted in a new riding-habit, and then Brownie even goes so far as to get her a pony. After helping her on the pony they jaunt through the woods.

Later, tiring of the horse (she gets thrown off—first) she drives an automobile, which happens to stand nearby. After a hair-raising escapade Baby Peggy finds it is all a dream.

Number 71

Subtitles.—Last picture of the American officers and crew, made the day before the flight. Sixteen of these men and twenty-eight British airmen perished in the disaster. U. S. naval officers who were to command the ZR-2. Left to right—Lieut-Commander Coil, Commander L. H. Maxfield, Lieut. Pennoyer, Lieut. Commander Bieg, Lieut. M. H. Esterly. With the exception of Pennoyer all are dead. Commander L. H. Maxfield who was to fly the dirigible across the Atlantic and whose body was found in the river Humber. Flight Lieut. Wann of the British Air Service, who was steering the dirigible when the explosion occurred, and the great ship plunged into the river. Wann was rescued. The day of the ill-fated flight, the American crew clamber aboard early. Stores are loaded in the front gondola. A peep through the "nose" of the giant. A swarm of human ants guide the graceful monster out of her hangar. One of her six-engine gondolas. Commander Maxfield is the last to go aboard. The propellers start; the great ship rises and flies swiftly towards her doom. While sailing over Hull the framework snapped in the middle, two explosions occurred, and in a few seconds the great dirigible was a mass of debris. Curious crowds throng the pier-head. American and British officers inspect the wreckage. A body of one of the victims is recovered, only to be lost again. Norman Walker (without hat) the only American survivor. Reverently the victims are brought ashore. A tangled mass of steel—the remains of the world's greatest airship.

Episode Eighteen

"Buried Treasure"

JACK manages to get a revolver dropped by one of the wounded bandits and shoots through Dolores' bonds. She releases him. The Mystery Woman sees a box of dynamite in Satan's auto, suspects him of plotting some villainy with it and buries it, by chance, in the spot where Merton had commenced digging for the treasure.

One of the bandits strikes it with a pick as he digs for the treasure and a terrific explosion follows, unearthing the treasure. In the meantime Satan has recaptured Merton and Dolores and are about to kill them when the sailors arrive and rescue the pair.

The Mystery Woman asks mercy for Satan and reveals the fact she is his daughter—he had deserted her mother and her soon after her birth. Satan and the men, however, are marched off to prison. One of Satan's hirelings effect a jail delivery. The bandits all rush to Merton's just as he is about to marry Dolores.

Hearing a suspicious noise in the garden, Merton steps out from the house and is seized by Satan who draws a revolver and takes deliberate aim at Jack. The Captain of the Port overhears the scuffle and rushing through a nearby door, shoots and kills the bandit. The wedding takes place and the Mystery Woman admits her love for the Captain of the Port.

MARIE PREVOST'S first Universal starring vehicle, "Moonlight Follies," has been received in the East and is pronounced by those who have seen it to be one of the best five-reelers of the year. Although it is not classed as a Universal-Jewel production it is so good that Universal has booked it for the Central Theatre, beginning September 18.

The picture was directed by King Baggot, from an original story by Percival Wilde. Miss Prevost, by reason of her excellent work in this, her first starring picture, has jumped to place among the leading Universal stars.

Captain Fremont Saves Besieged Wagon Train

"WINNERS OF THE WEST"

Episode Three

"Perils of the Plains"

The wagon train is demoralized by their ammunition wagon catching fire. With their attention divided between trying to fight off the Indians and putting out the fire they fall an easy prey to the savages, who get inside their line of wagons and engage the pioneers in hand-to-hand conflict.

The party faces annihilation when Captain John C. Fremont and his party on their way West to the Pacific Coast (Fourth Expedition) hear the firing and ride to their rescue, drive off the Indians and save the day.

Art fights off the Indians and returns to the wagon train with Betty, where he is hailed by the party as the hero of the day. Louis Blair, whose carelessness resulted in Betty's danger, is furious at the thought of Standish accompanying them West.

That night, camped in the hills, Standish tells Betty and her of his map of the gold cave in California. Blair on guard overhears this and realizes that Standish has found the map, which he (Blair) had copied before leaving Boonville. He plots with "Red" Walsh, a worthless desperado of the party to steal the map from Standish, while he is asleep that night.

Standish, however, has expected some such move and has laid a trap for him. He catches Walsh and after beating him up makes him prisoner to be turned over to the authorities at Bent's when they reach that point.

As the party is about to move forward next morning, Louis Blair discovers a nut off a hind axle of Edwards' wagon, which Art tried to drive. Instead of telling them of his discovery he says nothing and persuades Betty to walk across the canyon with him and meet the train after it has crossed the ford higher up.

As they cross over a mountain stream on a log the log breaks and they fall to the stream below, which threatens to carry them over a falls.

Standish driving the wagon is called inside it by the prisoner who is tied inside. While he is in the wagon, the wheel comes off and the wagon rolls down the side of the hill to the bottom of the canyon, two hundred feet below.

Band of Oil Swindlers Tricked by Novel Ruse

Cyclone Smith Series No. 2

"A Battle Against Odds"

JOHN ROGERS holds an option on some valuable oil lands. Hastings, a crooked lawyer, learns of the option and hires a band of outlaws to get it from Rogers who is ignorant of its real value. Rogers sends his daughter to town to have the option registered and she is relieved of the paper by the thugs.

She notifies the sheriff, who picks up the trail and is after them. Cyclone Smith arrives in town and the crook with the option slips it into his grip as the sheriff appears. The crook denies having it and after being searched the sheriff is compelled to let him go. The crook attempts to recover it from Cyclone but succeeds only in getting a beating.

Hastings enlists the aid of a girl from the dance hall, who goes to Cyclone with a pitiful tale and apparent sincerity which convinces Cyclone, and he returns the option to her.

Cyclone returns to her house and gaining entrance, starts a search. He finds a note from Hastings, telling the girl to meet him at a certain shack and bring the option with her. Cyclone starts for the shack. He arrives there as the girl is receiving her pay from Hastings. Cyclone attacks the lawyer and in the fight that follows the girl grabs up the option and makes her getaway. Cyclone overcomes Hastings and goes in pursuit. Hastings' band arrives and he goes iwht them in pursuit of Cyclone.

On the way Cyclone meets the sheriff and his posse who are still trailing the band. He tells the sheriff where he can find Hastings who has been the instigator of the robbery. The posse goes toward the shack and sees the band aproaching in pursuit of Cyclone. A fight follows and Hastings and his band are captured. In town the girl tries to make her getaway via the stage. She places the option in her grip. The stage is crowded. As Cyclone approaches he sees the driver throw the girl's grip on top of the stage.

He follows, catches hold of the rear and lifts himself to the top. He opens the girl's grip, extacts the option and returns it to the original owner.

"TERROR TRAIL"

Episode Eleven

"The Forest of Fear"

ELAINE and Bruce are caught in the animal pit by the savages who are hunting for wild animals. They are taken to the savage camp. There they find the strange hermit, the animal trainer, in whom they recognize a white man, which fact causes them to hope for a rescue. But the hermit seems strangely reluctant to aid. He finally tells Elaine that he can get her away, but that the man, Bruce, must remain with the savages.

Here Elaine finds many strange sights—a huge elephant chained near the house, a puma, which roams about the place as would a tame cat. Frightened at first, a certain assurance gradually comes to her. She learns that the hermit traps the beasts and sells them to the infrequent ships which pass. Elaine asks when there will be another ship, but the hermit coldly says he does not know. He asks her what she and Bruce were doing here. She tells him of the wreck of their ship, but does not inform him of their real errand. He surprises her by asking suddenly if they are out of the secret sevice, but she conceals her surprise at the query and he learns nothing.

At the camp of the savages Bruce is roughly treated when he refuses to eat. His spirit is roused and he hands out a good beating to three or four of the savages. He is led before the chief and feels sure that his end is approaching. But to his surprise the chief decorates him with a string of beads and apparently commends him for his prowess. But Bruce finds that he is still under guard and not expected to leave just yet.

Turned down again by the hermit when she asks his aid in feeding Bruce, Elaine tries to decide it herself. She gets out of the house that night, sets free the elephant and starts for the savage camp. Bruce makes another attempt to escape and gets away with it this time. He meets Elaine on her way to rescue him. They decide to separate and meet at the hermit's in the morning. After a sleepless night, Elaine goes to her morning meal. She is questioned by the hermit as to how she slept, for he knows that she went out during the night. Then he horrifies her by tellher that she need not worry about Bruce any longer. Elaine drops before this crushing blow. She realizes that Bruce faces some terrible danger.

Unusually Fine Picture Introduces Hoot Gibson as a Five Reel Star

Reviewed by Fritz Tidden.

Hoot Gibson has for some time been well known as a featured player of two-reelers. Universal decided to make a full length feature star out of him, and now introduces him in "Action." Gibson makes his bow under unusually fine circumstances. His initial appearance in a five-reel picture will cinch him with the public at one bound for the simple reason that "Action" as a whole is one of the best pictures released this year. It has everything, including a generous amount of humor and the ingredient outlined by the attractive title.

It is stated unqualifiedly that "Action" will be a huge success wherever it is shown, whether it be on Broadway or in Gopher Prairie. If an exhibitor's clientele does not respond to it he might just as well close up his doors because he will have too much difficulty pleasing it. And this is said with full knowledge that some persons do not care for westerns. They will like this one.

REMEMBER?

REMEMBER the tremendous success that Priscilla Dean and Lon Chaney scored in the smashing hit—“Outside the Law”? Remember the way critics and movie fans all over the nation went wild over them?

WELL, so great has been the demand for a picture starring Lon Chaney that Universal has engaged this splendid artist for a great Jewel production which is now in progress, under the direction of Robert Thornby. Title soon to be anounced.

PRISCILLA DEAN is putting the finishing ing touches on “Conflict,” her new Universal-Jewel production, adapted from the novel by Clarence B. Kelland, that has just ended its serial run in ‘The Red Book Magazine.” Stuart Paton is directing the production in which Herbert Rawlinson has one of the leading roles.

RS the WEST"

A true and dramatic Continued Feature built around the stirring adventures that befell the famous expedition of that great Indian fighter and trail-breaker, Capt. John C. Fremont, simultaneously giving life to the daring, lion-hearted figure, of Kit Carson, long the great idol of every American school boy.

A thriller—yet clean; true history—yet fascinating. Crowded with throbbing action and extraordinary incident, peopled with brave men and women—pioneers who had to fight every inch of their way against savage red-skins and wild beasts, conquering the great, wonderful West.

A sure-fire, censor-proof, real-history thriller. A box-office sensation if ever there was one. A tremendous production that is startlingly new and absolutely different—a feature in 18 episodes that will jam your house for 18 weeks. It's made to attract young and old—it's going to draw like a mustard-plaster. It's a sure enough record-wrecker. Don't take our word for it—see it at your nearest Universal Exchange—NOW.

ISTORY THRILLER

YOU know what "The Virgin of Stamboul" did for you and your box-office—you well remember how "Outside the Law" drew like a magnet—you still feel like cheering when you recollect the crowds who saw "Reputation" at your theatre. In all of them Priscilla Dean was the featured star. Every one of them was a great big production —every one a sure-fire, box-office sensation. Every one better than the last.

AND now, get ready for Priscilla Dean's greatest and finest production—the high water mark of her wonderfully successful career.

"CONFLICT"—a great story by that nationally-famous author, Clarence B. Kelland—which ran serially in the "Red Book" for nine months in 1921. The picture is directed by Stuart Paton, who also directed "Reputation." In support of Priscilla Dean, you will see Herbert Rawlinson, who won lasting fame in "Come Through" and who is soon to be featured in Universal Special Attractions.

"CONFLICT" is going to prove itself one of the truly great pictures of the year. Make room for it. Leave yourself open time. You'll need it if you want to cash in BIG.

Exhibitors' Bedtime Story

By Peter Pepper

ONCE upon a time there was an Exhibitor who believed Everything every Salesman told him. Consequently, he filled all his Autumn Dates, and, when he wanted to book some Universal Special Attractions and Jewels, his Schedule was Full and he had To Turn Down a great Opportunity. He did NOT live happily ever after.

On the other hand, there was a Very Wise Manager who had Sufficient Gumption to Reserve some days each week for Something Worth While. So, when the Good Fairy-Godmother from the Universal Exchange appeared, the Very Wise Manager was able to receive the messenger of Good Tidings with a Proper Welcome.

So pleased was the Good Fairy-Godmother with her Reception, that she determined to Reward the Very Wise Manager. And she spoke to him in this wise:

"You have been a Good Child and not Fallen for the Usual Bunk. Therefore, I shall grant you any Three Wishes."

And the Very Wise Manager answered: "Ooh, thank you! Well, First of all, I Wish Business Would Pick Up. Second, I Wish the Censors would Stop Cutting my Features all to Hell. Third, I Wish I Could Make Oodles of Coin so I Shouldn't have to Spend all my Time Worrying."

And the Good Fairy-Godmother replied: "Huh, that's a Cinch — Here Goes." And she Waved her Magic Wand (called a "Fountain Pen") and showed the Very Wise Manager where to make Certain Marks on the Magic Carpet (called a "'U' Contract"). "Now," said the G. F. G. to the V. W. M.: "All your Wishes will be Granted. With the Special Attractions and Universal-Jewels will come Better Box-office Receipts, Absence of Censorship Worries and More Money than you could make in a Dozen Seasons with any other Features."

Soon after the G. F. G. left, it Came to Pass Exactly as she had Prophesied. First there came seven mysterious metal caskets. And what do you Suppose was in them? Why, they contained Seven Wonderful Reels of "No Woman Knows." "Ain't I Lucky?" gasped the V. W. M.

The next morning the V. W. M. got up bright and early to see what other Good Fortune was in Store. He was in such a Hurry to Find Out that his Mother had to send him upstairs Twice to Wash his Neck properly. But he was a Very Wise little boy and Did as he was Told and as a Reward he Received "The Shark Master," starring Frank Mayo.

Late that night, as the Exhibitor was Climbing into his crib, he received another Glad Surprise! What Little Boy or Girl can Guess what it was? No, don't be Silly, it wasn't a Case of Bourbon—it was the First Installment of "Winners of the West," featuring Art Acord.

Next Day the Gentlemen who Drove the Express Wagon brought him another Flock of Happiness Containers. The V. W. M. opened them and found they contained a Print of "The Fox," Harry Carey's First Universal-Jewel, and "Moonlight Follies," Starring Marie Prevost. Shortly afterwards, arrived a Similar Consignment containing Marie Prevost's Special Attraction, "The Girl Who Knew All About Men." Then came more of the Magic Caskets in which were Frank Mayo's "Dr. Jim," Hoot Gibson's "Sure Fire," Gladys Walton's "The Guttersnipe," and several others Equally Wonderful. There was a Peach of a Jewel called "Conflict" with Priscilla Dean and some of the Finest Special Attractions Imaginable, including "The Rage of Paris,"

"The Fox" is Almost Ready, Mr. Exhibitor

HARRY CAREY has won his spurs.

The Ace of the Saddle has been made a Universal-Jewel star and in "The Fox," his initial super-feature, he proved to those who attended he preview at the Universal City projection room recently, that he is worthy of the very great honor.

To the public the trade-name "Universal-Jewel" means that the picture is sent to the screen with the best traditions of Universal City behind it.

In the motion picture industry it means that it is a picture of which Carl Laemmle, the trail-blazer of the silent drama, may well be proud.

"The Fox" stacks up, all in all, as one of the best dramas of the open country ever filmed, and it is particularly pleasing to those who regard Harry Carey as the foremost western actor on the screen.

"The Fox," as it was written by Harry Carey and adapted to the screen by Lucien Hubbard, scenario editor at Universal City, concerns a woebegone tramp who is thrown from a freight train to play a most important part in the destiny of a small desert town. He uncovers the crooked doings of a grasping banker, leads regular United States cavalry into action to break up a gang of desperadoes and wins the girl after the fastest whirl of action which he has ever experienced in his long career as an exponent of the range-riding hero.

Betty Ross Clarke gives Harry Carey admirable support in the leading feminine role, while the remainder of the cast shows such popular players as George Nichols, Gertrude Olmstead, Johnny Harron, Gertrude Claire, Alan Hale, George Cooper, Breezy Eason, Jr., Chas. Lemoyne, C. E. Anderson, and Harley Chambers to good advantage.

"The Fox" was filmed against a scenic background of surpassing magnificence on the Mojave desert. It is jammed to the fade-out with fast and logical action and is in every sense worthy of its designation as a Universal-Jewel.

Harry Carey, in recognition of meritorious services in action, has been awarded the highest motion picture honor. The famous western hero of many a hard-fought screen battle has been made a star of Universal-Jewel features.

Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Company, has conferred this exceptional honor on Carey's newest feature, "The Fox."

"The Fox" is Harry Carey—every inch of him. Powerful, rugged, tattered, ragged, "The Fox" is of Carey's creation.

The story is his. He wrote it, gathering the material from his wealth of picturesque experiences of the western range.

It is probably Harry Carey's greatest epic of the West.

"For years I have waited patiently for my chance, gathering material, types and ideas for a picture that I could really claim as of my own creation. 'The Fox' is it."

Harry Carey studied law at N. Y. U. The stage lure was too strong, however, and another good lawyer went right.

The Most Beautiful Set Ever Made

Gorgeous "Foolish Wives" Set Illuminated By Myriad Incandescents Forms One of the Most Wonderful Spectacles Made By Man

FIVE thousand, six hundred and forty-eight incandescent lamps are used on one building alone on the Monte Carlo set at Universal City, which is now being used by Erich von Stroheim to film "Foolish Wives," the million dollar Universal super-feature production.

The magnificent set, which cost over $200,000 to build, is an electrical marvel. There is a practical street-car, an exact duplicate of the one at Monte Carlo, which is driven electrically. The thousands of lamps are used to outline one of the buildings, the Cafe de Paris, and in various places on the set there are 75 specially designed French electric fixtures, illuminating the enchanted circle of chance around which the buildings of the famous resort are grouped.

"Monte Carlo, California," by Night.

While the cameras record the movement of hundreds of players, a battery of 50 helio-arcs lay down a barrage of light as brilliant as sunrays. The helio-arcs use 150 amperes each and are supplied with power from a special generating plant at Universal City.

In addition to the helio-arcs, hundreds of ordinary arc lamps glow on the fringes of the set to give the greatest possible light for photographing the action.

The illuminating details on the big setting are in charge of Harry Brown, chief electrical engineer at Universal City, who has under him a staff of specialists.

For nearly a week Erich von Stroheim, Universal director, and members of his staff cruised the shores of Catalina Island and Southern California to locate sites for the erection of settings for his next Universal production, "Foolish Wives."

The scenes of this photodrama, which was written by von Stroheim, and in which he will play the role of the heavy (as he did in "Blind Husbands") are laid on the Island of Monaco, and many of the scenes occur in and about the famous gambling casino at Monte Carlo.

Von Stroheim knows the locale thoroughly, but he has added to his personal knowledge of Monte Carlo by reading every available authority on the famous palace of chance. There is no one spot in Southern California which will give a faithful reproduction of the location of the casino, so von Stroheim built certain sections of the gambling palace in different spots. The main part of the building was erected on the rocky shores of Catalina Island; another wing was built at Laguna Beach, and still another part was constructed at Balboa Beach.

Von Stroheim personally selected the various locations.

Tattoo This On Your Hat-band!

HARRY CAREY'S first Universal-Jewel is coming. Exhibitors know the patron pulling power of this star. They have found him to be one of the greatest drawing cards in the entire deck of Universal's artists. They have packed their houses with his Special Attractions. They will smash every record with his first Universal-Jewel.

Their patronage has been built up by Harry Carey's five-reelers. It will grow to stupendous size when their audiences see "The Fox." It is a superlative production, if there ever was one. No pains have been spared to make this first Carey-Jewel the most worth while picture ever made. And it is.

We cannot drive home too emphatically this fact: YOU CANNOT AFFORD TO PASS UP "THE FOX." You, Mr. Exhibitor, know how much money you made with Harry Carey in Special Attractions. Well, you haven't really started to make real money until you book this Carey-Jewel. You know what Priscilla Dean's Jewels can do for your box office, don't you? The Carey-Jewel is, without exaggeration, the best Jewel that Universal ever made. 'Nuff sed.

Perhaps the motion picture industry MIGHT make a better film of smashing Western adventure than "The Fox"; but, doubtless, it never will.

Third Story Ready for Miss duPont

MISS DU PONT, Universal's beautiful young blonde star, will appear as a sculptor in the mad whirl of Parisian night life, in "Clay," the third Universal starring vehicle which has just been selected for her. The story was originally called "The Wind Along the Waste," a widely-read magazine story by Maud Ansley. J. Grubb Alexander is to interpret it for the screen. Production upon the colorful drama will start immediately upon the completion of "Ropes," the Universal picture which now engages the newest star, to find her place in the galaxy of Universal satellites.

"Ropes" was written as a one-act play by Wilbur Daniel Steele and created a mild sensation whit it appeared recently in Harper's magazine. It is in production at Universal City under the direction of Paul Scardon. The story is based upon the lonely existence of the wife of a blind keeper of an isolated lighthouse. Playing opposite Miss du Pont is Pat O'Malley, famed in his own right as a photo-player and one admirably suited to interpret the heroic lover in the picture.

Miss du Pont's elevation to stardom is one of the most interesting chapters in the history of the motion picture industry. Eighteen months ago she was a designer of women's clothes for a big Los Angeles modiste. She was summoned as a technical expert in the filming of "Lombardi, Ltd." With her aptitude for the drama weighted by this brief association, she prevailed upon Rex Ingram, then directing at Universal City, to give her small role in "The Day She Paid," Erich von Stroheim, who was then just assembling his cast for "Foolish Wives," the million-dollar super-film, selected her from among 612 applicants, including practically every feminine star and leading woman of the motion picture industry outside of Universal City to play the principal feminine role in his support in the epochal production. After a year's role in "Foolish Wives" and long before the picture neared its release date, Universal offered Miss du Pont a starring contract and production began on her initial vehicle..

The first story, "The Rage of Paris," which is scheduled for reelase early in October and which has already been pronounced by astute critics as one of the most romantically colorful photodramas ever released by any company.

Eddie Polo Nearing Final Episode of "The Secret Four"

EDDIE POLO is working on the concluding episodes of his latest Universal serial. The story is called "The Secret Four" and deals with the international quest for oil. Albert Russell is directing. Opposite the famous serial star is Kathleen Meyers, one of the most popular of the younger leading women.

Bear Mountain Outing Huge Success

Universal Employees Spin a Mean Toddle Top On Annual Picnic—Jazz Band Puts Pep Into Dancing Contest—Governor Miller Furnishes Worst Weather of Season for Trip

APPROXIMATELY three hundred members and friends of the Universal Association had the time of their young lives at the annual outing of Universal's employees. Despite inclement weather, a great number turned out and voted the party successful in every way.

Boarding the good ship "Nassau" at 10.30 the combined forces of Fort Lee and 1600 Broadway proceeded up the Hudson to the Bear Mountain landing. Buses took the party to the Bear Mountain Park plateau, where the members parked themselves to await the arrival of Old Sol. That gentleman, not fully understanding the announcement made by E. H. Goldstein, thought he was entitled to take the day off from work, too.

While waiting for the aforementioned gentleman to put in an appearance so that the program of athletic contests might be carried out, Harry Fisher's Colored Jazz Band turned out some of the zippiest syncopation heard in some time. After one of the numbers one of the players asked the band leader what they were to play next. "Wang Wang Blues" was the answer. "Oh, Lawd," replied the player, "Ah jes' been playin' dat number!"

Only one touch of tragedy marred the otherwise peaceful calm of the day. Sidney Singerman went out on the lake in a rowboat to eat his lunch and was driven out of sight by the fury of the waves. A rescue party set out but was unable to find a trace of the ex-Glasgowite. Finally, after much searching, a small spot was seen on the horizon. "That's Singerman's boat, all right," declared Supt. Edward F. Murphy. "How can you tell at this distance?" asked Henry Clay Bate, president of the Universal Association. "Oh, you can always tell a Scotchman's boat—there are never any seagulls following it!" Mr. Singerman was so upset by his experience on the raging deep that he had to be taken home in one of the motor trucks belonging to the Ben H. Grimm Trucking Corporation, Inc., of New York City.

During the afternoon an impromptu dancing contest was started. First honors went to the Fort Lee contingent, Miss Irene Kiengle and Matty Bobat winning the event, while second place was given to Miss Grace Christoff and George Rogers. A dark horse had been entered in this event, but he failed to show up. Incidently, this mysterious disappearance of Harry Parsons is one of the most baffling occurrences of its kind in the history of the Missing Persons Bureau, and puts Harry in a class with Charley Ross, "the man behind Dr. Cramer (the fans want to know)," the Elwell murderer, and the two persons who voted for Cox for president.

The moonlight boat trip back was enlivened by the musical efforts of the more talented members of the party. The sail down the Hudson at night was not the least enjoyable feature of the well-arranged and efficiently-executed program.

Credit goes to Messrs. Murphy, Monahan, Bate, Ludwig, Biggart, Singerman, Miss Ruth Barry and all those who gave so unstintingly of their time and effort to put the outing across. The co-operation given by the many members of the Industrial Democracy organization of the Fort Lee factory who attended the picnic, the idea of Mrs. Todd, did much to assure its success. The excellent spirit manifested by all present, and the courtesy of the Universal officials in granting a holiday to the employees were all factors in making the outing so memorable and happy an occasion.

Europe Hungry for Comedies, Says Julius Stern

Century Brand One of Most Popular Products On Continent—Film Humor of Inestimable Value In Bolstering Morale of War-racked Countries Abroad, Says Executive

SOME of the largest countries in Europe in their great fight to re-establish normalcy, have a gnawing hunger for clean comedies, says Julius Stern, president of the Century Comedies, who has spent three months investigating conditions in Paris, London, Berlin, Antwerp and other important European cities. Mr. Stern speaks in a most optimistic vein, and mentions the unusual methods some of the cities and larger owns resort to in their efforts to offset the depression that has prevented the return of normalcy.

These methods are the shooting of two short comedies on the same bill, and more than half of the week is given over to all-comedy programs. This, Mr. Stern points out, does more to keep the people's spirits up than anything else. Cities like Paris, Berlin, Munich, Lyons, Luxembourg, Havre, and the countries of France, Czecho-Slovakia and Germany, resort to motion pictures for propaganda of good cheer more than any other of the countries in Europe, President Stern declared in an exclusive interview. The most popular comedies, according to Mr. Stern, are Sennett, Fox and the ever popular Century Comedies.

The educationals that show the wonders of America are always in demand. Although France and Germany are both producing to a great extent, American films are the most popular. "Passion" and other magnificent foreign products that played the United States are about the most familiar in the larger countries, the reason for this being the majestic presentations they received here.

We Told You So!

"Luring Lips," with Edith Roberts.—Here is a pippin of a picture which came to us with no blaring of trumpets or with no superlative adjectives used to herald it, yet it proved to be a picture worthy of exploitation and a whole lot better than many so-called "super-specials." It is a class A, 100 per cent. winner, and will get the money on added days, if you go to it strong. The title is the only lame thing about it, and to our notion is not at all appropriate. However, we shall bring it back.—J. H. Vaughan, New Orpheum Theatre, Maquoketa, Ia.—Critical patronage.

THE "BOOST CORNER"

RAMEY-SPENCER REALTY COMPANY,
Lyons, Colorado,
August 10, 1921.

Mr. Frank Palmer Werner,
Werner Brothers, Movie Magnates,
Trinity, Texas.

Dear F. P. W.:

I note from reading between the lines in your Tribune advertising that some movie exchange has taken you to a thorough cleaning just about as they took Ramey & Ramey when they started up business, and I want to butt in and tell you that if you are looking for good pictures that will draw you a crowd, average, that will please your patrons, and make you a living profit, and will stand the acid test of pictures, just book up at least three days a week with the nearest Universal Film Exchange. Book one of their serials like "Moon Riders" or "King of the Circus" or the "Great Diamond Mystery," featuring Eileen Sedgwick, a Galveston girl, and with this two reels get a two-reel Universal Century Comedy and a two-reel Hoot Gibson, Eddie Polo or Marie Walcamp Western Picture, which give you five reels of old fashioned Western pictures compressed into two reels, and then on the other two days get the run of Universal Stars like Gladys Walton, the 17-year-old prodigy who has looks that will fade any of them, and oh, boy! get her in "Pink Tights" and knock 'em dead, for Gladys wears those said pink tights in as clean a drama as was ever filmed, Frank Mayo, whose North Woods Pictures are the best going; Eva Novak, Carmel Myers, Edith Roberts, Ann Cornwall, etc., and you will build up satisfied audiences who will soon quit looking for some million-dollar advertised picture featuring some Vera de Vamp who can act like a chunk of dough, and will drive your patrons away, regardless of how much it is advertised. And right here remember that Universal is the only producer who has ever made a million-dollar picture in the United States to date, and it is not yet released. Universal-Jewels are the super-productions of this firm and they are absolutely the best made. Dorothy Phillips in "Once to Every Woman," the greatest drama of home, sweet home ever filmed, with the publicity stunt of having local singer render "Home, Sweet Home" and "Alice Ben Bolt" during the performance, will pack a house in a town the size of Trinity, 3,000 population. The other Jewels are just as good, with a variety of actresses.

In touring over Northern Colorado and talking with exhibitors in towns of 5,000 to 7,500 population, I find that they all use Universal service and they tell me they are the only pictures they can consistently count on to make them any money. Goldwyn has some good productions, and have recently reduced their prices some, but Universal straight through has any of them beat a country block.

One exhibitor in a town of 6,500 made Eva Novak's "Wolves of the North" his Fourth of July special price offering, and it is only a regular program picture with Universal.

On your other days give one day a week to some of the others, and satisfy those who are finicky, but "Cuddle Up To Universal" for "white" treatment and a square deal.

I hape that you will understand the spirit of this letter, and realize that as a fellow exhibitor I like to see you prosper and there is no more certain route than the Universal route.

With best regards,

Your friend,

Paramount Circuit Vamped by "Luring Lips"

Universal Special Attraction, Starring Edith Roberts, Booked by Dominion Theatre, Vancouver. First Time House Has Run a Feature Not Made By Paramount or Realart

FOR the first time in its history, the Dominion Theatre, Vancouver, British Columbia, has run a feature not made by Paramount or Realart. Realizing the superlative merit of Universal Special Attractions, the Dominion Theatre shattered all its traditions and precedent by booking "Luring Lips," Universal's most recent Edith Roberts feature, for an entire week against competition of the heaviest sort.

After seeing a pre-view of the Universal Special Attraction in the projection room of the Canadian Universal Film Co., Ltd., the officials of the Dominion Theatre obtained first run privileges for the entire week of August 22 from Manager Jacobs.

After playing the Dominion Theatre, "Luring Lips" was presented in the entire Paramount Circuit in British Columbia. This recognition of the worth of the Universal product has now reached a point where a considerable portion of exhibitors not only prefer Universal Special Attractions to so-called Super-Features of competitive producers, but also frequently give precedence to Universal short subjects over five-reel films of other brands. Many houses have featured Century Comedies, Universal Serials and other short-reel features in preference to longer features.

Another instance of the overwhelming popularity of Universal Special Attractions was manifest recently in Winnipeg where five out of seven leading theatres played Universal "Gala Weeks" simultaneously. Exhibitors everywhere are realizing the advantages to be derived from "Cuddling Up To Universal's" consistently satisfactory and money-making product.

Exhibitors throughout the United States and Canada have written to officials of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company expressing a belief that the excellent programs offered by that concern have done much to invigorate the industry, and have been responsible to a considerable degree for the increase in patronage recently. Increased receipts attest to the value of 'U' films.

Louise Lorraine Signs for Three Century Comedies

LOUISE LORRAINE, late star of "The Adventures of Tarzan," has signed a contract with Century Comedies to appear in three pictures, in which Miss Lorraine will be the star.

Her first picture for Century has been finished, and has been given the name "Sea Shore Shapes" and will also feature Baby Peggy, Teddy, the brilliant Dane, and Bud Jamison. It will not be a bathing girl picture, but most of the scenes are taken in and around the seashore. The action is fast, thrilling and funny. Teddy, the Dane, and Baby Peggy have prominent parts, and in this comedy a new combination has been formed temporarily.

Other comedies in the making will also play up Teddy and Baby Peggy, and though it seems that Baby Peggy has deserted Brownie, Teddy will take only those parts that require a larger dog than Brownie. "Sea Shore Shapes" was written especially for Miss Lorraine, who secured considerable prominence for her excellent work in a recent Universal serial, "The Flaming Disc." Louise Lorraine is well known for her small parts in former Century Comedies, at which time she was leading woman to Harry Sweet. It has not been decided who will direct Miss Lorraine in the other two Century Comedies.

Harry Carey Ready For Big New Story

HARRY CAREY will be the guest of honor at Tuesday's meeting of the Ad. Club at the Alexandria. The star is in 'Frisco now, getting himself all pepped up for his forthcoming Universal-Jewel feature, "Man to Man." He will rush back, however, in time for the Tuesday luncheon, at which time he will talk about the impetus that advertising gives business.

Production on "Man to Man" will start soon. It is to be filmed from the novel by Jackson Gregory. A particularly capable cast will be engaged for this Universal-Jewel.

Stuart Paton has been assigned to direct the star, by Irving C. Thalberg, in recognition of Paton's work as the director of "Reputation" and "Conflict," super-features starring Priscilla Dean.

Continuity for the picture is being written by George C. Hull. He was assigned to the task by Lucien Hubbard, scenario editor at Universal City, and has the screen script in readiness for the start of production.

"Man to Man" will give Carey an unusual vehicle and one admirably suited to his dramatic power. Briefly, it concerns a westerner who goes to the South Seas. He falls as low as it is possible for a gentleman-born to fall and then regains himself magnificently through the influence of a woman. The cast has not yet been selected.

Winnipeg Almost Solid for "Gala Week"

Five of Seven Leading Theatres Take Advantage of Universal Anniversary Offer With Excellent Results

ANOTHER sensational achievement put over by Manager C. Hague of Canadian Universal Film Company, Ltd., was the booking of Gala Weeks in five of Winnipeg's leading motion picture theatres during the week of August 22. The only other first run houses in Winnipeg, the New Allen and the Capitol, were unable to take advantage of Universal's Anniversary offer on account of previous bookings.

Each of the five theatres running Gala Weeks originated some clever displays for their fronts and lobbies and, in consequence, were able to report most satisfactory box-office receipts for that period. A photograph of the ingenious ballyhoo originated by the Lyceum for "The Man Tamer," Universal's Special Attraction starring Gladys Walton, is shown on this page. Beside this effective exploitation stunt the Lyceum arranged a most attractive lobby display for "The Man Tamer."

HE MAN

Two full sized cut-outs of Gladys Walton in circus costume were placed at either side of the lobby. The front was draped with striped red and white canvas to represent a circus tent. This was labeled, "Main Entrance To Big Top." A cut-out of a typical "spieler" was placed in front of the theatre. This figure bore a large sign, "Big Show Now Going On," and had its arm outstretched and pointing towards the box-office.

Amusing captions were painted on cardboard and hung over the front, and the whole display was topped by a long streamer at either end of which were circus hoops torn in the center and full-size cut-outs of Miss Walton's head peering through. A record box-office repaid the Lyceum for what little trouble it had gone to in order to properly exploit the picture.

A generous display of "paper" by the Monarch Theatre was instrumental in putting over "If Only Jim," a Universal Special Attraction, in great shape. Liberal use of one-, three- and six-sheets in the Monarch's lobby and front proved effective crowd-pullers. Considerable space was devoted to exploiting "Society Dogs," a two-reel Century Comedy starring Brownie the Wonder Dog.

The National Theatre covered the walls of its lobby with artistically-framed lobby-photographs of "Short Skirts" to draw patronage to see the Universal Special Attraction starring Gladys Walton. Many of the audience commented on the simplicity and effectiveness of the National's lobby and congratulated its enterprising manager on his excellent selection of a program for that week. Gladys Walton, the vivacious eighteen-year-old Universal motion picture star, is fast becoming the most popular screen artiste in that city, they declared.

One of the best weeks of its career was had by the Garrick Theatre which played "Luring Lips," Edith Roberts' latest Universal Special Attraction. This is the picture which broke into the Paramount Circuit in British Columbia the same week with such success. After playing the Dominion Theatre in that town—it was the first time that house had ever shown any product other than Paramount or Realart—it was booked solidly over the entire Paramount Circuit in that province.

A well-balance display of one-sheets and lobby cards in front of the Province Theatre gave that house a dignified and artistic appearance for its week's run of "Man Trackers," Universal's Special Attraction, with an all-star cast headed by George Larkin and Josephine Hill.

Gladys Walton Story Started at Universal

JACK PERRIN, well known as a Universal Western star, has been engaged as leading man to play opposite Gladys Walton in the fascinating little Universal star's forthcoming photodrama, "The Guttersnipe." Perrin was leading man for Gladys Walton in her first big success, "Pink Tights." Production on "The Guttersnipe" will start immediately under the direction of Dallas FitzGerald, who has just beeen signed by Universal and whose initial work at Universal City will be to guide Miss Walton through the speedy channels of her latest starring vehicle.

"The Guttersnipe" was written by Percival Wilde, author of many screen successes and is considered to be particularly well suited to Miss Walton's clever screen interpretation. Wilde's most recent Universal success was "Moonlight Follies," Marie Prevost's first starring vehicle.

In theme, "The Guttersnipe" concerns a little waif of the streets, who goes through an amazing sequence of startling adventure before she finds happiness with the man for whom the Fates intended her. The atmosphere of the story is Metropolitan, New York being used as its principal locale with the atmospheric background changing rapidly through its drab, sordid via dolorosa of the slums to the arcady of luxurious comfort.

In addition to Jack Perrin, Dallas FitzGerald has assembled an interesting cast to give Miss Walton capable support. In important roles will be seen such screen favorites as Walter Perry, Kate Price, Ed. Cecil and Sydney Franklin.

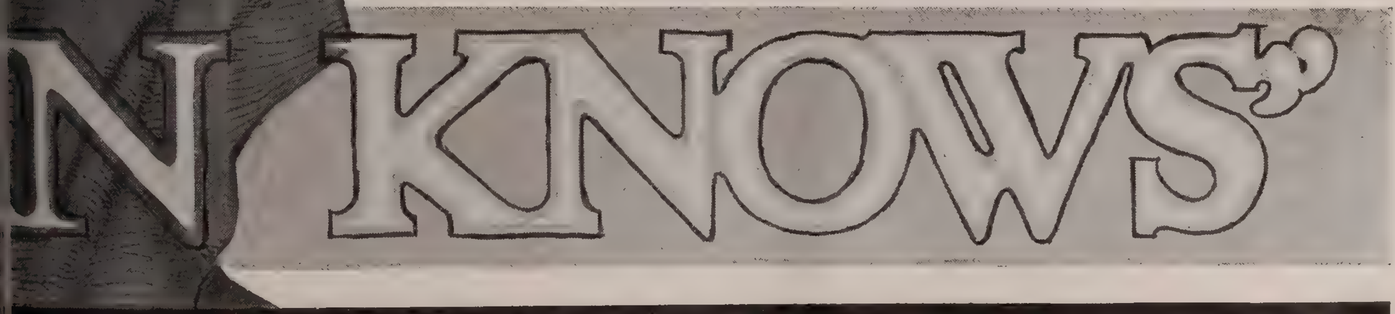
TRADE REVIEW: "It grips and tugs at the heartstrings—one of the most interesting and entertaining photoplays of the season. One of the greatest human documents ever screened. Tears and laughter are intermingled in a most pleasing fashion and everyone should enjoy seeing it."

NEWS: "There is no question about this picture being one of the best sure-fire box-office bets of the season. In fact, any exhibitor who books it is certain to put up his S. R. O. sign. It is the marvelously human incident which offers the greatest appeal. The acting is highly commendable—the types are perfect."

M. P. WORLD: "A positive success. It is a human document. Its human appeal is enormous. There is no let-down in compelling the interest of the onlooker. Tod Browning has accomplished something that he and Universal can well be proud of. Far above the average."

ZIT: "On Sunday night it seemed that everyone who had ever read the story tried to jam, cram and slam his way into the theatre. A film that should meet with the approbation of motion picture devotees."

UNIVERSAL-JEWEL PRODUCTION
Directed by Tod Browning, the man who made "Outside the Law"



Greatest Talent Now Under Universal's Banner

WITHIN the confines of Universal City to-day there are more famous personalities than have ever before been assembled under the banner of one producing organization.

Actually at work to meet Universal's agreement with exhibitors for fifty-two special attractions a year, a number of super-features, scores of short-reel releases and a dozen serials, are fifteen famous stars.

Specializing on Universal-Jewel productions, the utmost in photodramatic entertainment, are Harry Carey and Priscilla Dean. In the group now producing Universal Special Attractions are Gladys Walton, Frank Mayo, Marie Prevost, Hoot Gibson, Miss duPont and Herbert Rawlinson. The serial field is headed by Eddie Polo, the hero of many chaptered screen narratives, and in the same group are Eileen Sedgwick and Art Acord.

Lee Moran heads the list as the famous fun-flinger of a hundred successful comedies. Bert Roach, a comparative newcomer at Universal City, has already established an enviable reputation of screen fun and is hard at work on short-reel feature comedies.

In a class which might be designated as producing super-feature specialties is Erich von Stroheim, the star and director of "Foolish Wives," the million-dollar epoch which goes to the screen as Carl Laemmle's greatest achievement. Then there is Lon Chaney, the noted character star.

It would be an oversight to pass up the Hon. Josephus Martin in speaking of stars. Charles, the elephant de luxe, seems almost as clever as his bow-legged friend, Mr. Martin.

In addition to its contracted stars, Universal employs hundreds of famous players, and the day's roll call is particularly strong in famous names. In one production alone every member of the cast is qualified for stardom. They are playing now in support of Lon Chaney. Opposite the star is Irene Rich, and associated with her in the supporting cast are such notable as Alan Hale, Dagmar Godowsky, Stanley Goethals, the famous little screen kiddie; Spottiswoode Aitken, Herbert Standing and Frank Campeau.

Picking famous names at random from the daily working schedule at Universal City, one finds Lillian Rich playing in supportof Herbert Rawlinson in his photodrama "The Millionaire"; Doris Pawn in the same cast; Pat O'Malley, Lloyd Whitlock and Mary Philbin in support of Miss duPont in "Ropes"; Claire Windsor supporting Frank Mayo in "Dr. Jim," and a dozen more, all great, or near great.

First Rawlinson Vehicle a Maze of Trick Thrills

THERE he is and there he isn't. Who? Why Herbert Rawlinson in his forthcoming Universal mystery photo-drama, "The Millionaire." The star is at work on the story at Universal City and the technical department under the supervision of Archie Hall is adding to the mystery with an amazing series of secret doors, hidden passageways and all the tricks and devices of the man who likes to disappear into thin air when there is a knock at the door.

Rights to "The Millionaire" were purchased by Irving G. Thalberg, director general at Universal City, from the estate of the late George Loane Tucker. Jack Conway is directing and Lillian Rich is giving the star admirable support in the leading feminine role.

Perrin Picked to Play Opposite Gladys Walton

IRVING G. THALBERG, director general at Universal City, has selected Jack Perrin, a star in his own right, and one of the most popular leading men, to play opposite Gladys Walton in the fascinating little Universal star's forthcoming photodrama, "The Guttersnipe." Production will start immediately under the direction of Dallas FitzGerald, who has just been signed by Universal and whose initial work at the world's film capital will be to guide Miss Walton through the speedy channels of her latest starring vehicle.

"The Guttersnipe" was written by Percival Wilde. In addition to Jack Perrin, Dallas FitzGerald has assembled an interesting cast to give Miss Walton capable support. In important roles will be seen such screen favorites as Walter Perry, Kate Price, Ed. Cecil and Sydney Franklin.

Unique Contest Staged, Universal versus Lasky

KIDDING Irving G. Thalberg about Universal City always gets a call and sometimes a raise. Someone around the Lasky lot ventured to say that Universal's huge portable power plant wouldn't stack up with a similar piece of equipment at Lasky's. Thalberg immediately challenged the Vine Street studio to a power-generating tournament with the world's film capital. Harry Brown, chief electrical engineer at Universal City, is arranging the details. It is planned to take Universal's big seven-speed Juggernaut and contend with the Lasky apparatus on a run to the beach and back. Then the Universal power wagon will flood a set of a specified dimension with light and let the Lasky wagon try and equal it. The event is scheduled for some time in the near future.

New Serial Policy Outlined by Universal

STRIKING and novel changes in serial policy and production are announced by Universal. Harry M. Berman, general manager of exchanges for that company, predicts that his organization is taking the first steps of a new departure that will make history in the motion picture world.

Universal not only is changing the form of its serials, but also is changing its method of presenting them to the public, says Mr. Berman. The change in production is best exemplified by "Winners of the West," a new Art Acord serial based upon the exploits and adventures of Capt. John C. Fremont, and which is said to preserve the actual incidents of history with faithful realism and startling climaxes.

The future presentation of Universal chaptered photodrama, it is outlined by Mr. Berman, will be based upon a nation-wide exploitation campaign. Universal intends to "sell" its serials to the public just as it sells its Universal-Jewels, or other superpictures.

"Universal is going to startle the film world with its future serial policy," said Mr. Berman. "We now are making serials that are so different from all serials which have gone before, that we even are tending to get away from the name 'serial.' Our new chaptered product, 'Winners of the West,' is a 'continued feature.'

"So that the new form of 'continued film story' may be properly presented, we have created a Serial Exploitation Department. Fred J. McConnell, long known as an expert and veteran serial exploiter, has been engaged to head this work. He now is perfecting plans which will prove a startling innovation to the present method of considering and handling serials.

"Universal's new form of episodic thriller is not only a welcome innovation in the serial field, but it also is censor proof. We are making 'Winners of the West' so that every censor and every parent will have to say: 'I see no harm in showing this to children. It is history and it will teach them a lesson while it thrills and amuses them.'

"It is Universal's belief that serials must be made so that children may see them without question. The serial being the type of film entertainment enjoyed most by the youngster, he should not be denied such pleasure. It is important, however, that the serial be so produced that the children who see it may reap benefits of an instructive nature in addition to amusements.

"That is why Universal is making 'Winners of the West.' In so doing, we have picked out one of the most romantic and thrilling stories of the New World—the adventures and exploits of Capt. John C. Fremont, whose expeditions across the Rockies were largely responsible for the early acquisition of the West Coast.

"Three installments or episodes of 'Winners of the West' have been received in the East, and I want to say that we are astonished as well as delighted at the excellence of the feature.

"Incidents that one has read in history are reproduced on the screen in remarkable realism. The picture is a story of the gold rush days of '49 and all costumes, weapons and surroundings are perfect from a historical standpoint. It is American history, with all its thrills, woven into a screen story that is as entertaining as any thriller ever filmed.

"Following 'Winners of the West,' Universal is projecting a chaptered film woven around the famous expedition of Henry M. Stanley into Africa to find Dr. David Livingston. Eileen Sedgwick will play the leading role in this feature, that of a young newspaper woman who joins the expedition. Although this part has been written into the actual story of the famous expedition, it will in no way detract from the visual and actual presentation of the startling events of the strange trip through the heart of the Dark Continent—a trip that almost every schoolboy knows. Other American historical stories are expected to follow in 'continued feature' form. These chapter films Universal means to popularize through the length and breadth of the land by exploitation of all kinds. Believing that every American will be interested in these history-thrillers of pioneer life, Universal is going to give them the greatest possible publicity, thereby paving the way for the exhibitor who shows them on his screen.

"Arrangements for their use by schools, historical societies, churches, boys' clubs, Boy Scout organizations and similar interested associations, so that there will be no conflict with Universal exibitors, are being made."

Another instance of Universal's supremacy in the serial field is the announcement that Eddie Polo's forthcoming serial will be "The Adventures of Robinson Crusoe."

NEARLY CHOKES TO DEATH IN SANDSTORM FOR MOVIE

MISS duPONT, Universal star, in "The Rage of Paris," declares that life in pictures has been just one thrilling, spectacular incident after another for her.

In "Foolish Wives," in which she is a featured player, she was burned by fire and drenched with water half a dozen times, while in "The Rage of Paris" she is caught in a terrific sand storm in which she is literally blown to pieces.

"I have a friend," said the beautiful blonde actress the other day, "who is in comedies, and she was telling me of some of the exciting things she had to do to make the public laugh.

"She told of leaping off a building, diving off a rock into the sea, and a few little things like that, but when I told her some of the things I had to do in drama, she admitted that my story was the best.

"In Mr. von Stroheim's picture I leap from a burning tower into the sea, am forced to lose my balance and fall overboard out of a canoe in a lake, and remain on a couch that catches fire and burns all the draperies, even catching the sleeve of my negligee; all in a few days.

"However, the most difficult of all the thrilling scenes was the sandstorm in "The Rage of Paris." I was simply choked with sand; for days afterward my lungs were full of it."

PEACOCK FEATHER GOWN COSTING $10,000 SCREENED

EMBRACING in its colorful, dramatic scope the ultra-exclusive social set of Long Island, the revelry of New York's famous Riverside Drive apartments, the bizarre beauty of Parisian life and the stillness of the vast Arabian desert, "The Rage of Paris," Miss duPont's premiere starring vehicle, coming to the .... theatre on ...., is a milestone along the highway of screen progress.

The scenes in the Arabian desert, a sandstorm, terrific in its intensity, are unrivaled in their stark, vivid realism. The spectator fairly breathes the stifling heat of the desert sands, so faithfully has the story been told. Interwoven into the wastes of the desert is a tale of renunciation and self-sacrifice, furnishing a most striking finale for a colorful photodrama.

The Bal des Deux Arts is a tremendous spectacle, startling in its photographic conceptions of lighting and costumes. Garbed in a magnificent peacock feather gown, costing over $10,000, Miss duPont, said by many to be "America's most beautiful blonde," gives a bizarre dance interpretation that is electrifying. Miss duPont proves herself an artist of the dance as well of the silver sheet.

The stilted, unreal pretenses of the bought-and-paid-for marriage of social convenience are bared in the scenes of New York's Fifth Avenue and Long Island heart-markets.

Jack Conway, noted director, who directed "Lombardi, Ltd.," was responsible for the unusually artistic presentation of "The Rage of Paris," an adaptation for the screen by Lucien Hubbard of Du Vernet Rabell's "The White Peacock Feather."

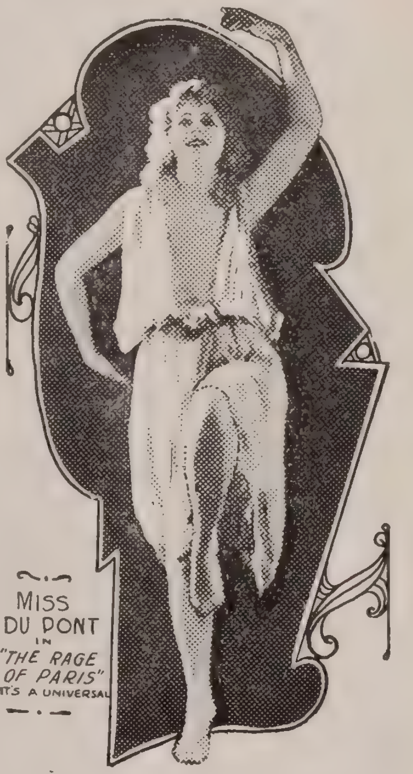
BLONDES MORE POPULAR THAN EVER, INSISTS ONE

WHO says blondes are dying out in public favor?

No one who ever saw Miss duPont, said by many to be "America's most beautiful blonde," could uphold the statement disparaging to the flaxen ladies.

This revulsion of sentiment, which it attributed to the public, is due to the overrunning of the country of the peroxide queens. No blonde, originally intended for a brunette, can be made as attractive as her original self by a touch of the foaming chemical.

Thus the sudden swing back to nature, to naturalness of beauty without requisitioning the nation's chemical supplies.



But Miss duPont was born, raised and educated a blonde. Not in the process of development has she decided that blonde tresses would photograph well. She just couldn't help her blonde beauty. But the strange thing is that she admits that she favors brunetttes. "The most beautiful blonde in America" isn't satisfied—she would like to be something else, which is only another way of showing that we always want what we haven't got.

Miss duPont's introduction to cinema fame will be at the .... Theatre next .... in "The Rage of Paris," her first starring vehicle for Universal. "The Rage of Paris" is a colorful drama of life and love, with New York society, Parisian night life and the stillness of the great Arabian desert as the picturesque backgrounds.

Miss duPont is also leading woman in Erich von Stroheim's million dollar production, "Foolish Wives," soon to be shown.

Regarding The Star, Miss duPont

"SHE is the most beautiful blonde in America."

No less an authority than Ralph Miller, the noted California artist, is responsible for the statement.

The creamy softness of her skin, the supple beauty of a graceful body, the rich profusion of her golden hair, and the simple and graceful Grecian symmetry of her features, bear out the statement.

Added to this, she has the rare gift of combining with her comeliness the ability to express her emotions on the screen.

Miss duPont makes her initial appearance to the public .... at the.............................. Theatre in "The Rage of Paris," a Universal photodrama adapted from Du Vernet Rabell's "The White Peacock Feather."

Miss duPont is a star in her own right — not because of her beauty—not because of her ability to wear gorgeous clothes—not because of a charming personality — but because she understands and can vividly portray the "inner woman" to the screen.

"Foolish Wives," Erich von Stroheim's wonder production, for Universal, served as Miss duPont's initiation into pictures. But Universal decided that "The Rage of Paris" a colorful narrative of Parisian life and desert sands, should be Miss duPont's first bow to the public.

Miss duPont, who was born in Frankfort, Ky., was formerly a noted designer at a Los Angeles modiste shop. She played the leading feminine role in "Foolish Wives."

OUT ON THE MOONLIGHT WASTES OF THE ARABIAN SANDS, THE DESERT WIND SANG A LULLABY OVER THE LIFELESS BODY OF MORTIMER HANDLEY—HE HAD PAID FOR HIS USELESS LIFE BY HIS DEATH. "THE RAGE OF PARIS" IS A MASTERPIECE OF THE CINEMA DRAMA.

The Story of "The Rage of Paris"

JOAN COOLIDGE and Gordon Talbot have a girl and boy love affair. He has a chance to go to Arabia on a big irrigation project. He invites her to go with him. But Talbot is not a good catch in the estimation of Joan's mother, and she resolves to break up the affair. By persuasion and insinuation she breaks down the girl's defenses and Joan allows Talbot to go alone to the desert.

Enters Mortimer Handley, man of mystery and libertine. He has known many women, but here is one whose very aloofness baffles him. By an adroit campaign he lulls her instinctive suspicions and succeeds in winning her. Their honeymoon is a brutal shock to Joan. She returns absolutely disillusioned, disgusted. Handley feels he has never really mastered his wife. She remains aloof, unfeeling and unresponsive. Joan bears slights and indignities until finally the climax comes when Handley brings his mistress Mignon into his own home and insults Joan by forcing a meeting between the two women. Something snaps within her and she resolves that the old life has ended there forever.

Before this she has met in the studio of her dancing master, an old French woman, who had been the most talked of woman in Europe in the days of Napoleon the Third. She invites her to Paris. Joan goes to Madame Cortigney's. Under an assumed name she becomes the sensation of Paris. Her portrait is painted by the most famous painter of the day and becomes the centre of attraction for art lovers. Going herself to see it she encounters Talbot, who has come to Paris for a vacation. He pays her back for her initial rejection of him and returns to the desert.

Meanwhile Handley has traced his wife to Madam Cortigney's house. She avoids him and goes to Talbot. Handley picks up the trail and follows a few hours behind. Joan presents herself to Talbot and makes surrender. However, in the last analysis, neither can destroy the image of their pure love of old and Joan keeps herself inviolate. Next morning she sets out to return to the seacoast just as Handley, with murder in his heart, starts for the desert lodge. A sandstorm intervenes and Joan resigns herself to Fate. Handley arrives on camel-back.

He realizes that only one life can be saved. He determines to redeem himself for his past. He throws the prostrate form of Joan across the camel's back, sends them on to Talbot, and dies. The camel starts, headed for Talbot's headquarters.

WEST COAST WINS IN LIVELY SALES DRIVE

Mid-Summer Universal Booking Contest Ends With a Spurt

THE West Coast branches of Universal are very chesty over the unusual showing made by that part of the country in the recent Universal Sales Contest, just closed, and in which three out of four prizes were won by exchanges in that part of the country. The three West Coast winners were San Francisco, Seattle and Spokane.

WOLVES OF THE NORTH
EVA NOVAK

Lobby of Majestic Theatre, Portland, Oregon, Arranged For "Wolves of the North," Universal's Recent Eva Novak Release.

The Sales contest began June 12th and ended September 3rd. The various Universal exchanges were striving to surpass their own sales figures for the same period in 1920. In order to insure an equitable contest the various exchanges were divided into groups inchanges of about the same volume of business.

In the first group were Chicago, Pittsburg, Detroit, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Toronto and Buffalo. As a result of the close race in this group Mr. Clair Hague, manager of the Toronto office, has received $1,750 to divide among the employees of his exchange. This division will include all employees, from the top salesman down to film inspectors, office boys and janitor.

The second group included the exchanges in St. Louis, Kansas City, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Oklahoma City and Indianapolis. Mr. C. A. Nathan, manager of the San Francisco office, also gets $1,750 to distribute. San Francisco got an early lead and easily outdistanced the others of this group.

The Seattle exchange was pitted with Charlotte and Denver. The prize for that group was $750. Mr. George Bourke is the manager of the winning Seattle exchange. The Spokane exchange, Mr. A. H. McMillan, manager also won a $750 prize, in competition with Salt Lake City, Butte and Portland.

The results of the sales drive, held during the most depressing period ever experienced in the moving picture industry, are said to have been exceptionally good. The drive received great impetus by reason of the Laemmle-Universal Anniversary Celebration, during which several thousand theatres throughout the United States and Canada put on a Gala Week of Universal pictures.

Universal executives believe that the added spirit and zest put into the sale and distribution of Universal pictures by the contest had much to do with the exceptional business done by Universal during the past summer, despite the general slump in the amusement world.

An interesting commentary on the effects of the business slump is made as a result of the showings in the Universal contest. Universal has found that the slump in moving pictures started in the East and traveled westward slowly. The lowest depression area was in the East last Spring and early in the Summer. It gradually spread westward. As it worked westward, conditions began to pick up again in the East.

It developed from a study of the sales reports in the Universal contest, that the West Coast did not feel the maximum effect of the slump until late in the contest, while the eastern exchanges got it full force early in the contest. The contest spirit was at its height during the opening weeks of tht contest, therefore the eastern exchanges received a setback which helped to give the western exchanges an early lead.

Remarkable Support Engaged for Lon Chaney Picture

LON CHANEY is doing his best screen work at Universal City in "Wolfbreed," a story for which he was especially engaged by Universal. The narrative takes place in the picturesque Canadian woods, for which the Yosemite will be recorded by the camera. Lucien Hubbard, scenario editor at Universal City, the star himself and Irving G. Thalberg collaborated in writing the theme. George C. Hull is the author of the continuity. The star is supported by a remarkable cast, including Irene Rich, Alan Hale, Stanley Goethals, Dagmar Godowsky, Spottiswoode Aitken, Herbert Standing and Frank Campeau and others.

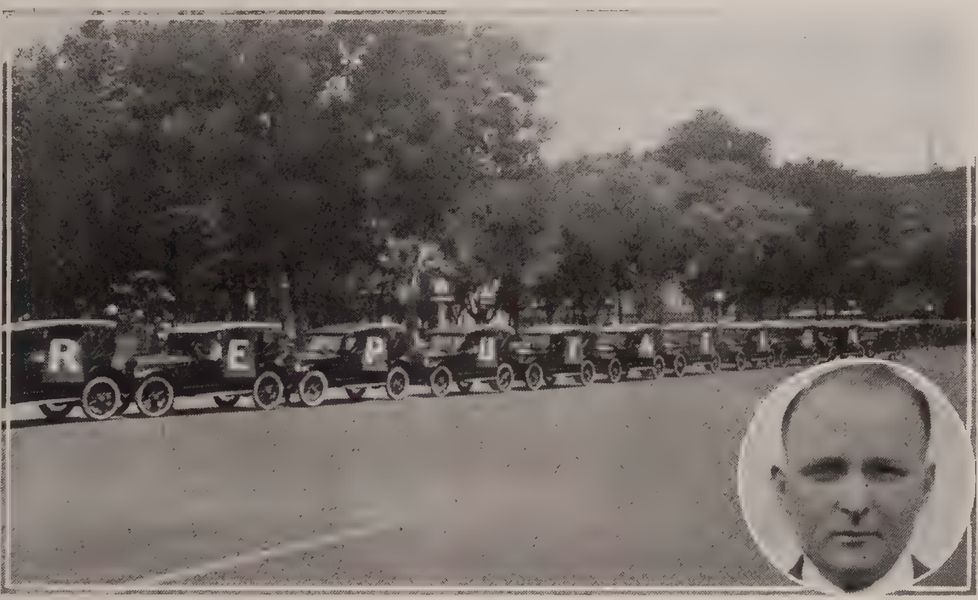
GEORGE SHARPE MAKES FRESNO LOOK TO ITS "REPUTATION"

GEORGE F. SHARPE, manager of the Liberty theatre, Fresno, Cal., has a reputation for successful exploitation campaign. His recent campaign for "Reputation" was the talk of Fresno and other cities in California.

He first interested local merchants in a "Reputation Week." The result of this was a double-page ad tie-up in Fresno's leading newspapers—a two-page spread of unusual distinction with the peculiar "Reputation" trade mark of the picture in each ad. The merchants also dressed their windows to carry out the "Reputation Week" idea, and made many "Reputation" sales, they reported.

Several days prior to the showing of the picture, the telephone operator of the Liberty theatre called the homes and offices of Fresno's leading citizens. When she got the number, she queried: "How's your Reputation?" and then hung up. This stunt caused no end of speculation and curiosity.

Finally, on the opening date of his four-day run, Sharpe engineered a parade of twelve new Willys-Knight automobiles, ten of which carried a huge letter each from the word R-E-P-U-T-A-T-I-O-N. The jockeying around of these cars to confuse onlookers and then to spring the correctly spelled word on them afforded much interest to all.



Exploitation Stunt Arranged For "Reputation" By George Sharpe, Manager of Liberty Theatre, Fresno, California.

"No Woman Knows" Defeats Strong Competition in 'Frisco

WHILE it is too early to show any final returns on the bookings of "No Woman Knows," Universal expects to hear very soon from the Alhambra Theatre in Toledo, the Butterfly Theatre in Milwaukee, and the Tivoli Theatre in 'Frisco, all of which are playing the picture this week. A preliminary report from Geo. Levine, about the Butterfly showing, to Mr. Berman follows:

"I wish to state that 'No Woman Knows' opened at the Butterfly Theatre yesterday. At three o'clock there were still very few people downtown, but from ten minutes to seven in the evening until twenty-five minutes to ten, they held them out continuously, turning hundreds away. It is too bad that the picture was shown in eight reels, for they lost a lot of money on account of this. Every one came out more than pleased, and Mr. Freuler, manager, got more comments on this picture than on any other he has ever played. People came out and said it was better than 'Humoresque.' The 'Four Horsemen' at the Davidson died. 'Old Nest' did a nice business, while the Alhambra, running a style show, and the Strand, Nazimova in 'Camille,' didn't do much.

"Our picture would have had a tremendous matinee if the weather was right. The weather is still exceptionally hot in this territory, and a number of houses that have closed have not as yet re-opened. We have in this territory now what is called Indian Summer."

The Palace Theatre, of Buffalo, plays the picture on Sept. 18, and it already has a tremendous number of bookings at later dates throughout the country.

Assembling Strong Cast for Forthcoming Sedgwick Serial

UNIVERSAL is assembling a notable supporting cast to play in "The Clutch of the Octopus," a serial in which Eileen Sedgwick is to be starred under the direction of Edward Kull. The narrative was written by George Plympton under the supervision of William Lord Wright, chief of the serial department at Universal City. It concerns the expedition of Henry M. Stanley into Africa for Dr. Livingston's rescue.

One Act Play to be Filmed for duPont

UNIVERSAL'S newest star is in the middle of the smashing big drama at Universal City in which her artistic ability and her exceptional beauty show to excellent advantage. The story is "Ropes," being filmed under the direction of Paul Scardon from the widely read one-act play of the same name which appeared in Harper's Magazine recently, by Wilbur Daniel Steele. Pat O'Malley, Lloyd Whitlock, Mary Philbin, Percy Challenger, Fay Whitmore and other favorites appear in her support.

Miss duPont, Universal star, has carefully folded up her elaborate wardrobe and is now appearing in the ragged, unkempt clothes of a lighthouse-keeper's wife.

As the heroine of "Ropes," Miss duPont will have no use for her society manner or society frocks—and she is glad of it.

Miss duPont, Starring In Universal's "The Rage of Paris" and "Ropes."

"I had never thought that I should like roles in which I was all dressed up," said Miss duPont in speaking of the change in her make-up.

"Before 'Foolish Wives' I had never given much attention to clothes—except that in real life I always like beautiful things.

"But since I have had to give hours and hours of study to the subject of fashionable and becoming wearing apparel, I have frequently grown tired of the whole thing and wished that I might have a part in which I wore one costume throughout the picture.

"This wish is gratified and in 'Ropes' I must depend upon myself and not my clothes to carry the action," Miss du Pont said.

"I shall probably feel slightly at sea for a time, but I am glad of the opportunity to look ugly."

Chaney Surpassing Himself in "Wolfbreed"

"WOLFBREED," a big vital human story of the north woods—a Universal production, starring Lon Chaney, is unique in having one of the most remarkable casts of any recent production. In addition to this, Robert, Thornby, who has already demonstrated his marked ability in Frank Mayo's Universal success, "The Magnificent Brute," and Harry Carey's Universal-Jewel super-feature, "The Fox," is directing.

The story was written by Lucien Hubbard, scenario editor of Universal City, with the collaboration of the star and Irving G. Thalberg, director-general of the big studios.

Keen critics say that Lon Chaney is doing the best work of his brilliant career in "Wolfbreed," the story for which he was especially engaged by Universal. He is working on the opening sequences of the story. The narrative concerns a lovable French-Canadian who harnesses nature to bring about the downfall of the man who wronged him. Irene Rich plays opposite in the leading feminine role. A strong cast has been engaged.

Twenty-six Sets Built for Rawlinson Feature

TWENTY-SIX specially built sets are being used at Universal City for Herbert Rawlinson's first starring vehicle. The story is entitled "The Millioniaire," purchased especially for Rawlinson from the estate of George Loane Tucker, and is being filmed now under the direction of Jack Conway.

The sets were constructed under the supervision of Archie Hall, technical director at Universal City, with the collaboration of the star, Mr. Conway and Harry Schenck, unit production manager for the group of companies, of which Rawlinson's unit is a part. These sets, mostly of the "trick" variety, afford the star many dramatic exits.

Prevost and Baggot Stage Prologue

MARIE PREVOST and King Baggot have a surprise in store for those who attend the premiere of Miss Prevost's recent Universal feature, "Moonlight Follies," which opens at Tally's Theatre on Monday, September 19th. The famous little star and her director are working on a prologue in which they will personally appear. Irving G. Thalberg, director-general at Universal City, got the idea and Baggot is embellishing it with a clever dialogue. Miss Prevost will summon her utmost dramatic ability to put it over and the audience will be expected to stamp its collective feet, whistle, and, like the late Oliver Twist, call for more.

Universal to Establish Own Exchanges in Argentine

George E. Kann Announces Appointment of Monroe Isen To Manage Universal Interests In South American Republic

EVER since Carl Laemmle placed George E. Kann in charge of the direction of foreign business and foreign markets of the Universal, it has been his aim to have the Universal represented in as many countries as possible by its own agencies and releasing machinery if convenient.

In line with this accepted policy of the Company, Mr. Kann has just announced the appointment of Monroe Isen, as his representative, to open up and operate Universal Exchanges in the Argentine. Mr. Isen, accompanied by two assistants — one a bookkeeper and the other a booker — sailed from New York on the S. S. Martha Washington last week. He will establish headquarters in Buenos Aires, and, using this as his basis of operation, he will establish five or six branches in Argentine at strategic points, to be decided after he reaches there.

Mr. Kann expects to be able to announce in a short time the appointment of a General Sales Manager for the Argentine. The man, with whom negotiations are at present being concluded, is eminently fitted for such a position, having lived for a number of years in the territory, having a thorough knowledge of the language, customs and sales peculiarities of the Argentine and being, in addition, a thoroughly experienced film man.

Mr. Isen's promotion is in line with Mr. Laemmle's plan of promoting efficient employees to higher positions. Isen was with the Universal when it was first formed and when the office in Fourteenth Street. Isen was then booker, but was promoted to salesman, when the Twenty-third Street Exchange was established, and was later transferred (still as a salesman) to 1600 Broadway in the Big U Exchange.

Through a promotion of the Manager of Universal's Canal Zone, Mr. Isen was sent to Panama, where he developed the territory so thoroughly and efficiently that it was decided to send him to establish Universal Exchanges in the Argentine.

While managing Universal's Panama Office, Mr. Isen developed a thorough mastery of the Spanish language, which is the official tongue of the Argentine. He goes to his new duties, after an extended conference in the Home Office with Mr. Kann, with every facility which the Universal can extend him and with the utmost confidence of his employers.

"Conditions in the Argentine are especially promising," says Kann. "Universal films have always been in great demand in every one of the South American republics, and I feel that Mr. Isen will do much to foster and further the amicable relations between the motion picture interests of the two continents."

Captured by Redskins, Faces Death by Flame

"WINNERS of the WEST"

Episode Four

"The Flames of Hate"

THE roll down the hill in the wagon knocks Standish unconscious. Walsh, his prisoner, fares better and reaches the bottom unhurt. He secures a knife that has fallen from the camp-kit as the wagon rolled, and cuts his bonds. He steals a buckskin bag in which Standish keeps the map of the gold cave. Mounting Standish's horse, which has followed the wagon down hill, and effects his escape.

Betty and Louis are struggling in the stream unable to reach the shore.

The men of the wagon, unaware of Betty's danger, ride by a circuitous route down the hill to Standish's aid.

Standish comes to in time to see Walsh escaping. Standish mounts one of the wagon teams and gives chase. Louis leaves Betty to her fate and gets ashore where he intercepts Standish and tells him of the girl's danger. Standish gives him the horse and sends him back for men to ride around to the falls below to wait for Betty in case he is unable to find her by running along the bank.

Walsh comes upon Betty as she is clinging weakly to a rock in midstream. Standish's horse throws him and he swims out to the girl. She clings to the saddle and he brings her ashore. Walsh decides to use her as a hostage. He scrawls a message in the wet sand saying the girl's safety depends upon his not being followed. Then he sets out, leading the girl into the brush.

Art discovers the message and, ignoring the threat, takes up the trail. He overtakes them, but before he can go to Betty's rescue, she and Walsh are surrounded by Indians, in whose tribe Walsh has lived previously. Walsh and the girl go on to the village while the other Indians take up the back track to see if he is followed. They see Standish and give chase. He escapes by swinging aross a ravine on a grapevine but they rapidly gain on him.

He reaches the clearing around the Indian village and sees Walsh lead the girl to the council lodge. Art wraps his buckskin shirt around his arm as a shield against arrows, and running across the clearing in the face of the arrows, bursts into the council lodge and claims the right of sanctuary, a custom among the early tribes. Any enemy who could reach the council lodge without being captured could claim refuge there.

He then turns his freedom over to the girl who leaves for the wagon train with the understanding she is to be followed later by Indians when she has had a head start.

They tie Standish to the stake, intending to burn him, when the scouts return from the chase after Betty. Walsh goes to Standish who is left alone at the stake. He takes advantage of his helplessness to slap him. Art's feet are not tied and he kicks the renegade for it. This enrages Walsh and he sets fire to the brush piled about Standish.

Then he gloats over the fact that he has Standish's map. Standish tells him the map is a fake and that he has sent the real one back by the girl. Overcome by rage, Walsh snatches a tomahawk and throws it at Art. It goes wild and cuts the cords on Art's wrists, freeing him from the burning brush about the stake.

Fremont's men have picked up Betty's trail and are following.

Betty sprains her ankle and is helpless, unable to escape the Indians who race down upon her.

Standish defeats Walsh, but the Indians of village have heard the row and as Standish overpowers Walsh he looks up to find the Indians rushing down upon him in a body.

"Should Husbands Mind Babies?"

One-Reel Star Comedy

MR. NULEE WED steps out on his porch in his nightie to get the Sunday paper, but is locked out and suffers much humiliation, as all the uplifters of the town pass by and give him the once-over. He manages to get back into his house and receives a wire from his rich uncle Oswald saying that he is coming to visit the young couple.

Nulee has told Uncle that they have named their baby after him. The baby never existed, so Nulee sets out in a hurry to get a baby to be heir to his uncle's wealth. The first infant he appropriates turns out to be chocolate color. His wife asks their Jap gardener to find her a baby, which he does—a yellow one.

Hubby goes out again and adopts an infant from the orphanage. Meanwhile, Wifey borrows a friend's baby. Uncle has arrived at the station by this time and is rapidly nearing their house. Before they can return any of the quartet, Uncle arrives. He is shown one of the white babies and promises to give it $1,000. The other kids start to howl and Uncle asks who's making the racket.

Hubby tells him Oswald is twin to Oswaldina. Uncle is more pleased, until the others start up again. "If it's triplets, I'll shoot," he says. The parents of the children suddenly enter with a policeman and start a riot. Uncle whips out his check-book and sends the lot home happy. A good-sized check for Oswald II. clears up matters and the film ends in a humorous fade-out.

"TERROR TRAIL"

Episode Twelve

"The Isle of Eternity"

THE hermit tells Elaine that Bruce is dead. She nearly collapses. Just after the hermit tells Elaine that Bruce has been killed, Bruce walks in upon them. The hermit laughs when Elaine questions him, saying that he must have his litle joke. He finally tells them that a ship may pass that way soon, but to signal it Bruce would have to swim to a far-off point and make a fire. Elaine and Bruce consider this.

In a seacoast city Hunch Henderson comes across the real Vera Vernon. Talking with her, he finds out who she is and for the first time realizes the real appearance of Elaine Emerson. He tries to get Vera to join him again; but she tells him that she is happily married and has turned over a new leaf.

Elaine and Bruce part again with much misgiving. Bruce swims to the point, while Elaine tries to pass the long hours by feeding her friend, the elephant. Bruce is beset by sharks and reaches the point only after a desperate battle with them. He lights the signal fire. That evening Elaine, looking over the sea, discovers the fire and knows that Bruce arrived safely. She hopes and prays that he will return as well. Unwilling to face again the menace of the sharks, Bruce starts back along the shore line. He is captured by another band of savages.

Rent Gougers Profiteering as House Shortage Grows

"No Place To Live"

One-reel Star Comedy

A VICTIM of the housing shortage, Egbert finally manages to rent half a house for $500 a month. The landlord promises him that Mrs. Egbert's desire for a fruit tree on the premises will be fulfilled. Egbert, Wifey, Egbert, Jr., and the baby arrive at their new home and incur the wrath of their husky cotenant.

They find the house is jerry-built and all the fixtures fall down almost as soon as they are looked at. The door falls down, the window drops out, the ceiling collapses, and the walls buckle out. The "elegant furnishings" turn out to be a framed chromo and a kitchen chair.

To drown his sorrows, Egbert beheads the "baby," which turns out to be a demijohn full of hootch. Made brave by a few drinks, Egbert boldly goes into his neighbor's room and appropriates his bedclothes. He is caught but escapes by pretending he is walking in his sleep. He makes another attempt and evades some water traps which his husky neighbor has laid for him. Lying down for a well-earned rest, he is driven out of doors by the pesky mosquitos.

He lies under the fruit tree, consisting of every sort of fruit, from a cantaloupe to a banana tried on to an ordinary maple, and the heaviest of the melons falls on his head, sending him back into the house. He is so sleepy he falls asleep with his head on a tub of water outside the neighbor's room. Egbert snores so heavily that he snorts a stream of water right out of the tub into the neighbor's bed.

The husky neighbor, thoroughly doused, chases Egbert into the cellar. As they are fighting a huge pipe bursts and Egbert is about to drown when he wakes up and finds his son playing a hose on him. His wife rushes up and joyfully tells him she has obtained a lovely house for the small sum of $25 monthly.

Bandit's Capture Caused By Girl's Quick Thinking

Two-reel Western

Featuring

George Larkin and Josephine Hill

AT the little trading-post of Leplace, McNab runs the store and fur exchange as well as the rest of the small town. Marie, his daughter, is in love with Jerry Blake, of the Mounted. Jerry rides into town with a prisoner. Marie runs to meet him; but it is evident that her love for the constable is not returned. Jerry broods darkly over the past—a picture of a pretty girl brings him troublous dreams. Fate plays one of its strange pranks and brings the girl, Clarice, to Leplace with her father, Horton, who desires to buy furs. It develops that Jerry left the States and entered the service when Clarice turned him down. But now she seems most gracious and his delight in her presence is keen. Marie sees her hero being won from her. Her father notes her tears and resents it so much that he refuses to sell Horton any of his valuable store of furs.

Horton meets Jake Haskell, an "underground" fur trader, and tells of McNab's refusal to deal with him. Halkell suggests a plan to get McNab's furs which Horton approves.

Clarice and Jerry spend many happy hours together when the constable is not on duty. Marie watches them. She sees Clarice and Haskell meet and overhears a conversation which alarms her and hurries to warn Jerry of the trap prepared for him to get him out of the way.

Jerry unexpectedly comes across Clarice and Haskell. The latter ducks as soon as he can; while Clarice stalls, saying she had to do something for her father. Jerry's infatuation for her is such that he believes her.

Marie arrives at Jerry's trysting place and falls into the trap set for him. The men hold her so she cannot give the alarm, for she knows them.

Meanwhile, McNab is robbed. Jerry returns after Clarice has promised to be his. He is informed of the robbery and sets out after the thieves. Clarice stops him and tells him she does not want him to go—that she is afraid for him. He says he must go. She tells him that if he does he must give her up. Jerry struggles between love and duty—and duty wins. He goes after the thieves.

Haskell loads furs into a canoe and sets out. In one of the bundles of furs is Marie. Haskell tells her that no harm will come to her; but she must go with them a little way so that their tracks may be covered. Jerry pusues in another canoe. Haskell soon sees this. He sends the man with him back to ambush Jerry. But Marie has managed to remove the cartridge from the man's gun, so Jerry effects an easy capture of him and continues his pursuit. Haskell fires back and breaks Jerry's paddle. He seems about to escape when Marie deliberately upsets the canoe and throws both herself and Haskell into the water. Jerry arrives and rescues both of them. He realizes what the little girl has done for him, and with that comes the realization that she is the girl he loves.

Stakes All on Card, Lets Rival Win Girl

"Square-Deal Cyclone"

Starring EDDIE POLO

CYCLONE, an honest westerner, is defying a clique of gamblers who have cheated him with marked cards. Cyclone threatens to throw the leader through an open window, unless the money they have cheated him out of is returned. This is done. Then he demands the marked deck of cards. He is looking with contempt at them when a man rushes in and demands to know the reason for the fight. Cyclone shows him the marked deck. The gamblers try to alibi themselves, but the man, who is the sheriff, says he will take Cyclone's word, as Cyclone Smith is the squarest gambler that ever played in the West. He then orders Cyclone to leave as the sheriff flashes his badge. Cyclone has never defied the law and makes his departure. Cyclone rides into Red Ace and joins a crowd on the street. An evangelist is addressing the crowd, trying to raise funds to build a church in Red Ace. June, his daughter, starts passing around the collection bonnet. Black Hart, owner of the saloon, snickers. When June comes to Bill he pulls out a hundred dollar bill and tells her she can have it all for one kiss. June, insulted, turns away and Bart grabs her. Cyclone sees the affair and knocks Bart down. Bart rises and tackles Cyclone. In the fight Bart is aided by his crowd. Shots are fired, and when the men see they cannot get Cyclone they start to retire. He covers them with a gun, tells the girl to pass around the bonnet, and for a starter he throws in a thousand dollars. They contribute, but give as little as they can. When June finishes collecting they have a thousand and twenty-four dollars. She turns to thank Cyclone and he falls unconscious, having been shot in the fight.

The parson and June take Cyclone home and a doctor is sent for. Later Cyclone has convalesced and is falling in love with June. He realizes how happy a good woman like June can make a man. He hears the parson telling June he cannot understand why men will gamble away their hard-earned wages and hesitate to contribute a little toward a church. Cyclone overhears, and makes up his mind he will never gamble again. Then a young miner, in love with June, makes his appearance. He sees that Cyclone is winning June away from him. Then the parson, utterly discouraged, returns the money contributed and decides to leave Red Ace for good. That night Cyclone breaks his resolution. He goes down to the saloon and starts to gamble. He wins from everyone, and in desperation the men call for Bart to play against him.

Cyclone cleans him out. Then he offers his pile against Bart's saloon. Bart accepts. They play. Cyclone beats him, takes the money, and orders everyone out of the saloon. Then he takes an axe and starts destroying it. Outside the saloon Bart and his men plan to ambush him on his way home and take the money from him. This they do, but he battles them and starts away. He is forced up a hill, the top of which faces a chasm. They are coming after him and there is no way to escape—except across the chasm. Cyclone throws his rope across, catches a tree trunk on the other side. He starts across hand over hand. When half way across the rope breaks and Cyclone starts down. But when the end of the rope strikes the side of the chasm, he starts up hand over hand and reaches the other side amid a volley of shots fired from Bart and his men. He goes to the parson, gives him the money and the deed to the saloon. He goes outside and sees the miner making love to June and realizes he has been cutting in.

Later, when the parson is building his church, the young miner comes to Cyclone and offers to stake his claim against him for June's heart and hand. Cyclone tells the miner he can outplay him at cards, but the other answers, "You're 'Square Deal Cyclone,' and I know you'll play fair." As they play Cyclone is cool and the young miner is nervous. June passes on the outside and they see her. It is apparent that Cyclone has decided to win her. He deals the young miner four kings, looks at his cards and finds he has four aces. Cyclone says: "You win!"

I HAVE always known that a great spectacular drama of the West could be made which would rouse the admiration of every age in every audience, big city or small town, and "THE FOX" proves it.

THANKS to Carl Laemmle's unstinted support and personal inspiration, Mr. Thornby and myself have been able to give you the biggest scenes that any Western picture has ever had, for we have worked with the biggest masses of men. In addition, we have had the time and the money with which to fill "THE FOX" with romantic adventure, love interest, humor and those striking Western types which are a joy to everyone forever—to all of which you may say I have contributed in due measure.

YOUR patrons will thank you for "THE FOX" because it has in it everything that my years of screen-work have told me ought to be in a Western Super-feature, and because it is at once the biggest and the best picture of its kind ever thrown on any screen.

YOU, the showman, will like it because it will bring the money in a flood.

A Little Bit of Everything

IRVING G. THALBERG, director-general at Universal City, has signed George Cox, one of the best known directors of the motion picture industry. He will arrive at the world's film capital this week to begin preparatory work on Marie Prevost's forthcoming starring vehicle. The story is to be called "Princess Virtue."

EDWARD LAEMMLE has taken his entire Universal unit, of which Art Acord is the star, to El Segunda, where he is going to film one of the most exciting episodes for "Winners of the West," a serial in which Art Acord re-enacts the stirring adventures of Capt. John C. Fremont in his conquest of early California.

GLADYS WALTON is nursing sore fists, the result of a hard fight in "The Guttersnipe," her forthcoming Universal starring vehicle. With three bulky policemen participating in the melee, Gladys says she thinks she's lucky to get off so easily.

"I'm just sort of playing the glad game ever since they shot our big fight yesterday," says the petite star, "for I was down flat on the ground with three men scrambling on top of me and I lost my breath, my disposition and got both fists all skinned up—but it might have been worse," she added optimistically.

AN APOLOGY!

Nothing fills an editor with so much dismay as the contemplation of making a retraction or correction of a printed article. However, we are very glad, as an editor, to correct a mistake and a misapprehension of an article which was published in the MOVING PICTURE WEEKLY of September 24th and which appeared in the 11*th page.*

The article, itself, is all right, but the heading is somewhat misleading, in that the Universal Laboratory employees have succeeded in reducing their working schedule by half a day each week, and, at the same time, have increased the production of the Plant per man by 51 per cent. This has been done without actually cutting the wages of the men.

It was our endeavor in that article to bring out the fact that the Plant has reduced its expenses, increased its production and made no individual cuts in wages, which is a shining example of the actual working out of Industrial Democracy. However, the heading which we put over the story was susceptible of misconstruction, for which we are extremely sorry.

Another thing to which we plead guilty is the unwarranted changing of Edwin S. Murphy's name, a name which he has borne with credit to himself and honor and profit to the Universal for quite a few years, to Thomas Murphy.

THE musicians who were playing on the set in Miss duPont's starring picture, "Ropes," at Universal City, had to be asked to go easy on the soft, low music. One scene called forth tears from the pretty blonde actress which was perfectly legitimate, as the weeps were desired, but the star got so engrossed in her emotional scene she couldn't stop—and the director was forced to call for a little jazz.

SPECTACULAR night shots will be made at Laguna this week for "Ropes," the Universal photodrama in which Miss duPont is starring under the direction of Paul Scardon. The story is from the one-act play which appeared in Harper's Magaine, by Wilbur Daniel Steele. It is a lighthouse story of unusual strength. Pat O'Malley and Lloyd Whitlock are in the supporting cast.

MALCOLM S. BOYLAN, director of publicity at the world's film capital, up and got him a neat, if not gaudy baby at the California Hospital Saturday, and now he is trying to get his wife's consent to call her Universalia. Failing in that he will try and sneak another stunt over at the christening and start the little girl along life's highway as Priscilla Dean Gladys Walton Marie Prevost Eileen Sedgwick duPont Boylan.

Universal Inserts Morality Clause Into All Present And Future Contracts

Stanchfield & Levy Draft Provisions Which Will Protect Company, Reassure Public and Restrain Thoughtless Actors Or Actresses

As a direct result of the unfortunate affair in the St. Francis Hotel in San Francisco, the Universal, on advice of its counsel, Stanchfield & Levy, has taken action which will, it is hoped, have a three-fold effect. It has telegraphed to Irving G. Thalberg, its general manager, at Universal City, to insert in all existing and future contracts with actors, actresses and directors the following clause:

The actor/actress agrees to conduct himself/herself with due regard to public conventions and morals and agrees that he/she will not do or commit anything tending to degrade him/her in society or bring him/her into public hatred, contempt, scorn or ridicule, or tending to shock, insult or offend the community or outrage public morals or decency, or tending to the prejudice of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company or the motion picture industry. In the event that the actor/actress violates any term or provision of this paragraph, then the Universal Film Manufacuring Company has the right immediately to cancel and annul this contract by giving (5) days' written notice to the actor/actress of its intention so to do.

The statement from Stanchfield & Levy's office further states:

Has Confidence in Players

"The Universal has no reason in the world to doubt the moral integrity of any player on its pay roll. It never has had any difficulty with an actor on moral grounds. It doesn't expect to have. But as contracts in the picture business are now drawn a company, through no fault of its own, is liable to suffer both a great monetary loss through moral delinquency on the part of one of its players, but an even greater loss of prestige through still having to retain him as a salaried employe, though he may be dead as a door nail as a theatrical attraction. No case of this kind has come up in the courts as a precedent, and it is idle to speculate on how the courts would rule, but it is the part of wisdom to be prepared against any such occurrence, no matter how little expected it may be.

"Furthermore the clause is likely to have a salutary effect. The industry is faced with the danger that the public, or some portion of the public, will lose their interest in other stars through the widespread publicity which has been and is being given to this unfortunate incident. In this way the investment of the various companies in their stars would be jeopardized. For this investment consists largely in the popularity of the star, whether that popularity has been built up by advertising, publicity or by good pictures. It is only fitting that the public should realize that the companies will not be a party to any dereliction from the moral path by their stars and that they have in their own hands the means of discipline. This they have never had before, and when they have built up the popularity of a star have frequently been placed at the mercy of that very popularity.

Safeguards Public Interest

"This clause should be a safeguard to public interest.

"From the standpoint of the players, it should also prove an acceptable and protective move. It is hard to imagine an actor who would not sign this clause. In the first place it would put him or her immediately under suspicion by the company officials. In the second place the clause is so drawn that no earnest normal player has anything to fear and everything to gain by signing it. Furthermore most players have sufficient respect for the profession to wish to see it purged of anything or anybody by whose agency disgrace or injury may be brought upon it. The clause is a protection to every branch of the industry, and affects producers, distributors, exhibitors and players equally.

"Universal is inserting the above clause in all its contracts with every performer, not only to protect itself and the exhibitor but also the public."

80 Years Old and Sees "Movies" First Time

Amos Lawson, one of the oldest citizens of Lee County, is spending a week here with his friend, J. M. Barker. Mr. Lawson is 80 years old, and when he attended the Grand Theatre Friday night, which was showing "Reputation," he saw for the first time in his life a motion picture.

Universal Engages Its Own Censor

Employment of W. F. Willis of Chicago Board Is Culmination of Recent Censorship Meeting At Universal City

UNIVERSAL has taken a long step in the direction of defeating censorship. Universal has hired a censor. Now, as heretofore, unalterably opposed to censorship in principle and practice, Universal has to face the fact that we actually have censorship. Furthermore, we are going to have it for some time to come. Without abating one jot or tittle in the effort to wake the supine American public up to the enormity and slavery of censorship, it is forced to the effort to make censorship as bearable as possible for all concerned—producers, distributors, exhibitors and the people who have to see the mutilated films. With this thought in mind Carl Laemmle invited every censor board in the United States and Canada to send representatives to a conference at Universal City. If producers could be informed beforehand what things would later be cut out and what would not, much time, money and effort would be saved. A number of conferences were held and much light which will be profitable to censors and to producers was shed upon the problem.

W. F. Willis, Universal Censor.

Time after time during these conferences the producers asked, "What do you want us to cut out?" and the censors asked fully as many times, "Why do you put such things into the films in the first place?" In other words, the producers indicated a willingness to protect their property by cutting out whatever the censors did not want if they only knew what they didn't want, and the censors at least inferred that they knew what should come out and that it would help all concerned if it could be done before the picture was started. Universal thought the matter worth trying.

Engage Chicago's Chief Censor

In order to do this Universal must have a censor of its own. No board could be expected to pass upon the films of any one company, and no definite set of eliminations was decided upon by the conferences. So just before the censors were to return to their homes, Universal made a proposal to W. F. Willis, the censor-in-charge of the Chicago Board of Censorship. After a short deliberation and after wiring Charles C. Fitzmaurice, General Superintendent of Police, his immediate superior, for his approval, Mr. Willis consented and wired his resignation.

Mr. Willis is to-day at work at Universal City viewing pictures and making suggestions for the deletion of an occasional point, which, in his judgment, might be objected to by one or another of the numerous boards of censorship, all of which operate under widely divergent rules, municipal ordinances and state laws, few of which agree or coincide.

W. F. Willis is particularly suited for the position which has been created for him in the industry. Seven years ago he was appointed a motion picture censor by the Civil Service Commission of Chicago, and has continued to function as a Censor-in-Charge for over five years, until the time he left to join other censors on the recent expedition to Universal City. In that time he has viewed every picture of importance produced, and has been instrumental in protecting the producer against unreasonable deletions and changes which would injure the story without serving the altruistic dreams of censorship.

Speaking of the service which he hopes to render the motion picture industry, Mr. Willis said:

> "I think every censor in the country constantly chafes under the knowledge that the modifications he finds it necessary to make in a picture will sometimes seriously hurt the dramatic values. This is due very largely to the fact that he has but very little material with which to work. He realizes that with all of the resources at hand at the point of production, objectionable elements may be modified in production and the final story made to conform to his standards withopt any loss of dramatic force.
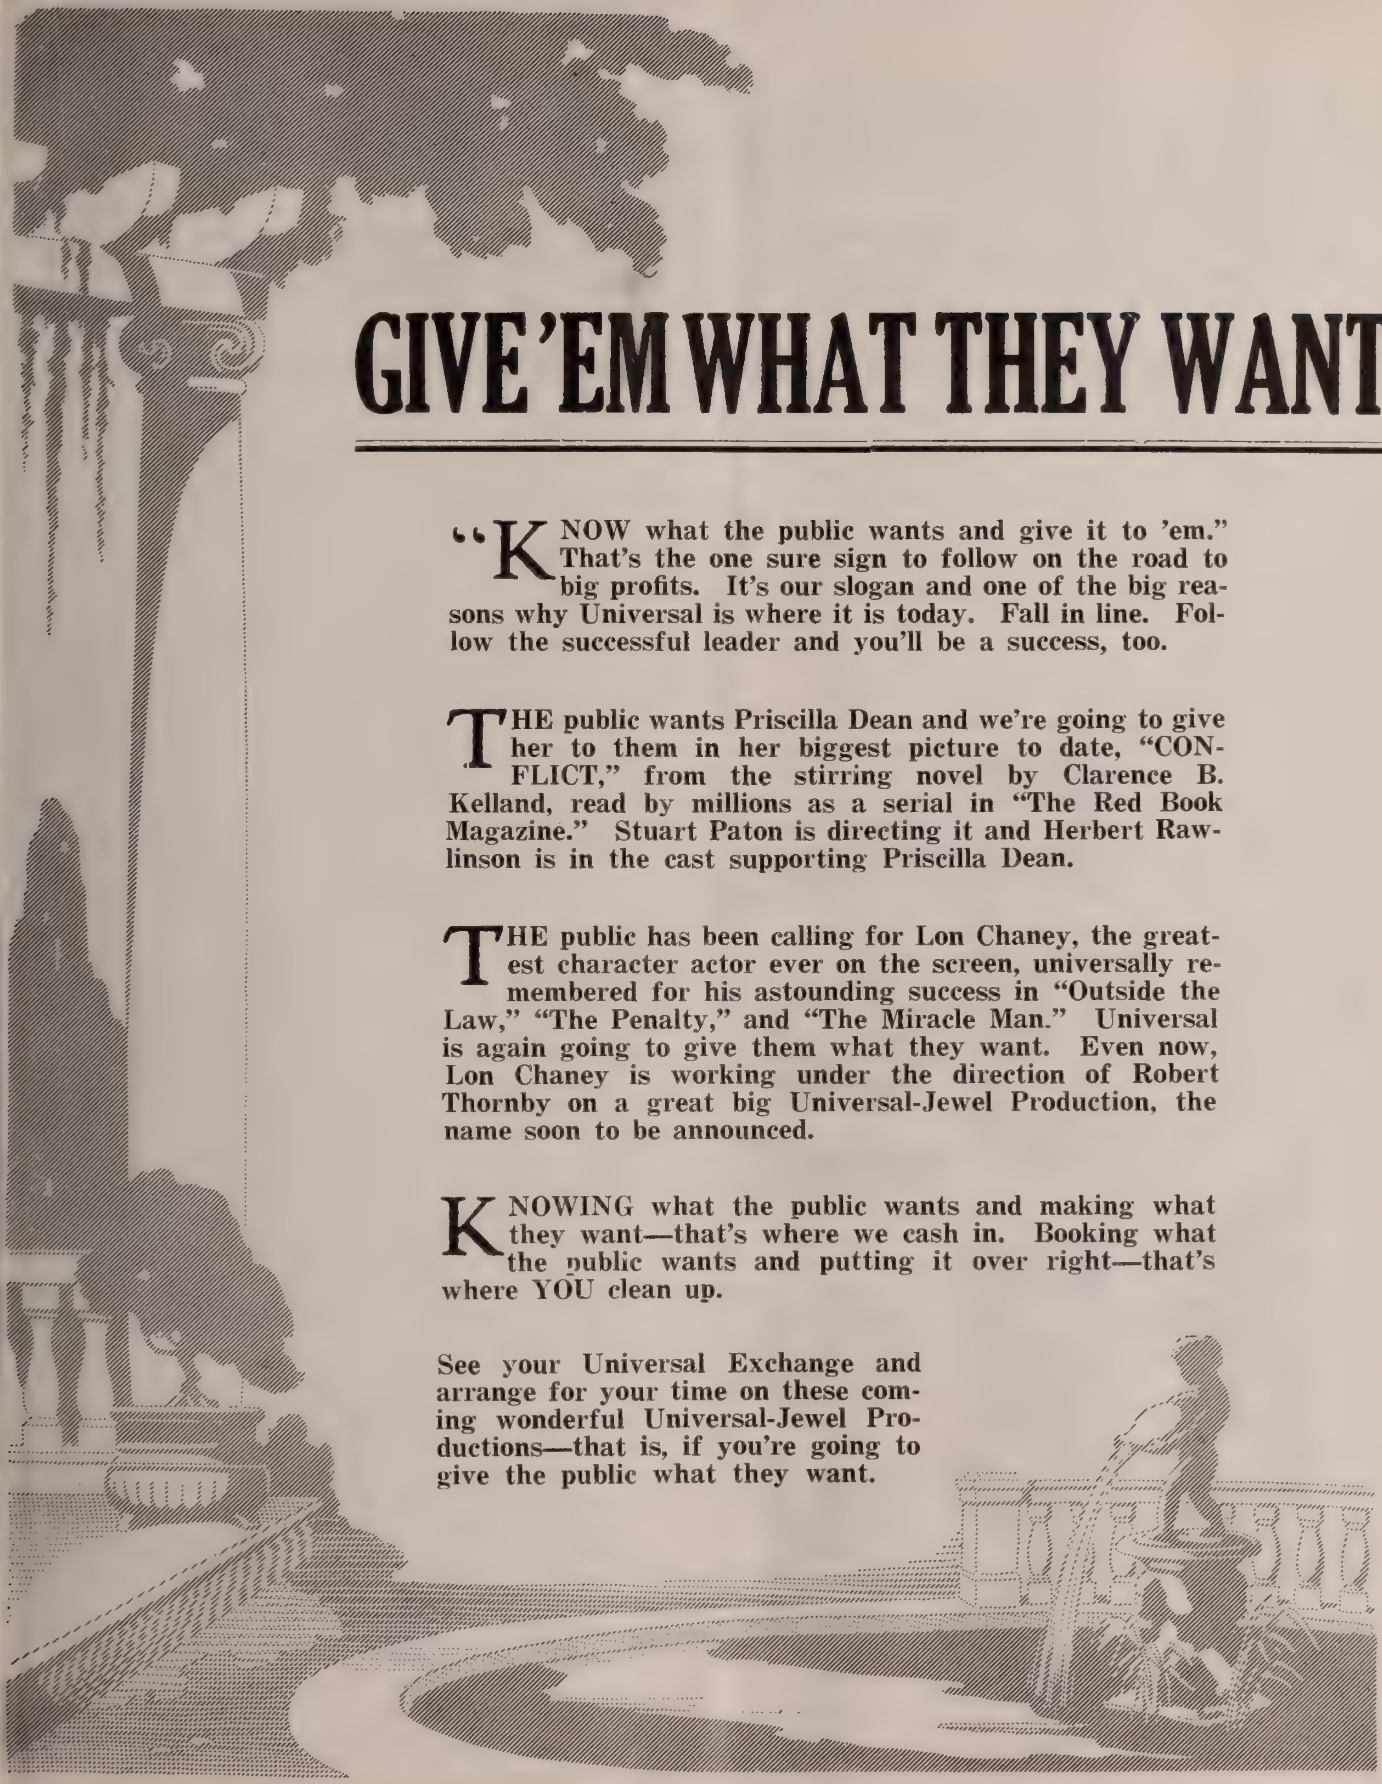
> There has been much criticism of the various Boards because their orders have differed widely on the same pictures. A careful analysis of their findings, however, will show that in nearly every case they all sought the same general change in theme, but differed naturally as to the details for effecting this change."

Approves Priscilla Dean Picture

The first picture upon which Mr. Willis has worked is "Conflict," Priscilla Dean's forthcoming Universal-Jewel production, in which she was directed by Stuart Paton, based upon a subtle psychological theme of smashing drama, replete with daring situations and adhering closely to the Red Book Magazine story by Clarence Buddington Kelland. There is not in the entire production one foot which, in the judgment of Mr. Willis, needs deletion.

Other productions, however, have been improved by his suggestions for slight changes, and the executives of Universal City through his intimate knowledge of censorship conditions, are becoming familiar with the requirements of the various boards.



GIVE 'EM WHAT THEY WANT

"KNOW what the public wants and give it to 'em." That's the one sure sign to follow on the road to big profits. It's our slogan and one of the big reasons why Universal is where it is today. Fall in line. Follow the successful leader and you'll be a success, too.

THE public wants Priscilla Dean and we're going to give her to them in her biggest picture to date, "CONFLICT," from the stirring novel by Clarence B. Kelland, read by millions as a serial in "The Red Book Magazine." Stuart Paton is directing it and Herbert Rawlinson is in the cast supporting Priscilla Dean.

THE public has been calling for Lon Chaney, the greatest character actor ever on the screen, universally remembered for his astounding success in "Outside the Law," "The Penalty," and "The Miracle Man." Universal is again going to give them what they want. Even now, Lon Chaney is working under the direction of Robert Thornby on a great big Universal-Jewel Production, the name soon to be announced.

KNOWING what the public wants and making what they want—that's where we cash in. Booking what the public wants and putting it over right—that's where YOU clean up.

See your Universal Exchange and arrange for your time on these coming wonderful Universal-Jewel Productions—that is, if you're going to give the public what they want.

PUBLICITY FOR "RED COURAGE"

WOULD MARRY TO REFORM, HE SAYS, ADMITTING "PAST"

"THE blackest villain is none too black to suit me," declares Joe Girard, who has the role of Joe Reedley, and unscrupulous politician and crook, in "Red Courage," Hoot Gibson's starring picture adapted from Peter B. Kyne's story, "The Sheriff of Cinnebar."

Joe Girard is one of the most popular of "heavy" men on the screen, having appeared as the villain of so many pictures that he cannot even remember what they are.

"Sometimes I'm the smooth and polished villian—sometimes I'm the wolf in sheep's clothing—sometimes I'm a terrible person who steals from widows and orphans—and sometimes I'm painted just plain burglar giving quarter to no one.

"My favorite role is that of the slick politician with the high hat, frock coat and expansive chain across a wild vest," declares Mr. Girard.

"But I'm not sure this 'villainous' business is so good," he said with a reflective look in his dark eyes. I'm not married, while all the heroes seem to be able to find someone to have them. I wish it would get to be stylish to like the villain, for I'm almost certain I have excellent possibilities as a husband."

Mr. Girard was born in Williamsport, Pa., and claims Philadelphia as his home town, although for almost twenty years he played stage roles, always billed out of New York.

WOULD RATHER DECORATE SCREEN THAN RESIDENCES

WHEN Molly Malone twinkles her courageous way as Jane Reedley through the dramatic scenes of Hoot Gibson's latest starring vehicle, "Red Courage," by Peter B. Kyne, few of those who admire the sweet young girl in her picturesque ridings habits will know that she came close to missing the screen altogether and so losing out on a career that promises to bring her fame and fortune.

Miss Malone was visited by the fairies in her babyhood and so was showered with more than one gift. The Irish have lots of luck usually, but Miss Malone has even more than her share—for she is both an artist and an actress.

She studied interior decorating for some time, intending to make that her profession, but along came a brave moving picture director who offered her so much money to play the lead in his production that pretty Molly's eyes simply stared in amazement—and dropping her sketch book and pencil, she flew off to Hollywood to enter the moving picture field.

Molly Malone is a native of Denver, Colorado, but has spent much of her life in Mexico, where her father had extensive mining interests.

SCREEN CELEBRITY OWES RECOGNITION TO CAMERA

LITTLE Mary Philbin is a new screen personality, but she gives promise of going far up the ladder of success.

In "Red Courage," Hoot Gibson's latest starring picture adapted from Peter B. Kyne's virile story, "The Sheriff of Cinnebar," she has the appealing role of the young daughter of a talented but drunken father, a role that is especially suited to the sweet and child-like freshness of the petite actress.

HOOT GIBSON in "RED COURAGE"
IT'S A UNIVERSAL

Mary Philbin a few months ago was a school girl in a Chicago high school, but one day Fate, in the disguise of a photographer, stepped in and the next thing Mary knew she found herself the winner of a prize and a ticket to Universal City.

On arriving at the western studios she was given the role of a little cripple girl in Erich von Stroheim's marvelous picture, "Foolish Wives," and the noted star-director predicts stardom for Mary with the next two years.

The pretty young girl, with her cloud of dark brown curls, is well adapted to fit the role of the little daughter who by her loving self-sacrifice finally wins her father back to paths of decency and sobriety.

Mary Philbin confesses that her greatest ambition is to become a good screen actress and to that end she is conscientiously working, with the result that she has recently been cast in a number of Universal pictures in which she plays important roles.

SERVICE PAGE FOR "RED COURAGE"

PINTO PETERS and Chuckwalla Bill prevent two bandits from holding up the stage. The bandits escape. Jane, a passenger, compliments Pinto for his bravery. He learns her name and he and Chuckwalla go to Cinnebar, her home town.

Jane is welcomed in Cinnebar by Joe Reedley, her guardian, and Mayor Percy Gibbons, the editor of the newspaper, is chased out of town for printing statements offensive to the mayor. Percy meets Pinto and Chuckalla and wishes his paper, by quit claim deed, onto the pair.

The mayor holds a mortgage on the newspaper. Pinto counts over their money with a view of paying it off—they haven't enough. Chuckwalla suggests the gambling hall. Pinto makes friends with Judge Fay. Pinto comes face to face with Jane, Reedley and Blackie. Pinto announces himself as the new owner of the paper. They take Nathan, the printer, into partnership; Nathan furnishes his savings to help pay off the mortgage. The three decide the town needs a moral awakening.

IT'S A UNIVERSAL.

Pinto hands out his first editorial effort, the announcement of his and Chuchkwalla's intention to run in the coming election for mayor and sheriff respectively. Reedley warns Pinto to abandon the paper, and when Caldwell appears with a copy of the paper, Pinto is threatened. Meanwhile the old judge, with his speechmaking, is stirring up the town.

Reedley's henchmen, Steve and another, try to shoot Pinto and Chuckwalla. Pinto rides around the bluff, intercepting their escape. Pinto ropes Steve and the other bandit, forcing them to confess they were sent by Caldwell, the sheriff. Pinto takes them back to town. Pinto informs Caldwell he must immediately withdraw from the election race. Shortly after Eliza comes to the printing shop to thank Pinto for regenerating her father and breaks down through honest gratitude; Pinto tries to console her. Jane appears and observes what looks like a compromising attitude. Chuckwalla buys Blackie's gambling hall at his own price. The ex-sheriff tells Reedley of his being ordered out of town and demands money to take him East. Reedley refuses. Pinto and Chuckwalla overhear the quarrel between the two in which Caldwell directly accuses the ex-mayor of stealing from Jane's property.

Jane arranges to sell her property and return East herself. That night, Eliza, having heard of it, and suspecting the cause, goes to Jane. Jane is absent, being with Blackie. Caldwell has secretly returned to town in disguise and is seen by Chuckwalla, who recognizes him. Reedley makes unwelcome advances to Jane, but is frustrated by the old judge, who has followed his daughter. Pinto hears Eliza's scream, rushes into the house and finds Reedley beating up the judge. Pinto proceeds to fight the ex-mayor, but is prevented from killing him.

Blackie catches Reedley in the act of making off with Jane's money. They quarrel. Nathan, meanwhile, has learned what has happened to Jane, the girl he loves, and gone gunning for the ex-mayor.

Twenty minutes later Reedley is found dead. But the money is not to be found.

The next day Nathan, the ex-sheriff, and Blackie are all under arrest as suspects of the murder. No grounds are found to hold Blackie on, yet Pinto is positive that he is guilty. Jane demands Blackie's release, and, to everybody's surprise, Pinto complies with her request. Jane elopes with Blackie. Pinto follows the pair into the night. A big fight follows. Jane realizes Pinto's true worth—that she loves him and confesses that she joined him in the scheme to force Blackie to play his hand. Jane insists the gambling hall be closed before she will marry Pinto. Chuckwalla, grumbing, consents.

Regarding the Star of "Red Courage"

HOOT GIBSON, the smiling star of "Red Courage" is admirably suited to portray the role of Pinto Pete, the virile young westerner who changes the politics of a town under the dominance of a crooked politician.

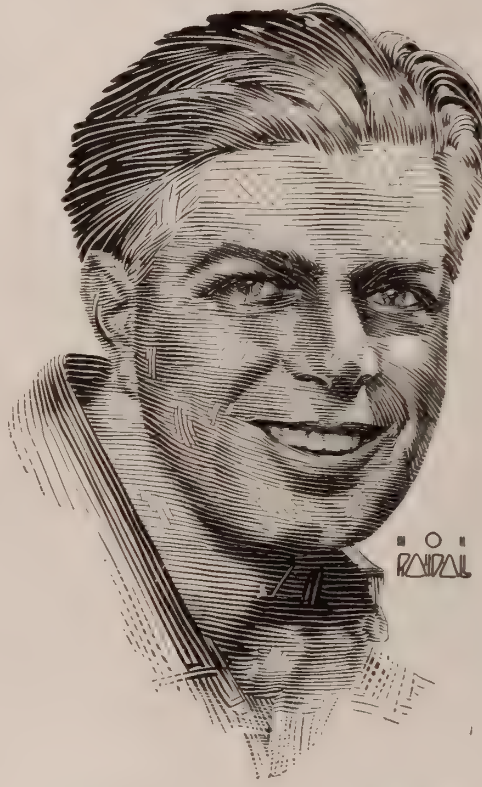
Mr. Gibson was born at Tekamah, Nebraska and has crowded his twenty-six years of life of picturesque adventure.

At Pendleton, Oregon in 1912 he won the gold belt as champion all around cowboy of the world.

Entering the tank corps he saw service overseas in the World War, returning to take up his screen career where he had left off at the moment when the United States entered the war.

At one time Mr. Gibson was a racing driver with the American Automobile Association.

For the past year the vivid young westerner has been starred by Universal in a number of scintillating cowboy stories, "Red Courage," his last one being unusually clever and full of thrilling situations.



Hoot Gibson, As Pinto Pete, Starring In Universal's Film, "Red Courage."

"Red Courage" is an adaptation of Peter B. Kyne's "The Sheriff of Cinnebar" and in it the smiling courage of Hoot Gibson flashes across the silversheet in a refreshing series of circumstances which include also a charming young girl.

The handsome young star comes of a family of theatrical people including his mother and sister, the former, Della Gibson, having been well known on the stage for many years.

In "Red Courage," his current vehicle, Hoot enacts the role of Pinto Pete, a grinning, happy-go-lucky, devil-may-care, ne'er-do-well who comes into possession of a one-horse newspaper in a small Western jerk-water town. Aided by his lanky side-partner, Chuckawalla Bill, Pinto cleans up the town, replaces the crooked sheriff after a bitterly-contested election, runs out the corrupt mayor, solves a murder mystery and wins a charming girl against almost overwhelming odds. Hoot gets in and out of more trouble in a minute than most folks do in a lifetime.

Gentlemen:

You will recall our agreement regarding "Reputation," that if it did not hold up you would furnish another program to complete week and would hold same for me. It will not be necessary to hold this program for us.

When a picture turns hundreds away as "Reputation" has Monday and yesterday, with the thermometer at 90 in the shade, the Elks' convention festivities and other attractions to combat against, it is certainly a winner.

Priscilla Dean and "Reputation" established themselves the first day's showing and, judging from the talk it is creating, should gross equal to any attraction shown in the city during the winter season—and that is going some.

Pictures like "Reputation" certainly banish box office troubles.

Yours very truly,

Guthrie, Oklahoma.

Dear Friends:

I write to express my surprise and gratification. Played "Outside the Law" yesterday and you will possibly fall dead when I tell you it is good. Wonderful, grand, everything. There has not been any picture made to date that will compare with it. This one has that element of everything so essential for Big Pictures. Guthrie is a hard boiled audience and you must have something if they ever mention it; but, believe me, they stopped in bunches to pass compliments on this one.

If all so-called "specials" were anything equal to this one, an exhibitor would not need the shotgun to protect his vital inwards so often.

Take it from me, it's a picture, the picture of the year. I am in a pretty good position to know, for I have played everything worth while up to date, and this one easily takes the candy. Thanks for this real one,

NED PEDIGO.

Knapp, Chairman of the Pennsylvania State Board of Censorship, appeared in the Sunday edition of the Philadelphia Inquirer September 4, in the witty column "The Call Boy's Chat." Mr. Knapp modestly hides his identity under the assumed name "The Old Stager." The article follows:

"Looking more like an advance agent than our mutual friends, the Old Stager popped into the room quite unexpectedly, carrying under his arm a lot of photographs. After a cordial greeting he took his favorite chair remarking that he felt it his duty to be on hand at the firing of the first gun of the new season.

"But why the bundle of pictures?" I asked.

"Merely mementoes of my delightful trip to the California studios in the company of the various representatives of censor boards throughout the country. You knew, of course, that the learned expurgators of unfit scenes in pictures were invited by Carl Laemmle, of the Universal, to be his guests and assist in cutting 'Foolish Wives,' which is without doubt the most expensive picture ever shot, its cost having reached the fabulous figure of $1,250,000 before it was completed. Well, these pictures I am carrying are some of the views of the censorious body which partook of Universal's hospitality, which, by the way, was magnificent as well as munificent.

Auditorium Theatre, South Bend, Indiana, Makes Good Use of Twenty-four-sheet In Boosting Universal Special Attraction Stars.

"'Foolish Wives,' I might add, will prove a pleasant entertainment when it is finally presented to the public. When I left the cutters had not completed their work, the censors having to look at some 30 reels during one night session. Erich von Stroheim, who directed the picture and played the leading male role as well, certainly did not stint himself in the matter of elaborateness of scenic devices and group scenes. I am told that no less than $80,000 were expended in railroad fares alone, he having taken some 400 persons to Monterey four or five times to shoot cliff scenes, whereas he might have secured equally effective 'atmosphere' within a few miles of Universal City. Then, too, massive buildings representing the Casino and other famous places about Monte Carlo were constructed at a cost more than double what it would have been to have taken the principals and a cameraman to the famous Continental gambling place. It was just such extravagance that brought the cost of the picture up to the hitherto unheard of figure. There is a remarkable rain-storm as well as a vividly realistic fire scene in the picture and Mr. von Stroheim plays the part of a bogus count with fine results. But the picture is too massive for a programme and will of necessity have to be shown as a super-feature with no surrounding attractions."

Mr. Knapp's enthusiasm is shared in by those who have been fortunate enough to witness advance "flashes" of Carl Laemmle's greatest achievement, "Foolish Wives."

Palace Theatre Opens With "Wallop"

Madison, Wisconsin, Playhouse Will Present Universal Program Exclusively—A $7,000 Organ Is Installed

AFTER seven weeks spent in redecorating and installing complete equipment, the Palace Theatre at Schenk's Corners opened on Thursday evening. Over 800 people attended the opening, including 250 kiddies from the east side who filled the theatre to its capacity for three performances. The feature picture last evening was a Universal comedy, "The Wallop," starring Harry Carey.

The proprietor, E. M. Michelson, has had eight years experience in the moving picture business and the Palace theater is his fourth theater. It is through his efforts that the Palace has been made possible for east side residents and Madison people.

The $7,000 organ which has been installed is one of beautiful tone and is unique in arrangement with a mechanical attachment whereby organ music may be made possible during intermission when the organist wishes to be relieved. The Palace now has the equipment and the appearance of a metropolitan theatre and the program of pictures which it will present are the best Universal City can produce.

Century Comedy Company Changes Plans

President Julius Stern Announces New Production Policy To Benefit All Exhibitors

JULIUS STERN, president of Century Comedies, is changing some of his production plans, it is announced.

The success of Baby Peggy and Brownie, the Wonder Dog, as co-stars, is shown by their recent contracts through the Paramount circuit among others, and the repeated demands of exhibitors for the pair. While it is planned to make pictures of them both together, the baby has proved herself such a success as a star in her own right supported by grown-ups, that she will be featured in a series of comedies of home life, guaranteed to make any father and mother laugh.

Mr. Stern has chosen Alf Goulding, former director for Harold Lloyd, to direct Harry Sweet. Sweet's next release will be "Mamma's Cowpuncher," the adventures of a mother, a boy who is thrown on his own resources, and goes to the wild and woolly West to make his fortune. He learns a lot of things, some amusing and thrilling before he finally wins the girl who helps make a man of him. Bartine Burkett plays the part of the girl. Miss Burkett, who has been engaged to support alternately Harry Sweet and Charles Dorety, is one of the prettiest girls ever signed up by Century, which is rapidly gaining a reputation for pretty girls.

Louise Lorraine, leading woman of "The Adventures of Tarzan," is another Century beauty who will be seen in support of Dorety and Sweet.

Charles Dorety, who has shaved off his little mustache and is greatly improved thereby, will be directed by Alf Goulding and Tom Buckingham, who is back on the lot after being very ill with an attack of influenza. His first release is "A Nervy Dentist," which will be shown at the Central Theatre the week of September 25th. His next picture will be a sea comedy with Miss Lorraine. Buckingham is planning a series of burlesques on well-known films and plays for October production.

EXPERT SUGGESTS NOVEL TIE-UP FOR "WINNERS OF THE WEST"

Serial Manager Points Out Advantages To Be Derived From Co-operation Between Exhibitors and Educational Bodies

F. J. McCONNELL, Special Serial Manager for Universal, has evolved a novel plan whereby exhibitors of the Art Acord Continued Feature, "Winners of the West," can hook-up with the influential educational boards in their localities. Mr. McConnell's plan is as follows:

During the past year the newspapers of the country, as well as certain of the highest type magazines, such as the "American" magazine and "Cosmopolitan," have made a feature of printing lists of questions on various subjects to see how well-informed the average person was.

Exhibitors will recall recently the Edison questionnaire which stirred up international comment in all circles of life.

There is a tremendous interest among people in how much they know.

Inasmuch as the "Winners of the West" serial is built primarily on actual events, it strikes a keynote in its relation to American history. Therefore, if the exhibitor booking this serial would offer a prize to the boy or girl answering a list of from five to twenty questions at the end of the eighth episode, it will immediately result in a tremendous interest in seeing the picture outside of the picture interest of the serial itself.

In a lot of towns it would be possible, undoubtedly, for the exhibitor to interest the principal of the school. The details of the plan would be changed in various localities, but the primary thing is to create an interest in this "Winners of the West" serial by putting on the "Questions and Answers Contest" in these theatres, and it is up to us to encourage every exhibitor to do so.

Mr. McConnell will be glad to know just how this works out with you and would also appreciate any information as to any stunt which will help the exhibitor put over Universal serials during the year. He will be glad to furnish a list of questions for use in this contest, and will send them along to the exhibitor as soon as he gets the latter's comments. Exhibitors are respectfully urged to tell Mr. McConnell what success they have.

Canadian Censor Board Chairma

Isabel G. Burbeck Praises Courtesy and Generosity of Hosts To Visiting Shear-Wielders. Met Many Celebrities and Saw Great Variety of Scenic Wonders — Amazed at Magnitude of Monte Carlo Set For "Foolish Wives"

EDMONTON, Sept. 15.—It is almost impossible to try and picture in a short article the perfectly wonderful trip given us by the Universal Film Manufacturing company of Universal City, California.

Our party consisted of 25 censors of motion pictures, representing the provinces of the Dominion of Canada and the states in which there is censorship, representatives of motion picture papers and our hosts. I must say that neither time nor expense was spared in giving us a week of the most diversified entertainment, each day commencing at 10 o'clock, and ending any time after midnight, and before 10 o'clock the following morning.

This included motor trips of hundreds of miles through the wonderland of California, revealing to our view acres and acres of orange, lemon, grapefruit and walnut groves; peach, pear and nectarine orchards, and the largest olive grove in the world. Tours of inspection of the sunken gardens of Los Angeles and the famous Adolphus Busch gardens of Pasadena, and visits to the ocean shore. The Busch gardens are marvels of loveliness, covering 80 acres of ground, where one beholds the last word in landscape gardening. The manager of the estate allowed us to pick any kind of fruit or flower which was new to us. Here I picked figs and nectarines for the first time, and a ponderosa lemon weighing four pounds. A beautiful flower of the Amarillas variety won my admiration. It grows up out of the ground without any sign of foliage a cluster of pink waxen lilies, on a tall stalk and the perfume is most delightful. We were told every known variety of flower and shrub is to be found here. Barbecues served on the ocean beach, at Santa Monica and at Harry Carey's ranch, beautifully situated in the San Francisquito canyon proved vastly entertaining.

Wonderful Studio Settings

We spent several hours on many occasions at Universal City viewing the wonderful studio settings that really have to be seen to be appreciated, or even to convince one that some of the scenes which we sometimes see in the pictures were not really taken abroad. One setting in particular was composed of three immense buildings on three sides of a square in the centre of which was a beautiful fountain playing in the midst of lofty palms. These buildings represented the Hotel de Paris, the theatre and the famous Casino of Monte Carlo. The front of these buildings are exact replicas of the original buildings and during the filming of the picture for which they were constructed were ablaze with millions of electric lights. Three hundred people in evening dress going to and from the different buildings, motor cars driving through the square, and a street car coming up the street past the hotel could easily convince one that the picture was filmed at Monte Carlo. This one setting conveyed to us the thought, time and amount of money which has to be expended in the filming of a large feature.

Circus Staged for Censors

At Universal City an animal circus was put on for our party, and we found that the Universal Film Manufacturing Company had a real zoo and a wonderful animal trainer. The lions we so often see featured in serials and comedies are very fierce and vicious animals; not at all what we have thought them to be. Joe Martin, the chimpanzee, was quite as pleased to see us as we were to see him and did not feel at all afraid of the censor, knowing that his pictures were not censorable. Most wonderful dogs of all breeds were there, from the wonderful Kazan of the huskies to the tiny toy poodle and all so sleek and fat and well cared for. All the animals showed that wonderful care and attention was given them and came very readily and confidently to the trainer.

Inspect Many Departments.

An inspection of the wardrobe and property rooms would easily give one pleasure for an entire day, but we had to curtail it to a couple of hours. Here one finds furniture and clothing of every period in history, and the research department must be a most interesting one in which to work. Care in the detail of each picture is very obvious when one sees into the interior of these immense storehouses wherein are kept the different articles necessary for the perfect equipment and dressing of the sets. I could write a volume on our visits of inspection to the studios of Universal City. Not the least interesting part of our visit was our luncheons at Universal City, at which we were favored in meeting several of the stars; although at this particular time there is very little work being done in any of the studios. Among those present were Eric Von Stroheim, Priscilla Dean, Gladys Walton, Miss Dupont, Eileen Sedgwick, Marie Prevost, Lee Moran, Hoot Gibson, Eddie Polo, Frank Mayo, Harry Carey, Art Accord, etc. They were very gracious to us, and we spent many happy hours in their company during our visits to Universal City.

Our hosts were not selfish in their trips of inspection of studios, for they were instrumental in securing for us the freedom of other studios, such as the Famous Players-Lasky, Brunton, Robertson-Cole, etc., at which we met and saw at work many of the stars, including Wallie Reid, Casson Ferguson, Thomas Meighan, Betty Compson, Helen Dunbar, Will Rogers, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Jack Pickford, Jack Holt, etc. We were personally received at the Brunton studio by Miss Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, the former just finishing the last scenes of "Little Lord Fauntleroy." They were very delightful and altogether splendid in their reception of us, Miss Pickford giving us a delightful talk on their approval of censorship.

Ovation to Priscilla Dean

An evening was arranged at Sunset Inn when an ovation was given Priscilla Dea in honor of the visiting censors. Here we saw the cabaret life of the motion picture stars, which while not exactly in line with the lives of most of us, was interesting in showing the style of amusement we so often see depicted on the screen. Here we met more of the actresses and actors—Clara Kimball Young, Bustr Keaton and his bride, Natalie Talmadge, Stuart Holmes, Mabel Normand and a number of lesser lights.

The closing event on the program was a trip to Catalina Island, the home of Wrigley of Spearmint fame. The trip was made from Los Angeles on a private yacht giving us three hours on the Pacific ocean. We were taken on a trip in the glass boats, through which we saw the beautiful submarine gardens, and from the deck of which we saw myriads of the wonderful flying fish. By this time we had been feasted with so much of the beautiful and to some of us such a novel nature, each day bringing something more wonderful than the day before, that I simply could not remain any longer on the ground, so literally "went up in the air" in a hydro-aeroplane going for some distance out on the ocean before flying over the mountains. The sensation was thrilling and delightful and left nothig to be desired.

After these days of wonderment and excitement it was comforting and restful to return to the Beverly Hills Hotel, which was our home, and in every sense of the word was home-like. It is a magnificent hotel, nestled at the foot of the Beverley hills and not far from the ocean where one can get mountain and sea air. The hotel is conducted by real people who have the interests of their guests at heart and a home feeling pervades the atmosphere at all times. Beauty is everywhere manifest around the spacious grounds in which we saw almost every kind of fruit growing, even bananas.

One of the very nice features of our trip was the perfect arrangement by the reception committee for the personal conducting of the trip. Three or more of the officials being present always to see personally to our comfort and enjoyment.

Courtney Riley Cooper Takes His Pen in Hand

My Dear Jack Ford:

Being an arthur, I must do as arthurs do.

A man is not an arthur unless he complains regarding some story of his which has been done into a motion picture. Therefore, at all costs, I must complain. I shall enumerate the complaints. Here goes:

1—You made a good picture of "Christmas Eve at Pilot Butte," in which Harry Carey appeared under the name of "Desperate Trails." Now, I rise to ask you how in the name of Jumping Jehosophat is an arthur going to maintain his high and lofty state when a director takes away from him the privilege of saying that de movies is ruining literature, by making a good picture. It's positively appalling.

2—My name was spelled correctly in all press stuff, and I was given credit for the story in practically every instance. This is an error.

3—From a film standpoint, the changes which were made went to make the story better, and the general love theme and suspense and heart interest greater than in my original story. This is sacrilege.

4—The photography was excellent thruout, leaving me no argument that, even though the director did try to do his best, the camera man ruined it. I never heard of such a high handed way of doing things.

5—In filming a cross-country train, you used high-wheel Pacific type engines, such as are used to haul the kind of train I wrote about, and did not use a worn-out dinky accommodation engine. How in the dickens am I to maintain my position when you insist on doing things right?

6—You had a sheriff who looked like a sheriff, and not a tin-star constable. Do you think this is fair?

7—The whole darned production was well done, well acted, and well cast. Here I am in the position of being forced to admit to my supercilious friends that Harry Carey got out of the part every atom of stuff that there was in it, that Irene Rich did a whale of a good piece of acting, that the snow scenes were good, and——

Oh, what's the use. All I can say is that as a director you are very unkind to arthurs.

Seriously, I want you to know how much I liked the picture, and how thoroughly happy it made me. You see, the story was a little closer to me than ordinary yarns. It was one of the last yarns I covered in the newspaper business before quitting my mill at the Denver Post to give all my time to magazine writing, and in turning Bill Carlisle into a fiction character, there was a bit of sentiment about it. And to have the picture turn out well, too, has made me very happy.

Harry Carey, One of the Culprits Mentioned In Mr. Cooper's Attack.

By the way, I wonder if you can tell me anything about Theodore Wharton, for whom I once worked as Scenario Editor during the filming of Chief Flynn's spy story, "The Eagle's Eye." He left Ithaca, N. Y., where he had had his studio, about a year and a half ago, and went out to California, and, I think, did some work around the Universal studio. I heard from him a couple of times and then he rather dropped out of sight. I've always thought a lot of Ted and hate to lose my connection with him.

Governor Carey of Wyoming and myself divided a chair with Pauline Frederick the other day up at Cheyenne Frontier Days celebration and had a very good time.

Under separate cover I am very happy to send you an autographed copy of my last book, which I hope you can read with freedom and abandon, as there is nothing in it which would make the sort of pictures you're doing.

Again, with thanks for making a darned good production of my yarn, I am,

Yours most sincerely,
COURTNEY RYLEY COOPER.

"STEALIN' HOME" (Universal-Century comedy directed by Alf. Goulding. Story by Alf. Goulding. Length, 2 reels). —One of the best short comedies recently released. The bubble-blowing scene is very funny, and the office boy as a pitcher in a big league team, catching a ball standing on his head and the long slide "home," will catch the fancy of the baseball fan. In this picture Harry Sweet is more acrobat than comedian, which is one of the things which lift the comedy out of the general run. The Fable of the Exhibitor Who Snapped Out of It and Corraled a Pot of Jelly for Himself

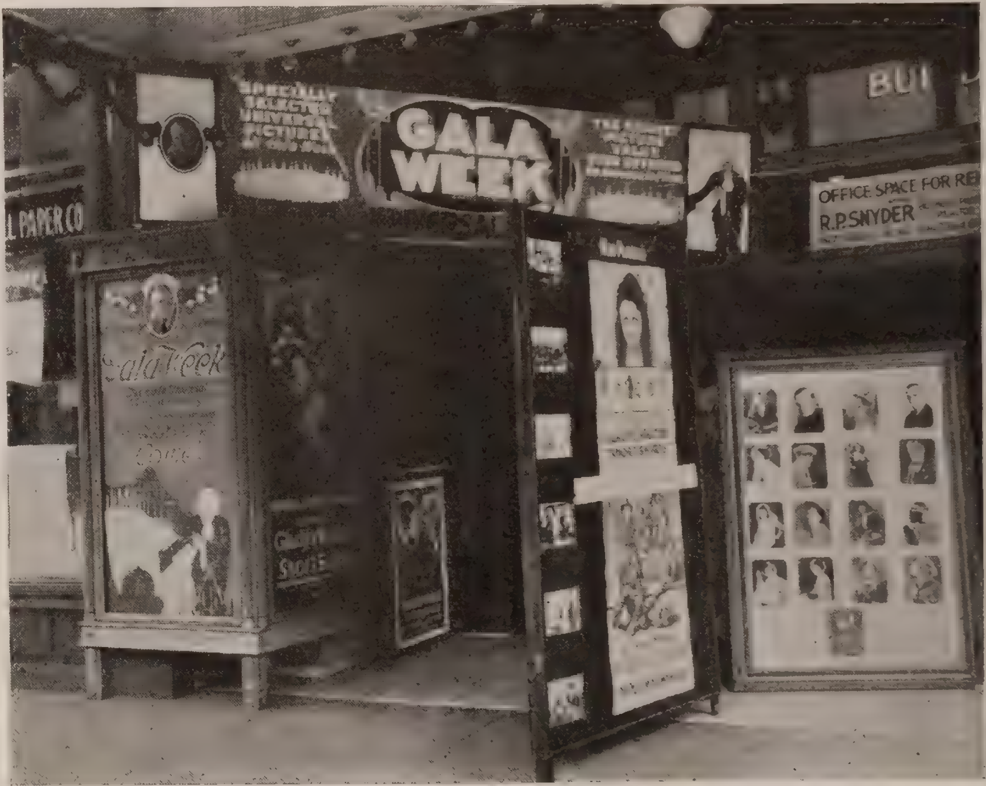
By Peter Pepper

ONCE upon a time there was an Exhibitor who Didn't Believe in Advertising. Had he lived in Africa he'd have been shot and his Head made into Piano Keys. His idea of a Jazzy Display was to Flash a Hand-made Slide the Night Before and let Nature take its Course. He was the Proof Positive that Barnum was Savvy when he said the Birthrate was Sixty per Hour.



"Gala Week" Front, Standard Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio.

When he Booked a Knockout he Put Over the Sensational Stuff and used Red Ink on the Slide instead of Black. He had a Patron; he was a Scotchman who had once found a Thin Dime on the Floor and Kept Coming Back.

Now and Then a Salesman would Shoot some Dope into him about Wising the Public; but he couldn't Awaken Any Interest. Mr. Exhibitor wasn't going to Fall for any New-fangled Bunk like Posters and Such-like.

His Theatre began to show indications that All wasn't Quite Right. People Forgot about His Place. Folks started calling him "The Hermit." But he was a Wise Bird and Knew that Depression was to Blame. When Depression proved the Bunk, he Passed the Buck on to Hot Weather.

He Was Always Positive, But Never Right

After the Hot Spell was over he said Money was Tight. But the Live Exhibitors in town kept right on Packing Them In. But Our Hero had Figured It All Out. You couldn't Make people see a Show if they Didn't Want to see it. He wasn't Hep to the fact that you could Make them Want to See It.

He had read somewhere that if a man had Something Worth While the people would make a path to his door, or Something Like That. But Mr. Browning had been a Dead One for some years past. Furthermore Robert Browning wouldn't have known the difference between a First Run House and a Shooting Gallery.

Things began to look sort of Squeamish. He reasoned that he might as well be Broke as the way he was now; so he decided to take a Brodie, Spread a Little Paper and Follow the Hints in the Universal Press Sheets and Moving Picture Weekly.

He Went The Limit and shot his wad on exploitation. The billboards and heralds looked like a Million Dollars. Folks in town who'd forgotten all about his Cinema Emporium, thought that a new theatre had come to town. They flocked to his theatre like Cullud Gem'mun to a Watermelon Handout. The stunts, lobbies and fronts went over Big.

The Enlightened Exhibitor was Knocked for a Row of 'Dobe Telephone Booths. Sore-heads wanted to know why he hadn't let 'em in on the Good News, he had such a Bear of a Program. He felt Guilty for having Played a Dirty Trick by Holding Out on 'em. He learned to Say It with Paper.

He uses such a Raft of Paper now that the Folks call his theatre the Art Gallery. New arrivals can hardly find his theatre because he has so much Paper smeared over the Front. He distributes the Neatest Heralds and Throwaways in the Burg. When it comes to Slick Lobbies and Flossy Fronts, he's got the Competition looking like Two-Year-Olds. He's President of the Ad. Club, breaks into the Trade Papers every issue with photographs of Novel Exploitation Stunts and Artistic Lobbies of the Week, AND he's the Biggest Advertising Exploitation Booster Universal has in his Territory.

Universal to Film Series of Navy Yarns

Jack Perrin To Be Featured In Two-Reelers of Naval Adventure Written By Robert Dillon—Reeves Eason To Direct Former Western Film Star

UNIVERSAL will make a series of short-reel features based upon the experiences of a United States sailor and using the Pacific fleet for atmosphere.

Authorization to do this came to Irving G. Thalberg, director-general of Universal City, from Theodore Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the Navy, after months of negotiation between the two men.

For the first time in history a motion picture company has been granted permission to use any and all parts of a great battle fleet for the express purpose of giving the screen dramatic realism and accuracy.

Under Thalberg's personal supervision and with the collaboration of William Lord Wright, chief of the short-reel feature department at Universal City, Robert Dillon, a widely known action-author, wrote a series of two-reel dramas to be known as "Bob of the U. S. N." Negotiations between Universal and the Navy Department, as represented at the submarine base at San Pedro, was conducted in behalf of the studio of Harry Schenck, unit production manager, has been signed by Thalberg to establish liason between the producing unit and the Navy Department throughout the filming of the series.

With everything in readiness to start the production, Thalberg has assigned Reeves Eason to direct and has named Jack Perrin as the actor to depict the featured role of "Bob of the U. S. N."

The story concerns a young gunner who becomes involved in a foreign revolutionary plot, but who remains true to the allegiance and upholds the best traditions of the service Throughout the series the magnificent Pacific fleet will appear and the scenes will be graphic with intimate glimpses of combat ships in action.

The selection of a cast to support the featured player, in addition to scores of officers and men of the fleet who are to appear in the series, is now progressing at Universal City.

Jack Perrin, Starring in Universal's Series, "Bob of the U. S. N."

"Handsome Jack" Perrin, Universal's popular young leading man, is a victim of his good looks. His fine cut features, envied complexion and stadwart figure have prevented him from attaining the object of his ambition—and that is why he is now acting in pictures instead of directing them as he has long wanted to do.

When Jack Perrin came from Three Rivers, Michigan, to Los Angeles, California, it was with the intention of becoming a director. He had "put on" plays at college, read all the authorities on play production and even accepted a position as property boy at a Los Angeles theatre to acquaint himself with the technical side of the drama. When the opportunity came he secured a berth with Universal as assistant cameraman, in order to watch pictures in the making. But he was too good looking to waste time on the mechanical end of the picture. He was soon drafted to appear in acting parts, and reports from exhibitors all over the country decided Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, to promote him to leading roles.

The famous motorman who spent his day off riding around with another motorman would find a kindred spirit in Jack Perrin.

Perrin is a noted horseman and his good looks have won him the nickname of "Handsome Jack." Unlike many Western and serial stars he has no double and can do anything that is required of a cowboy in the course of a real day's work with the herd.

nI addition to his prowess as a puncher, Perrin is also a crack rifle and pistol shot, drives racing cars, pilots a plane and is an all around athlete.

Perrin has been seen in support of Universal's famous feminine stars and in other featured roles; but he is so unusually popular among play-goers as the exponent of the young and dashing Western hero that it has been decided at Universal City to keep him engaged under young Mr. Laemmle's direction on the fast two-reelers in which he excels.

"Bob of the U. S. N." will be released within a short time.

Splendid Cast for Lon Chaney in "The Mask"

FRANK CAMPEAU, famous on stage and screen, has been assigned an important role in "The Mask," Lon Chaney's drama of the Northwoods, which Universal is producing.

Campeau's magnificent acting will never be forgotten in such plays as "Pudd'n-head Wilson," "Arizona," "The Virginian," "Kindling," "The Ghost Breaker" and "Within the Law." He has also scored many successes on the screen.

Like Lon Chaney, Campeau is a master of the art of make-up and facial expression. He is the consummate artist.

"The Mask," written by Lucien Hubbard, head of the Universal Scenario Department in collaboration with Irving G. Thalberg, general manager of the film capital, boasts an all-star supporting cast, such as is seldom assembled for one production.

Opposite Chaney is Irene Rich, well known as leading woman for Will Rogers. Alan Hale, star in his own name; the clever little Stanley Goethals; Spottiswood Aiken, the eminent character actor; Dagmar Godowsky, noted actress and daughter of the famous pianist, and Herbert Standing form the remarkable cast.

'Killed Wrong Man' says Squaw Confessing Crime

"The Call of Duty"

Two-reel Western
Featuring
GEORGE LARKIN and JOSEPHINE HILL

STEVE MOUNTAIN writes John Milton he is on his way to collect what Milton owes him. Milton is worried, for he cannot raise the money.

Bessie is Milton's only daughter and is beloved of Jerry Burke of the Northwest Mounted. He sees Milton is worried, and the girl tells him why. Jerry offers to help Milton with the money which he, Jerry, has saved up for—the girl!

Wanita, an Indian Squaw, arrives in the village, and, noted by Jerry Burke, buys a knife at the trading post.

Jerry leaves to arrest Pierre Le Brea, who in a fight had killed his partner. Wanita, the Indian squaw, overhears Jerry's plans to arrest LeBrea and hurries away. Jerry pursues the squaw, fearing she will warn the half-breed.

Mountain comes to the trading post after his money and tells Milton he could forget the debt if Bessie became his wife. Bessie overhears the conversation and informs Mountain she is promised to a better man. Mountain says nastily that he will be in to-morrow for the money.

After hours of hard riding Jerry nears the cabin of the half-breed, but Wanita still holds the lead. Jerry and LeBrea fight in the cabin, and Jerry knocks LeBrea out. Wanita throws a knife at Jerry, but misses him. She swears she will have revenge on the policeman.

Milton has sent a messenger to the bank with Jerry's check for the gold which he owes Mountain. The latter intercepts the messenger and takes the money. Mountain hurries to the trading post and demands the money, which Milton is unable to pay, and then he tells Milton, "Make Bessie marry me and I will cancel the note." Milton angrily refuses and fights him. During the struggle Mountain is struck by a knife thrown by the Indian girl. Milton picks it up. Bessie and a trapper enter the room as Milton, knife in hand, is standing over Mountain's body.

Meanwhile Jerry has brought his prisoner in. The inspector tells Jerry to arrest John Milton for murder, the father of the girl to whom Jerry is engaged! The fight between love and duty surges within Jerry, but duty triumphs, and he resolves to carry out his orders.

Jerry finds a sack of gold in Mountain's clothes, and the sack is proven to belong to the man whom Milton sent to cash Jerry's check, but the knife used to kill Mountain corresponds with others in the showcase in the trading post! Jerry arrests Milton.

LeBrea, the half-breed, escapes from the lock-up. Jerry recalls that he had seen the Indian squaw, Wanita, with a knife similar to those on sale at the trading post. He overtakes the half-breed, and after a fierce battle makes LeBrea his prisoner. In retaliation Wanita overcomes Bessie and places her in danger. When confronted by Jerry, Wanita confesses killing Mountain by mistake for John Milton, who had told the policeman where LeBrea, her husband, was hiding, and adds she will kill Milton's daughter if Jerry does not free LeBrea.

Jerry is enraged. He makes the squaw a prisoner beside her husband, and starts to search for Bessie. He is almost frantic, believing the girl, whom Wanita says she tied and left helpless in the forest, had perished there. But a trapper has discovered the girl and released her, and Jerry finds her at the trading post.

With Wanita's confession that she killed Mountain, Bessie's father is released from prison.

Studio Almost Wrecked By 'Near' Screen Stars

"Back Stage"

One-reel Star Comedy

TWO embryo movie stars give up their jobs in the nice cool sewer after a correspondence school course in "How to Act." They manage to horn their way into the Universal City studio as property men. While studying their acting lessons one of the directors, Stron Voheim, attired in full uniform and wearing a monocle, sends out for a door to be used in one of his "Wolfish Fives" scenes.

The two get the door, and are bringing it through the studio when they see a woman being strangled by a man. They rush up and battle with him, only to find they have gummed a scene from one of the productions. After being driven away from that set, they continue along until they hear a lion roar. They rush in and find a man who has been clawed by the beast. They place him on the door and rush him to the hospital. The door swings down, drops the man, and they unknowingly proceed to the hospital without their patient.

Meantime Stron Voheim is becoming enraged at the delay, and breaks cane after cane in his fury, barking out orders and doing a lot of snappy saluting. They spoil a deathbed scene by interfering, are kicked out and once more start with the door. Their next faux pas is the ruining of a slapstick comedy. The director is disgusted with his own cast and gives them jobs as principals. They make the mistakes of throwing pies at the director instead of each other, and are chased through the studio to Stron Voheim's set.

Stron Voheim and most of his cast are plastered with pies in the ensuing battle, and the two near-actors are run off the lot. They see a steamship alongside the dock and decide to go to South America. Running up the gangplank, they dash through a door and fall about forty feet into the water. They have gone on another set without realizing it. They come to the surface and decide to throw away their books of instructions and give up all ideas of screen fame.

Dance Hall Burns Up as Men Fight for Girl

"WINNERS of the WEST"

Episode Five

"A Fight for a Fortune"

THE Indians see Art and Walsh fighting and run in to retake Art. Art knocks Walsh out, whistles to his horses and escapes on it pursued by Indians on horseback.

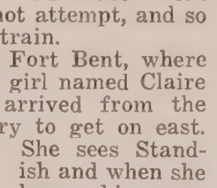
After a hard ride he sees Betty in a valley below the hill on which he is riding and he rides to rescue her from a group of Indians who are running toward her as she lies prone on the ground with a sprained ankle.

He reaches her first and swinging her to the saddle in front of him, he rides off pursued by the mounted Indians. He escapes from them by leaping a chasm on his horse which their animals will not attempt, and so rejoins the wagon train.

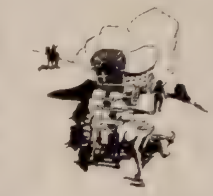
The party reach Fort Bent, where they find a strange girl named Claire Mitchell, recently arrived from the west and in a hurry to get on east. She sees Standish and when she learns his name changes her mind about going East and decides to return West with them.

Later that evening, Claire and Louis learn where Betty has hidden the map and they go after it, neither knowing the other is on his trail. They meet and the treachery of each is clear to the other. Louis insists upon an explanation of Claire's part in the man's history. She explains that she has just arrived from Sutter's Creek where she knew Arthur's father.

Standish, senior, has incurred the enmity of Dan Sharkey, keeper of a dance hall, determined to jump Standish's claim. To get the map showing its location he pawns Claire off on Standish as a decoy, she playing the role of an innocent victim of Sharkey's villainy.



To save her from such a fate, Standish agrees to cut the cards with Sharkey, his mine against the girl's freedom. They cut the cards on the saloon balcony, inside. Sharkey wins the map by cheating. A friend of Standish sees it and tells him. Sharkey hurls a bottle of whisky at him. It misses the man but knocks down a candelebra among dancers below. The bottle breaks and the alcohol takes fire.



In the meantime Standish has grappled with Sharkey and is fighting him and his henchmen on the balcony above the fire. The fire gets the best of the men and as they try to put it out everyone flees from the building but Standish and the man he is fighting.

The building is all in flames when the railing of the balcony breaks and Art falls to the floor below, which is now all ablaze. He has the map with him. It burns. Sharkey and his friends escape by jumping out of the upper windows.

The last seen of Standish he is wandering about hopeless in the smoke and fire trying to find a way out.

"Mama's Cowpuncher"

Starring HARRY SWEET

HARRY was an accomplished pianist, and the family made it their business to see that he was dressed as one. That is why we find him playing some portion of heavy music dressed in a soft flowing Little Lord Fauntleroy suit. Then one day we meet him playing to the tune of guns and bullets in a Western cafe.

His dumbness gets him into hot water, and it is not long before he vows to become a hard-boiled he-man. And with the aid of the colored all-around man of the cafe he does it.

How he achieves success with the lariat, the gun, the broncho-busting, and eventually winning the hand of the girl, is part of Harry Sweet's success. He leaves the rough country and brings his wife with him.

Years later he rides in on his folks, with his little wife and girl, and there to the surprise of the family shows them that jazz is the only thing in this present day, and to the tune of his jazzy ivory keys the entire family dances the latest steps.

Rescued From Wreck, Attacked by Wild Lions

"TERROR TRAIL"

Episode Thirteen

"The Forest of Fear"

HUNCH HENDERSON starts out in a power-boat to search the waters about the scene of the shipwreck for any signs of the operatives.

A weary week passes with no sign of Bruce. Elaine questions the hermit. He tells her for the first time of the shark menace and says he is sure that Bruce is dead. Elaine refuses to believe this. The hermit's manner suddenly changes. He tells Elaine that he loves her and will make her white queen of all that great land if she will marry him. Horrified, she refuses to consider it. Becoming more ardent, the hermit is attacked by one of his own animals which Elaine has befriended. She escapes from the house as the hermit is torn to pieces.

In the jungle, Elaine is beset by wild animals. She kills one as it leaps upon her, but exhausted by the effort she sinks down into the underbrush and finds refuge in slumber. Bruce loses her trail where she crosses a stream. But the elephant keeps on after her and finds her just as some lions are creeping upon her. He picks her up and carries her—and so Bruce finds her.

Valuable Formula Stolen During Owner's Absence

"TERROR TRAIL"

Episode Fourteen

"The Lure of the Jungle"

CRASHING through the jungle, they are attacked by countless savage beasts. Their mount, the elephant, is severely clawed by a man-eating tiger, but he manages to save the lives of his riders after a ferocious battle with the Bengal monster. He carries the couple safely out of the jungle.

They suddenly see a ship at a considerable distance, signal it and are taken aboard. It will take them back to God's country.

Elaine and Brue return to America. Going to Elaine's house to get the third part of the formula which they left behind, with the plan of turning in the entire formula and so ending the case, they find that in their absence the third part of the formula has been stolen from the safe. Elaine's butler, when questioned, tells a yarn about being aroused one night by two men, with whom he battled and who escaped. After they had gone he discovered that the safe had been rifled. He hints at some mysterious new organization which has been formed to get the formula and manufacture terror gas. The butler, although suspected by both Elaine and Bruce, is allowed his freedom in the hope that he will lead them to evidence against the culprits who are directing the operations against the government.

The first act of the operatives is to place the two parts of the formula where they will be safe for all time. Then they get on the track of the new band.

Hunch Henderson returns to America. He is met by his ex-butler, who was sent to jail by Elaine and Bruce, but has served his term. The butler tells Hunch of the new band and of how he was approached with a view to becoming a member of it. He claims to have remained loyal to Hunch. The latter instructs him to get ready to get on the trail of the new band.

Tried to Deceive Girl But She Detects Truth

"Fares, Please"

One-reel Star Comedy

EGBERT says good-by to his sweetheart and tells her he has to leave her to take a trial spin in his new car. His girl has visions of a beautiful limousine, but Egbert's machine is a 30-passenger trolley car. He puts on his conductor's uniform and stars to collect fares, but neglects to ring up most of them.

One of the company's "spotters" catches him, and he immediately starts making up for lost time by ringing the register for all it's worth. His girl gets on the car, and Egbert is afraid she'll recognize him. She sees him and tells him she loves him even more in uniform.

The "spotter" tries to break up their spooning. Just as Egbert has managed to give him the slip and get comfortably settled again beside his girl the car runs over a can of dynamite left on the track by a work gang. The car is blown up, but all the passengers are saved and everything ends happily.

Bear Attacks Man Searching for Girl

"WINNERS of the WEST"

Episode Six

"Buried Alive"

AT Fort Bent, Claire Mitchell explains the incidents at Sutter Creek that led to her trip east in search of Standish's map.

In Dan Sharkey's saloon the proprietor and his gang are fighting fiercely with Arthur Standish's father for possession of the map of the gold cave. The railing of the balcony gives way and drops Standish down into the fire, started when the candelabra fell to the floor.

Sharkey, Claire and the others escape. Standish, left alone in the flames, is all but burned alive. He is rescued by townsmen and taken to a cabin for first aid.

Learning of Sharkey's treachery, the miners run him out of town. Claire, still posing as Standish's friend, goes to his cabin, hoping to get the location of the mine from him. She learns that his son, Arthur, in Booneville, has the map, and she sets out alone for Booneville to get it, meeting Standish and the others westbound at Fort Bent.

While she is explaining these incidents, Art goes to the wagon for the map and discovers its disappearance. Seeing Louis and Claire near there, he shrewdly suspects Louis' part in its disappearance and demands it. Louis manages to slip the map to Claire, who hides it between a couple of logs in the stockade. She is caught in the act by a mysterious man wearing a bison skull over his head. The bison-headed man saves Art's life when Louis tries to knife him, and later gets the map from the place where Claire hid it. He escapes with it to the hills.

Believing Standish can duplicate the map from memory, Claire sets to work to vamp him for the secret. She succeeds only in arousing the jealousy of Betty Edwards, who sees them together and does not realize the meeting is one of Claire's engineering.

To get alone in her misery, she rides out from the fort into the hills. Art finds that she has gone and realizes the danger an unaccompanied girl might meet in the hills. He gets a horse and goes out after her.

The bison-headed man who disappeared with the map the preceding day sees Betty, and approaching her attempts to capture her. The horse takes fright and runs away, and she and her pursuer are caught in a landslide down the mountainside.

Art, attempting to get to her in time to save her from her pursuer, crosses the face of a cliff on a narrow shelf of rock. As he rounds a corner he comes face to face with a black bear. He tries to shoot it, but his rifle snaps. The bear advances upon him, and he loses his footing and slips over the edge of the rock ledge. He manages to catch on with his hands, but the bear clawing at him threatens to dislodge him at any moment and let him fall to the jagged rocks below.

It is only through Teddy, the faithful Dane, that Baby Peggy is saved, and the life-saver realizing his uselessness jumps back into the water.

Foils Stage Hold-up, Rescues Sweetheart

"Beauty and the Bandit"

Two-reel Western

MR. BAKER, a noted geologist, has been commissioned by the Canadian government to make a geological survey of the granite hills in Northwest Canada. His daughter, Madge, is accompanying him. They see a notice offering a reward of $5000 for the capture, dead or alive, of "The Snake," a notorious bandit. They are hailed by a rider whose actions arouse their suspicions. Mr. Baker puts on full speed to escape the supposed bandit, but is brought to a stop by the rider blocking the road with his horse. He takes the gun from her. Mr. Baker fears the worst, and offers him his valuables. The rider tells them he is Jerry Burke and offers the use of his cabin.

The friendship of Jerry and Madge deepens into a stronger feeling. One day Madge goes out alone and leaves a note for Jerry where she has gone. At the rendezvous she is seen by "The Snake," who accosts her. Madge is frightened and tries to get away, but is stopped by "The Snake."

Jerry finds the note and goes to meet Madge. The bandit hears Jerry's approach and drags Madge into the brush, gagging her with his arm. Jerry finds Madge's book and gloves and becomes alarmed. "The Snake" attempts to shoot him, but Madge spoils his aim. Jerry attacks "The Snake." Madge faints and Jerry rushes to her. "The Snake" escapes.

Jerry declares his love and learns it is returned. Madge's father refuses his consent until Jerry can show him $5,000 of his own. On top of that dismaying ultimatum a message comes to Baker necessitating their immediate return. While they are packing Jerry seeks consolation outside.

Jerry learns "The Snake's" whereabouts and dashes off. Jerry surprises the bandits, but is made a prisoner. One of the gang brings word of a shipment of gold that is going through on the stage that Madge and her father are on.

"The Snake" leaves Jerry in charge of a squaw. She goes to a stream for water. Jerry rolls to the fire and burns his bonds. He escapes and rides off to intercept the bandits.

The stage is held up. The bandits jump from their own horses to those of the stage. Jerry arrives and covers the bandits with his gun. "The Snake" and his men are made prisoners and Jerry tells the others he is a private of the Northwest Mounted Polife detailed to capture "The Snake." Baker relents, and all ends happily.

GET this and get it straight. In making this BIG THREE OFFER Universal is giving you the biggest sure-fire guaranteed profit plan that you've ever had.. I've seen them all and I know.

HERE are three great tried and proven Universal-Jewels—"Once To Every Woman," "Outside The Law" and "Reputation." In them appear such wonderful box-office stars as Priscilla Dean, Lon Chaney, Dorothy Phillips, with such brilliant support as Rudolph Valentino, Margaret Mann, Wheeler Oakman and a score of other big popular personalities.

I DON'T have to tell you that each one of these pictures has been and is to-day a certain crowd-getter and as positive and sure a profit-winner as anything can be on this little old earth.

EACH one of these Universal-Jewels is a success-proven production. Each one has cleaned up everywhere in big cities and small towns. These three great productions have been "the talk of the town" wherever they have played.

EVERY one of the pictures in this BIG THREE OFFER is a one hundred per cent. box-office attraction. Here's the clean-up chance of a lifetime. Here are three great productions that in all probability your folks have never seen. To them these pictures are BRAND NEW! With them these marvelous productions will make the same tremendous hit that they have made in thousands of other cities.

TO you these productions will bring the same heaping measure of profits and success that they have brought to thousands of other exhibitors.

IN addition, remember that each of these Universal-Jewels in this special BIG THREE OFFER has had the untold benefit of newspaper, poster and mouth-to-mouth advertisement worth millions of dollars. The names of these pictures and their great popularity are known in every town and hamlet—wherever pictures are shown.

ALL these things you have as a sure, cash, box-office asset before you even show any of them.

THIS is no time for fooling around with untried pictures from unknown producers who ask big money for them. Stick to standard goods. Book pictures from producers that mean something with your audiences and at your box-office.

LINE up with this BIG THREE OFFER—the biggest, sure-fire money-making proposition that has ever been put up to you. Don't pass it up. It's one of those sure things that come once in a lifetime. It's your big opportunity to clean up —RIGHT NOW.

"Had To Call For Help From The Fire Department."

Alfred Gottesman, manager of the Strand, Shenandoah, Pa., writes: "I just finished a three-day engagement of 'Once To Every Woman' to the biggest business in the history of my theatre. The crowds were so great that the lobby, which has a standing room capacity of 500, was jammed and packed all the way to the street fifteen minutes after starting the first show, and it was necessary for me to call for help from the Fire Department in order to live up to local regulations."

"Greatest Hit In Twelve Years. Smashed All Records."

Harry Redmon, manager of the Majestic Theatre, East St. Louis, writes: "It is most gratifying to let you know that 'Once To Every Woman' registered the greatest hit of any picture that I ever played in my twelve years' showmanship, smashing all former box-office receipts. It is a rare achievement to do this, for I am not reluctant in stating that we have played the biggest productions. 'Once To Every Woman' deserves the highest recommendation."

"Cleanest Picture Ever Presented— Broke All Records."

"Our patrons considered 'Once To Every Woman' the cleanest picture ever presented in Easton and the best since 'The Birth of a Nation'," writes C. W. Buss, manager of the Strand Theatre, Easton, Pa. "Our business with the picture was the biggest business this theatre ever did. POSITIVELY BROKE ALL RECORDS. Started on Monday at a good clip. On Saturday we couldn't take care of them at any hour after 2 P. M. An extra show at night was necessary to accommodate those who could not be driven away."

"Not A Dry Eye In The House. Give Us More Like It."

"We played your Universal-Jewel feature, 'Once To Every Woman,' and it lived up to every promise you made for it and more," writes Mrs. A. H. Erickson, of the Regent Theatre, Cedar Falls, Ia. "We used the singer as you suggested and we believe there was not a dry eye in the house during the singing of 'Ben Bolt.' DID WHAT NO OTHER PICTURE HAS DONE

"ALLOW me to be frank with you and tell you just what I think of 'Reputation.' This picture did for me what no other picture has done this year, that is, hold-out crowds at every performance of the four-day engagement. The last day, to my surprise, was equally as big as the opening day. Personally I can say to you that 'Reputation' is some picture."
Henry Redmon, Majestic Theatre, East St. Louis, Ill.

CAN'T HELP BUT WIN FOR ANY EXHIBITOR

"PUT me down as one of your strongest boosters for 'Reputation.' Lavish full-page tie-ups in the local dailies and other effective exploitation aided me in attracting tremendous crowds to 'Reputation.' The unexcelled acting of Priscilla Dean can't help but win for any exhibitor. Whenever you get ready to release another Priscilla Dean picture, you can count on me for an early run."
J. B. Whitney, Avon Theatre, Decatur, Ill.

DRIVING RAIN COULD NOT HOLD BACK CROWDS

"EVEN a driving rain that came down in torrents could not hold back the crowds on the opening night and they remained on the sidewalk and packed the lobby after the house was filled. You certainly have a tremendous winner in this picture. I sincerely believe that any exhibitor showing 'Reputation' will do equally as well as I did with it."
Thos. A. Rigler, Park Theatre, Hannibal, Mo.

ONE OF THE BEST

"'REPUTATION,' according to our patrons and our own opinion, is one of the best dramatic productions we have played this season. Miss Dean's acting is exceptional, in fact is so good that at times you forget that she is playing dual roles."
A. M. Silverson, Allen Theatre, Winnipeg, Canada.

CROWDS LINED UP THREE AND FOUR DEEP

"THE premier of 'Reputation' tonight established a new record for attendance. Despite the strongest opposition of many months the crowds lined up a block long and three and four deep from the opening show until 10 o'clock. Patrons pronounced this a real masterpiece. I think it is the greatest box-office attraction of the season without any question."

"Conflict" Has New York Premier

"CONFLICT," Priscilla Dean's new Universal-Jewel production, had its premier presentation last Sunday night in the Central Theatre, Broadway and Forty-seventh street, and was acclaimed as one of the most thrilling and forceful pictures of the year.

Accompanied by a musical setting which emphasized the tenseness of its mystery phases and which galloped with the suspense of its heralded log-jam rescue scenes, the picture made an impression upon its audience far more striking than anything ever before done by Miss Dean.

The biggest crowd which has stormed the Central Theatre since it was turned into a moving picture house, was on hand Sunday night many minutes before the doors were open. Some had been in line more than an hour. The house was sold out long before the box-office line had dwindled.

No elaborate prologue had been arranged for the picture. It had been determined that no prologue could do justice to the intensity of the theme or the thrill of its climax. Storm music, with lightning effects, was the only prelude to the opening scenes of the big north woods feature.

It is expected that "Conflict" will be held in the Central Theatre for several weeks. Only the desire to release it to Universal exhibitors in the New York territory keeps the film company from letting it run in the Central indefinitely. Its release date has been advanced by several weeks due to the imminence of the rail strike. The Universal sales department promised its exhibitor patrons throughout the country that "Conflict" would be available to them, by truck, by aeroplane or otherwise, regardless of the railroad situation.

"Conflict" was highly praised by New York newspaper critics, who likened it to "Way Down East," announced that the log jam scene in the Priscilla Dean feature has as much if not more thrill power than any scene ever shown on the screen.

Among the comments made upon the picture by Miss Harriette Underhill, reviewer for "The New York Tribune," she said: "As we watched these river scenes, we were constantly reminded of 'Way Down East,' only, D. W. Griffith did his picture in the winter and Carl Laemmle did his in the summer. Instead of ice floating down the river there are logs and if you don't believe that a hero floating towards the falls on a raft of logs can be quite as spell-binding as a heroine on a cake of ice—go and see 'Conflict.' As a matter of fact, there is not a dull moment in the whole picture."

Speaking of the weirdness of many phases of the picture, so gripping that it reminds one of Poe's strange stories, Miss Underhill said: "It is all terribly grewsome, but we, who love being horrified, enjoyed every minute of it."

"Mystery, drama, adventure and one of the most thrilling passages ever seen on the screen, all are found in 'Conflict,' the new Priscilla Dean picture which opened at the Central Theatre yesterday," said the New York Evening Mail reviewer.

"The scene in which she rescues her lover from death in a raging torrent on the brink of a steep waterfall is a marvel. The famous ice scene in 'Way Down East' scarcely equals it for sheer thrill. One can readily believe that Miss Dean actually took her life in her hands in its screening, as she drifted down stream, running over log-jams, and finally riding a pair of logs until she was plunged into the waters.

"The entire episode is filmed remarkably well, with the suspense maintained through successive scenes of stirring thrill to the final rescue.

The reviewer for the New York Evening Telegram, after seeing "Conflict," voiced the opinion that no old-fashioned melodrama could equal this film.

"'Conflict'," he said, "crowds into one picture enough thrills to last through an entire serial. It has mystery, excitement ad sentiment in big, unadulterated doses. No old-fashioned melodrama could equal this film.

"That eighteen cameras were required to register the varying aspects of this scene and that more than a thousand persons appeared in the big scene are enough to indicate how thrilling the big picture is.

"Miss Priscilla Dean," declares the Telegram reviewer, "is the heroine about whom all the excitement centers. She looks like Ethel Barrymore and acts with the feverish power of Nazimova, and she has more strong men in her support than usually falls to the lot of a movie queen. The rugged company in boots and rough shirts includes Herbert Rawlinson, Edward Connelly, Martha Mattox, Milton Brown, Bill Gillis, Olah Norman and Knute Erickson," Robert G. Welsh, the Telegram's editor, continues.

"There are other musical and screen offerings to make the program as varied as those of other Broadway houses. But the main thrills are to be found in 'Conflict,' and they come fast and furious and lift the most hardened movie fan out of his seat in the excitement."

Best Equipped Theatre in Middle West Opens With Browning Universal-Jewel

New Strand, Springfield, Ill., Effectively Exploits "No Woman Knows"—Novel Construction of Playhouse Presents Vast Possibilities To Exhibitors — $15,000 Organ Installed.

GUS and Louis Kerasotes, veteran exhibitors of Springfield, Ill., recently threw open the doors of one of the best equipped theatres in the Middle West. It is the New Strand Theatre, at Sixth and Washington streets, Springfield, constructed in and around the shell of First National Bank building, on one of the most prominent sites in that city.

The success of the new theatre and its opeing programme was instantaneous, the house being filled to capacity during the first week. "No Woman Knows," the Universal-Jewel production, made by Tod Browning from Edna Ferber's novel, "Fanny Herself," was the feature for the week.

The opening of the New Strand was made a ceremony of considerable importance in film circles. A number of well-known film men went to Springfield from St. Louis and Chicago especially for the occasion. Among them were Barney Rosenthal, St. Louis manager for Universal; George McKean, manager for Fox; Cecil Mayberry, Chicago manager for Goldwyn; John Karzin, St. Louis theatre chain owner, and Sam Hankin, of the Fine Arts Film Company.

The construction of the New Strand is considered an architectural marvel because of the adroitness by which the old bank building was entirely remade both inside and out to fit the necessities of a motion picture theatre.

In remodeling the old bank building, little was left of the former structure except the outside walls. A skeleton steel frame supporting steel girders was put up inside of the old building, on new foundations. The old walls were anchored to this, much after the manner of modern steel building structure. The entire inner floors and partitions then were removed, so the auditorium could be formed.

The outside appearance of the building was done over, the front being done in polychrome terra cotta, and the entrance and foyer lined with white marble. The foyer is decorated in ivory and gold. The interior of the theatre is done in old gold, gold leaf, ivory and polychrome.

A $15,000 pipe organ, a typhoon ventilating system, and up-to-date lobbies and rest rooms also are included in the modern equipment of the new Kerasotes house. The New Strand is considered one of the best theatres in Springfield. It seats 800.

The surest way to arouse the interest of a person is to appeal to his or her vanity. There is no vanity more general than the feeling that one can write stories or photoplays or even criticisms. This great American weakness was used to considerable advantage by the Kerasotes Brothers. The New Strand management arranged a tie-up with the Springfield Journal, as a result of which the Journal called for individual 100 word criticisms on the picture.

This prompted many persons to go to the opening, so they could write their criticisms. The mail was filled with amateur criticisms the next day. To those two patrons who sent in the best reviews, the theatre management gave season passes to the New Strand. A score of others received copies of the novel "Fanny Herself." Some of the best reviews were printed in the Journal.

In a letter to the St. Louis office of the film company, written at the completion of his second day's run, Gus Kerasotes wrote as follows:

"'No Woman Knows,' your big picture, created motion picture history in this city. I am glad to tell you, too, that I could not have picked a greater attraction than 'No Woman Knows' to open my new theatre with. The first two days of the week's engagement resulted in total receipts exceeding by several hundreds of dollars anything I ever did with a week's run on any other picture in other houses. Congratulations to Universal for producing such a virile and inspiring picture."

'Breezy' Eason Dead, Killed by Automobile

Dies in Arms of Harry Carey---Film Colony Stricken by Sudden Tragedy

BY telegraph from Universal City, Cal., the officials of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company have been informed of the death, late last night (Monday), of its youngest star, Breezy Eason. Little Breezy, who, though only eight years old, was one of the best known and best loved child players in pictures, was struck by an automobile in front of his home, 6200 Fountain Avenue, Hollywood. The entire picture colony of Los Angeles is saddened by the tragedy, and Universal City will be closed on Thursday when the funeral will take place. Breezy was an especial friend of Harry Carey. When Carey learned of the accident he was forty miles away filming a scene for Gregory Jackson's story, "Man to Man." He hurried to the bedside and Little Breezy died in his arms.

Breezy Eason came of a theatrical family. His father, Reaves Eason, is a Universal director, and his mother, also a Universal player, used the odd stage name of Jimsey Maye. Breezy had been starred already in two feature productions, "Two Kinds of Love" and "The Big Adventure."

His latest engagement was in support of Harry Carey in "The Fox," a Jewel picture which has not as yet been released.

BRING ON SOME MORE; MY WORRIES WILL BE OVER

Chicago Heights, Ill.
Gentlemen:

Wednesday, Oct. 12, I had my first day's run of "No Woman Knows," with competition at other houses showing: Illinois Theatre, Mary Pickford, "Behind Open Doors," 1,000 seats; Lincoln Dixie Theatre, seating 2,000, playing "The Affairs of Anatol," with added features of a singing and a dancing contest.

In my house with 800 seats I did a capacity business. I received more favorable comment on this than anything I have ever run in my theatre.

My audiences were made up of Gentiles, perhaps 75 Jewish people attended during the day.

I want to extend my thanks and express the appreciation I sincerely feel for the co-operation I had from your exchange in putting the advertising campaign over.

Bring on some more like "No Woman Knows" and my worries will be over. It's great.

Cordially yours,

Mayville, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

I enclose 77 cents to pay the advance P. P. S. D. on film shown yesterday. The answers from exhibitors having shown "Once To Every Woman" probably has become stale to you (?), but I must get it off my system that as a whole it was the most satisfactory entertainment ever in this place (and we have had some good ones). I had a splendid sweet-voiced woman singer who rendered four numbers at the right time, which brought tears even from people naturally considered cold and lacking sentiment, and the people waited after the show to tell us how good it was, as they had never done before.

Please book "Outside the Law" to show here Saturday, November 19, and a Joe Martin Comedy. Please mail me press book at once on "Outside the Law."

Thanking you very much, I am,

Springfield, Ill.
Gentlemen:

"No Woman Knows," your big picture, created motion picture history in this city. I am glad to tell you too, that I could not have picked a greater attraction than "No Woman Knows" to open my new theatre with. That's going some, you'll agree. After this commentary it is in order that I extend congratulations to the Universal for producing such a virile, inspiring picture as "No Woman Knows."

Wishing you the great success you deserve with "No Woman Knows," I am,

Hillyard Liberty Theatre Opens with "Reputation"

O. W. NEWTON, movie impressario of the "railroad city," recently opened a new $75,000 motion picture theatre, in Hillyard, Washington, a thriving community adjacent to Spokane. For his opening bill, Mr. Newton ran "Reputation," which the Spokane Press alluded to as "Priscilla Dean's greatest picture," and Brownie the Century Wonder Dog, in "Society Dogs." Both pictures were supplied through Manager A. H. McMillan of the Spokane Universal Film Exchanges, Inc.

Mr. Newton had a banner attendance for the opening and was assured by many of his patrons that "Reputation" was one of the greatest film triumphs it had ever been their privilege to witness. The Hillyard Liberty Theatre could count on their steady patronage, they said, if Mr. Newton continued to furnish them with such attractive screen-fare.

The policy of the Hillyard Liberty Theatre will be to present nothing but the highest class of films with occasional changes of program weekly. Mr. Newton's long and successful career as an exhibitor has taught him the advantage of obtaining his patrons' good will at the start and retaining it by presenting nothing but the best and cleanest programs. It is to co-operate with right-thinking exhibitors—and the great majority of theatre-owners are conscientiously trying to present clean, wholesome screen-fare to their patrons—that Universal is producing worth-while, censor-proof, unobjectionable motion pictures today.

In tying-up with Universal, Mr. Newton is one with a vast number of exhibitors who realize that the product of Universal City is designed to help the theatre owner make money and gain the respect and good-will of his patrons.

Here's what the Trade Press said of "No Woman Knows"

Motion Picture World.—Universal has added a positive success to its Jewel release program. Colloquially speaking, "No Woman Knows" is sure-fire sob stuff.

Exhibitor's Trade Review.—It grips and tugs at the heart strings, and is presented in such a way as to be one of the most interesting and entertaining photoplays of the season.

Wid's.—Characterization development marks Browning's greatest special.

Screen Stunt Test Wins For "Reputation"

James Theatre, Columbus, O., Devises Novel Exploitation For Dean-Jewel—More Than Five Thousand Spectators Witness Unique Tie-up.

COLUMBUS, O., was ripe for a motion picture taking stunt when Joe Mayer, Universal exploiter, went there recently to exploit the showing of "Reputation" in the James Theatre. Keeping up his splendid record of consistent successes in the art of patron-pulling the stune expert re-demonstrated conclusively that a big city will fall for this method of exploitation just as readily as a smaller community will.

By advertising, heralds and co-operative publicity with the local newspapers, Joe soon had the pretty and near-pretty girls of Columbus all looking forward to screen tests. Permission was first obtained to make the tests in Franklin Park, one of the City's beauty spots, on the Sunday preceding the showing of "Reputation."

Co-operating with J. Reel Neth, manager of the James Theatre, Mayer arranged a short continuity built around a progressive fashion show. Models were supplied by a local department store. After pictures of the fashion parade had been taken, intimate close-ups of volunteer screen subjects were taken.

Effective "Reputation" Display On New Grand Central Theatre, Kansas City, Mo.

More than 5000 spectators crowded around the cameraman. The screen tests taken were shown at the James Theatre during the run of "Reputation" and then sent to Universal City to be viewed by the casting director. It is understood that several of the girls filmed during the tests promise excellent screen material.

A double-page truck tie-up advertisement also was used in two Columbus newspapers, built around the word REPUTATION. The tie-up was very effective and the double-page spread made a smashing ad for the picture, the title of which was plastered across the two pages in two-inch letters.

Unique Tie-up Puts Over Dean-Jewel in "Jax"

THE management of the Arcade Theatre in Jacksonville, Fla., took advantage of the local interest in moving pictures production and the possibility that Jacksonville may become a film production center, in exploiting "Reputation" the Priscilla Dean feature. Following a suggestion from the Universal press sheet on the feature, the theatre arranged to take moving pictures of a number of women. The stunt was staged in co-operation with Cohen Brothers, a local department store, and the pictures were taken at the entrance of that store.

The exhibitors had no trouble finding a man with a motion picture camera, and great interest was aroused in the stunt by announcing it as a method proving that Jacksonville women dress just as stylishly as the women of more metropolitan cities.

The stunt attracted much newspaper publicity. For two hours on successive days the cameramen cranked as various Jacksonville women entered or left the big store. Many of them did not know their pictures were being taken.

The resulting film was shown as an added feature of the Arcade's bill, during the run of "Reputation" and caused great comment. The theatre management voiced the opinion that hundreds of persons came to the theatre as a direct result of the local pictures. The stunt cost very little and proved a sure patron-puller.

Edna Ferber Universal Jewel Print Arrived In Detroit 12 Noon; Was Projected and En Route To Toledo By 1.45 P. M., and Seized By Exhibitors Before 4.00 o'Clock—Friedman and Mayer Receive Signed Contracts In Record Time

AN exhibitor writing to Universal said: "'No Woman Knows' was so good it seemed a waste of time and money to employ salesmen to put it over." Although a good picture can virtually sell itself, Universal has a sales force, second to none, which has achieved a record for quick action in selling film to an exhibitor.

The speed attained by the Detroit Universal Film Exchange in selling "No Woman Knows," recently, is so noteworthy as to bear telling. Here's the complete story:

The prints for "No Woman Knows" arrived in Detroit on Friday at 12 o'clock noon. Josept Friedman, Exchange Manager, and J. H. Mayer, Universal Exploitation Expert, called off a luncheon engagement and dashed into the projection room. They munched some sandwiches while the operator projected the seven reels of the Edna Ferber story. As the last foot of film was projected, Friedman and Mayer snatched the containers and jumped into a taxi in a mad dash to get to railroad station in time to catch the Toledo train.

At 1.45 P. M. they were on an express racing to Toledo to screen it for the first run accounts in that territory. Wiring ahead, they were able to reserve a projection room and pull a select audience of hand-picked exhibitors.

At 4.00 P. M., Friedman was blotting the ink on "Doc" Horater's signature to a contract. He also had play dates for the following week in the leading theatres in adjacent territory. All this was accomplished in the short space of four hours.

"I'm booking this picture," said one exhibitor, praising Friedman's enprise, "not only because it is without exception the outstanding release of its kind that I have ever seen, but also because I know that the company which you represent does more to help us exhibitors after you've sold us a single feature than most of the other companies do in an entire season. Universal service is service."

Lyric Theatre, Paterson, Books Browning-Jewel

GEORGE BAER, manager of the Lyric Theatre, Paterson, N. J., is a "tough bird to sell to," according to film salesmen. Which, in polite parlance, means Mr. Baer knows a good picture when he sees one and won't take anything but the best.

This probably accounts for the fact that Mr. Baer was one of the first exhibitors in New Jersey to immediately recognize the value of presenting to his patrons such a masterpiece as "No Woman Knows," the Tod Browning Universal-Jewel adaptation of the Edna Ferber story, "Fanny Herself."

Known as one of the best showmen in New Jersey, Manager Baer always takes advantage of every possible publicity and exploitation angle in presenting a film. The phenomenal possibilities, as well as the unusual merit of the picture itself, which he knew existed for selling "No Woman Knows" to his patrons, have all been exploited to the fullest degree.

Mr. Baer is but one of a vast number of wide-awake exhibitors who realize that Universal-Jewels are almost made-to-order for the theatre owner. He is appreciative of the assistance given in press-sheets; he is cognizant of the drawing-power in Universal advertising copy and "paper," and he realizes that Universal is concerned with the exhibitor's welfare to as great a degree as it is in its own. Universal service means more to the exhibitor than does that of any other company, it is said by many theatre owners fortunate enough to tie-up with Universal products.

"Once to Every Woman," with Dorothy Phillips.—And "once to every showman." Those "who came to scoff remained to pray." One of the most satisfactory plays for small towns ever produced. This gave us the only paying house in twenty days. We used the singer at opening and closing of play. The playing of violin and piano brought forth the tears and it was the only time in my life that I appreciated the playing of "Home, Sweet Home" and "Ben Bolt." We ran one long banner across the street, above the traffic, with the title of the play in black letters. This, with newspaper exploitation and rather heavy billing, gave us a good house. Then came the praise and a good second follow-up night. Thanks to the exhibitor who originated the singer idea. I believe it was Brother Ed. L. We see so much printed by the producers regarding the service they render the exhibitor in helping him to sell his big picture to the public, but little of this service do we find when we go to the various producers' exchanges to inquire about it.

At last I have found one, namely, Universal, who back up the promises that they make. Mr. Hill, publicity manager at the Chicago Universal Exchange, has helped me to get in personal touch with each one of my 1,200 patrons who are on my mailing list, to tell them of the merits of the picture "Reputation," that I booked for two days.

I appreciate this kind of help and I want to thank Mr. Hill and the Universal Exchange for their aid in helping me to sell "Reputation" to my patrons.

Yours very truly,

Captures Pirate Vessel Manned by 'Red' Crew

"BOB of the U. S. N.," No. 2

"The Phantom Terror"

BOB LAWRENCE longs to go to sea. His father, against the idea, attributes the boy's restlessness to his infatuation for Blanche Small, a coquette.

One evening while calling on Blanche, Bob finds her in the company of Arthur Trevelyn, a radical Red, who has come to look for ten men to man his pirate ship, "The Phantom Terror."

The next day when Trevelyn spreads dissension among the ship yard workers he gets men for his crew. Guns are shoved in their faces, they are shanghaied and carried on board "The Phantom Terror."

We next hear of Bob in the Navy. He is on a submarine ordered to capture the pirate ship. They spot her at night, fire a shot, but do not cripple her. "The Phantom Terror" escapes. To cut her off the captain of the submarine dives to take a short cut.

On the bottom the air tank fails to work. The air supply for oxygen gets low. Bob volunteers to be shot through the conning tower and swim ashore and notify the submarine base.

When he comes to the surface he finds the pirate ship a few yards away. He pulls himself aboard, goes to her wireless, grabs the operator's gun and forces him to radio the submarine base.

Trevelyn, dressed in a Red admiral's uniform, and his men rush to the radio room, too late, for Bob's message has been received.

Bob covers them and holds them at bay. A division of submarines is sent to capture the pirate ship.

Bob is overpowered and thrown overboard. The subs capture the pirate ship. The submerged submarine manages to fix her tanks and rise to the surface. Bob is congratulated for his bravery and given thirty days leave on shore.

Blanche seeks to win him. Bob, however, realizes he loves Elinor Martin and tells her so. She accepts him. A telegram arrives informing him he has been promoted for distinguished service to the rank of Chief Petty Officer.

Hanging on Abyss Brink, 2 Plunge to Death Below

"Winners of the West," No. 9

"The Chasm of Peril"

BLAIR attempts to strike Art down with a dirk. Standish, disarming Blair, gives him a whipping—and returns to Sante Fe.

Betty Edwards has fallen into a bear pit. As she gets out she sees Ryan, Dan Sharkey's lieutenant, approaching her.

The following morning as the wagon train resumes its journey Standish halts the train, and informs everyone that Betty is missing. Louis Blair tells Standish he is responsible for her absence. Searching parties are sent out. Claire Mitchell thinks Betty's absence is certain proof that Ryan whom she sent to take the map from Betty, has it now.

By a ruse, Sharkey makes Standish prisoner.

Betty Edwards rides in. She explains that Ryan tried to get the map from her and that she hid it in the bear pit.

Blair induces her to go with him and recover it. She leaves with Blair. Sharkey follows. Standish is released by the Mysterious Spaniard, and he too dashes toward the bear pit. Sharkey arrives before Standish and snatches the map from Blair.

Betty in turn takes it from him and rides away. Sharkey follows her. Betty rides up a mountain. At the top she faces a chasm. Sharkey forces her to the edge and Betty has to give up the map. The ground slides from under her. She plunges down into the abyss. Her dress catches on the branch of a tree. Arthur Standish hurries to her rescue.

Meantime Sharkey is confronted by the Mysterious Spaniard. Sharkey knocks the Spaniard over the cliff. Just as the rotten roots of the tree upon which Betty is suspended in mid air break, both she and Standish plunge down to the bottomless pit below.

RAFT SWEEPS OVER FALLS; MOVIE STAR CHEATS DEATH

WHEN it comes to fighting, Herbert Rawlinson is no slouch, but the screen player has foresworn any more encounters similar to his experience in "Conflict," Priscilla Dean's new Universal-Jewel, coming to the .... Theatre next ....

"I don't mind fighting," said Rawlinson, "in fact I rather like it, but I do object to giving my only life for the sake of art."

"It's all right floating down a swirling river, away up in the Canadian North woods, on a little log raft; I don't object to fighting with Hector Sarno while being bumped from rock to rock on the frail boards, but I think it is a bit too exciting when the wire which holds the raft to the camera boat snaps, leaving us whirling downstream towards a waterfall two hundred feet in height.

"If it had not been for the timely assistance of Priscilla Dean, who managed to throw us a saving rope, I am certain that they might still have been dragging the river below the falls for the bodies of two actors.

"All I have to add is that it is plenty thrilling to see the rescue on the screen, but the actual experience had the film thrills beaten a mile. Here's to Priscilla Dean."

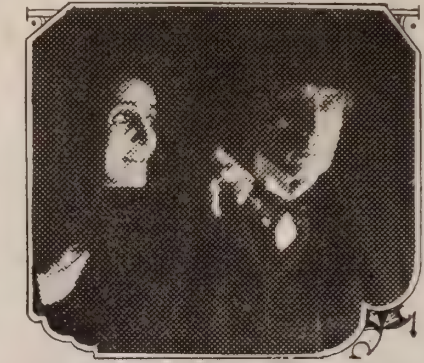
BLAST DAM, START LOG RUSH FOR THRILL IN PHOTODRAMA

A RUSHING, roaring sweep of resistless waters released from bondage—a mighty torrent of timber crushing, grinding all before it—logs bumping, splintering in the snarling waters—sweeping all before its relentless path.

The most gripping, soul-searing moment ever filmed. Terrific in its intensity, the mighty log jam, the blowing up of the dam, and the swishing torrent of felled forest is the mightiest spectacle of the camera's art.

In all its splendor, in all its ruthless glory, "Conflict," Priscilla Dean's wonderful new Universal-Jewel, coming to the .... Theatre next ...., vividly records the actual dynamiting of a huge dam, and the breaking loose of hundreds of thousands of the prisoned logs.



Scene from "CONFLICT" UNIVERSAL JEWEL PICTURE starring PRISCILLA DEAN

"Conflict," the sensational "Red Book" serial by Clarence Budington Kelland, is a mystery-drama with its locale, the rugged mountain country of the Canadian North woods.

"Conflict" is the story of a fight—the battle of two indomitable wills—the struggle for mastery of the logging industry.

The beauty of the photography, of the magnificent scenery of the North Woods country is unsurpassed.

Thousands upon thousands of huge logs whirling through the dynamited dam were caught by the six cameramen, who risked their lives to attain this remarkable film.

An entire logging camp, running at full blast, with all its men, was requisitioned by Stuart Paton in the direction of this marvelous picture.

PRISCILLA DEAN in "CONFLICT" A UNIVERSAL JEWEL

"THE EYES HAVE IT," SAYS CONNELLY; AND PROVES IT

THE recent investigation of an eminent scientist showing that the human eye actually possesses power and sends out light radiations is born out by Edward Connelly's clever acting in Priscilla Dean's extraordinary Universal-Jewel feature, "Conflict," which comes to the .... Theatre next ....

Connelly, a distinguished veteran of the stage and screen, whose work in "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" is well remembered, gives to the unusual character all the fire and malignant strength that Kelland imagined into John Remalie.

Suppression of gesture is the chief method by which Ramilie conveys to the audience the terrific battle which is going on inside of him.

It is almost uncanny—the suggestion of force which Kelland conveys by his eyes.

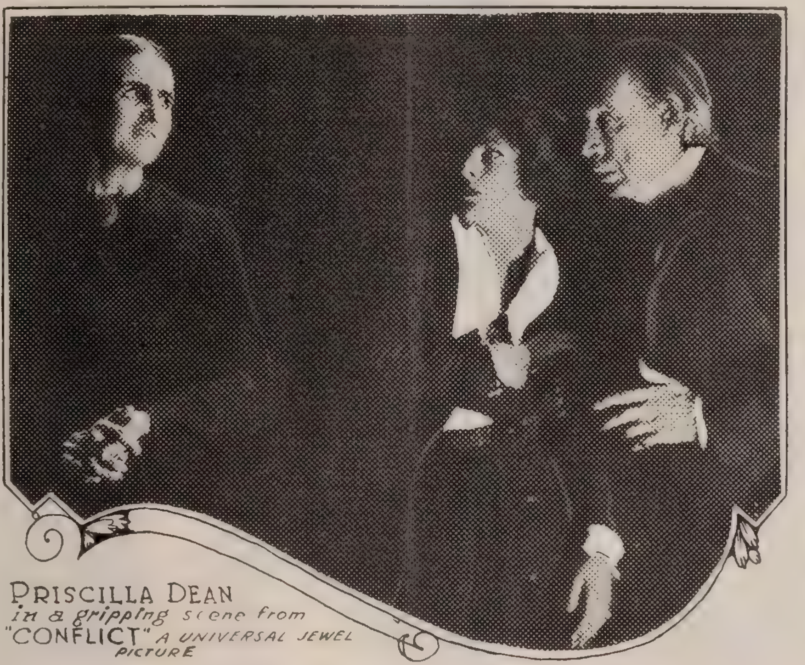
in "Conflict" Tremendous Universal-Jewel

JOHN Remalie, a religious young man, gifted in prayer and given to a piety that smacked of hypocrisy, stayed in the Northwoods while his brother Henry went to the city to live.

John never married. Once he had planned to marry and had built a magnificent stone castle to house his bride. Suddenly, without warning or reason, he broke off his engagement and altered the appearance of the house. He made it a grim, prison-like structure and moved in with a Miss Labo, daughter of a camp cook, as his housekeeper. She was a silent woman, as grim and forbidding as his house, and for twenty-seven years she had said no unnecessary word to him.

In the city Henry had married, and of the union there came a beautiful girl, Dorcas, who grew to eighteen in luxury, the tempestuous blood of the forest coursing unseen in her veins under a veneer of education and culture.



PRISCILLA DEAN in a gripping scene from "CONFLICT" A UNIVERSAL JEWEL PICTURE

When the will of Henry Remalie was read it provided that his daughter should become the ward of his brother and stay within his house until she had become of age.

Miss Labo met her at the door, sullenly. An hour later John Remalie arrived. They sat down to a frugal meal, unctiously eaten with a pall of hypocritical piety hanging over the forbidding room like a shroud. Dorcas was miserably unhappy and rebellious.

In a few days, Dorcas, with feminine instinct, senses that something is wrong.

Into the town comes Jevons, a splendid figure of a young man, but a person of mystery. No one knows why he is there and every one likes him for his cheerful manner and his open frankness in everything except himself.

Particularly interested in Jevons is Sloan, Remalie's camp foreman, who wants Dorcas. On a pretense he picks a fight with Jevons and is thrashed for his trouble. Accidentally Dorcas meets Jevons, and while despising lumberjacks, is surprised at his apparent education.

The girl overhears a conversation, the first in twenty seven years, between Miss Labo and Remalie, in which the housekeeper refers to a son which she bore him years before. Dorcas thinks it is Jevons and later repulses him.

Remalie leaves for Boston, and the housekeeper, to get his fortune for her son as the only heir, unsuccessfully tries to poison Dorcas. Dorcas leaves the grim house and goes to live with the three Ginger brothers, who swear to protect her from all harm.

From them she learns that Jevons is not an illegitimate child and pledges her aid to him.

Remalie returns, discovers the girl is missing, and thinks the housekeeper has killed her and is silent.

Suddenly he learns the girl is alive and leads a posse to capture her.

Believing that Jevons has been murdered, the girl takes command of his crew and puts through the log-drive as she had promised him that she would do should death overtake him.

Dorcas' gang is attacked by the woodsmen in Remalie's outfit. To forestall them she blows up the dam. Millions of tons of huge logs crash through the valley, sweeping all before them. Dorcas is told of Jevon's danger—he is bound in a cabin directly in the path of the onrushing logs. After a death-defying race with the foaming avalanche she reaches Jevons and releases him as the water's fury wrecks the cabin. Jevons and Dorcas are carried down the river beneath the grinding logs towards a huge waterfall. Nearer and nearer they come to its mighty brink. By a herculean effort Dorcas manages to get the injured Jevons to the bank of the river as he is about to go over the falls. Remalie marries his housekeeper and Dorcas weds Jevons.

Regarding Priscilla Dean, Star of "Conflict"

....Priscilla Dean, the superb young star of "Conflict," which comes to the .... Theatre on ...., finds her recreation in the daring pastime of stunt flying.

"It's so exhilarating up there in the air that when I get back to mother earth I feel fit for any 'Conflict' in the world,'" explained Miss Dean, "and it was flying that really kept me fit during the making of this picture."

Priscilla Dean is a flying circus all by herself.

The Los Angeles Times recently asked the famous star if she would fly over Southern California in one of the Universal planes to distribute copies of the paper and collect news matter from the various country correspondents.

Miss Dean is a natural flier and loves the clouds. She appeared on the Universal City flying field in her leather tunic and helmet ready for the flight. The officer commanding the Universal air squadron ordered a mechanic to turn over the propeller. To his amazement the star waved away the mechanic and whirled the blade herself. The plane is of the two-control variety and once the proper altitude had been gained Miss Dean took the "stick" and gave the veteran pilot the thrill of his air experience. She zoomed and side-slipped, soared and looped and astonished observers by mastery of control.

Miss Dean was gone all day and stopped at many Southern California towns, making a creditable landing at each place. When she returned she was still in the flying mood and took Miss Grace Kingsley, dramatic critic of the Los Angeles Times, for a short flight.

Priscilla Dean, Starring In "Conflict."

Miss Dean is a New Yorker by birth but now claims Hollywood, the famous California colony, as her home.

"You see I've spent most of my life on the stage traveling around from one town to another and living in trunks and suitcases ever since I was a small kiddie. When the movies called to me I answered, and then when I learned that brief location trips were the only moves I had to make, I just about shouted for joy at the prospectst of being 'put' for once in my life.

"That is why Hollywood means so much to me. It's the first place that I've even been able to truthfully call home and I don't think the stage could possibly lure me back from pictures for this reason," said the star.

Miss Dean, who is recognized as the foremost dramatic star of the screen, is five feet four inches tall and has a pair of the most lustrous brown eyes any camera has ever registered.
